Joseph Erwin (R.), who acted as battery commander for the day in place of CPT Terry L. Burns, the be the first participants in a program designed to get enlisted men familiar with the operation of the battery. Erwin is the Second Chief (Gun Chief) of the firing battery. The program was praised by

Erwin and Davis, both of whom were ready to go back to their regular jobs at the end of the day. (Photos by SP4 Larry Maloney)

C/94 Duo Learns Command Headaches Firsthand

by SP4 Larry Maloney

How many of you believe that your commanding officer and your first sergeant do more than just sit around the office all day reading newspapers, drinking coffee and thinking up incredible things for you to do?

In C Battery, 94th Artillery, there are at least two enlisted men who know better. Sergeants Joseph Erwin and James L. Davis of the battery were given the opportunity to take over the jobs of the commanding officer and the first sergeant, respectively.

For one day, the two NCO's were given all of the authority, up to battalion level and all of the headaches of two of the top positions in the battery.

The idea is not new. It has been tried before and has worked. In this case, no one is really sure who brought up the idea.

"We all agreed to it," said Captain Terry L. Burns, battery commander. "We thought it would be a good way of promoting better understanding between all of the levels of command within the battery. We decided to start with the junior NCOs and work on down through the ranks of enlisted men. We selected Sergeant Erwin first because he was laughing the hardest."

No Stranger

Erwin, who has been with C Battery for 11 months, is the Second Chief (Gun Chief) of the firing battery. He is no stranger to responsibility. C Battery has been cited several times for their record-breaking speed in setting up and firing under emergency conditions.

"You cannot really compare the two jobs," said Erwin. "This one (battery commander) has a lot more paperwork. Half a day is not much experience, but right now, I like my regular job better."

Erwin's morning as the battery's CO began with the battalion staff meeting.

"I found out what they discuss at all those meetings," Erwin said with a sort of smile. "A lot of different points were brought up. I learned quite a bit. Already there was more work than I had thought."

Next came the briefing of the acting first sergeant as to what went on at the staff meeting. Then came all of the people with all of their problems. The supply sergeant wanted an opinion as to what should be done concerning an equipment change, which items should be dropped and which not. The 'Chief Smoke' (Chief of the Firing Battery) came into the CO's office.

"He wanted me to solve a tactical problem," said Erwin.

"He solved it!" Burns, sitting not so inconspicuously in a far corner of his office, broke in.

Then came the reenlistment sergeant. He wanted to know how he could go about getting an extension for one of the men in the battery.

"I solved that," said Erwin, "by referring him to the right people." (Cont. on p. 5, col. 1)

B-ESB Tops Brigade To Win Sports Trophy

Company B, FSB, received the Commanding General's Trophy, symbolic of excellence in company-level sports, Monday in the Rotunda in Bldg. 1, Headquarters Berlin Brigade.

Brigadier General Raymond O. Miller, commanding general, Berlin Brigade, presented the trophy to Company B. It was accepted on behalf of Company B by Captain David Bodor and Colonel William Hamilton, during the 10 a.m. ceremony.

Company B totaled 1445 points in balloting for the coveted prize, including 1160 points for participation up to Oct. 7. By capturing second place in Berlin Brigade flag football, the honored company secured yet another 75 points enroute to their trophy.

The other two FSB companies, Headquarters and Service, and Company A, finished second and third behind Company B. Headquarters had a total of 1380 points and Company A, 1365. Headquarters was number one in Andrews League softball, and won the Berlin Brigade crown in September. They also were in the flag football playoffs, and came in second in Brigade basketball.

Company A finished unbeaten in Andrews League flag football, made the playoffs, and took second in Berlin Brigade softball in September.

Rounding out the top 10 were Company C, 3rd Battalion, 6th Infantry, 1095; Company B, 3rd Battalion, 6th Infantry, 1055; Headquarters and Headquarters Company, 2nd Battalion, 6th Infantry, 985; Headquarters and Headquarters Company, Special Troops, 985 (tie); Company B, 2nd Battalion, 6th Infantry, 945; Company C, 4th Battalion, 18th Infantry, 935; Company B, 4th Battalion, 18th Infantry, 885; and Company A, 4th Battalion, 18th Infantry, 795.

MG Davison To Visit Berlin

Major General Frederic H. Davison, USAREUR deputy chief of staff for personnel, will visit Berlin Dec. 7 and 8. He will be accompanied by Brigadier Generals S. H. Gritz, USAREUR adjutant general, and W. K. Wittwer, USAREUR provost marshal.

Davison's stay in Berlin includes a scheduled visit to McNair Barracks, where he is expected to review soldiers' billets and have lunch in one of the unit mess halls. The general will review the local dependent school system and visit various clubs as well as the education center at McNair.

Davison, the senior black officer in the U. S. Armed Forces, holds a Bachelor of Science degree (cum laude) which he received from Howard University, Washington, D. C., in 1938. In 1940 he received a Master of Science degree from the same institution. In addition, the general earned a second graduate degree, a Master of Arts in International Affairs from George Washington University, Washington, D. C.

The general has also attended the U. S. Army's Command and General Staff College and the Army War College at Carlisle Barracks, Penn.

Davison's military career dates to 1939, at which time he completed ROTC at Howard and was commissioned a second lieutenant in the infantry reserve. He saw action during World War II in North Africa and Southern Italy.

The general has since served in both command and staff positions with several units including Headquarters, Eighth U. S. Army, Korea; Headquarters, Second U. S. Army; and Headquarters, Department of the Army.

In addition, Davison commanded the 199th Light Infantry Brigade in the Republic of Vietnam.

Before assuming duties with USAREUR, the general was assigned Director of Enlisted Personnel, Office of Personnel Operations, Department of the Army.

Tempelhof Fetes Army Wife For Family Services Work

Mrs. Toshi Storer, wife of Sergeant Major Richard T. Storer, G-2 Division, has been chosen as Tempelhof's Family Services Volunteer of the Year — the organization's highest recognition — and will compete with winners from other European bases for the USAFE Family Services Volunteer of the Year award.

Mrs. Storer performed 443 hours of volunteer work with the Army Community Service (ACS) — accumulated over the years while accompanying her husband — before she began working with the Tempelhof Family Services in September 1970 and was cited two weeks ago for her completion of 750 volunteer hours.

Serving as chairman of the Family Services Tide-Over Committee, Mrs. Storer is also active in the recently-established Berlin ACS as assistant coordinator.

In addition to her contribution of 750 volunteer hours, Mrs. Storer was selected as Volunteer of the Quarter in March 1971 and received a certificate of sustained Superior Performance for the six-month period ending June 1971.

Mrs. Storer also participates in the NCO Wives' Club, the American Red Cross, the Protestant Women of the Chapel, the Berlin Community Chapel Alter Guild, the European Exchange System Council, the American Women's Club of Berlin, the Berlin Parent Teachers Association and the Booster Club.

Mrs. Storer was born in Japan and acquired her U. S. citizenship in 1955.

Speaking of her volunteer work, Mrs. Storer said, "I enjoy doing volunteer work because, most of all, I enjoy people."

Death & Pollution

Studies by the Public Health Service indicate that there is a direct correlation between air pollution and deaths caused by cancer of the respiratory system and gastrointestinal tract.

These studies also indicate that air pollution can cause intensification of existing diseases, particularly cardiac and respiratory diseases.

In 1948 in the small industrial town of Donora, Pa., a thermal inversion (a meteorological condition resulting in a large mass of stagnant air) hung over the community for three days.

During this time a zinc reduction plant, a steel mill and other factories continued to operate at full capacity. This resulted in a large accumulation of pollutants over the town.

At the end of the three days 5910 people (four per cent of the population) were ill. A similar incident lasting a week in London in 1952 resulted in an increase of 4000 deaths over the normal weekly rate.

Air pollutants also do considerable damage to plants and animals. The pollutants cause discoloration, stunted growth and death of vegetation.

A national study was conducted in 1968 by the Department of Health, Education and Welfare to identify the contribution of various sources of air pollution. The finds were as follows: motor vehicles—60 per cent, industry—16 per cent, power plants—14 per cent, space heating—six per cent and refuse disposal—four per cent.

There are two types of air pollution—particles and gases i. e., sulfur oxides, carbon monoxide, hydrocarbons and nitrogen oxides.

The major sources of air pollution are particles from industrial operations and gaseous emissions from motor vehicles.

Present efforts to control air pollution are hampered by a lack of inexpensive technology to remove pollutants from emissions, a lack of means to easily measure air pollution and a lack of effective local enforcement. Donovan Revives Old Sounds To Renew Faith in Peace, Love by PFC John C. Hinds Jr.

Here we are buried deep in another holiday season with Thanksgiving just passed and Christmas on the way. People like to talk and think about PEACE and LOVE during this time of the year but I have wondered just how sincere they are about it?

One thing I know for certain is that the music for the rock lover is going to continue down the paths it started with the Humble Pie concert about two weeks ago. B. B. King will be here Thursday and following him in will be Grand Funk with the biggest question that has followed a rock group in a long time. The question to many is how much myth is there to the group?

It may have been the holiday season that brought it to my attention or maybe just some long forgotten face haunting me from the past but last week I wandered into the PX to take a look at the new albums. There staring me in the face was a double album by a Scottish lad whom I thought had faded into oblivion many moons ago, none other than Donovan.

Prolonged Feeling

I really don't know how you all feel but from my friends there has been a prolonged feeling that we were in a downward slide as far as music and love and understanding goes. Sure, about this time every year like I said before the words PEACE and LOVE get kicked around, but halfheartedly.

Then came this Donovan album and I started feeling better already. Things had taken on a new shine. The album contains old songs but performed better than ever. They include "Catch the Wind," "Jersey

Thursday," "Little Tin Soldier," "The War Drags On," "Remember The Alamo" and "Universal Soldier."

At times it has looked — the world around us — as if there was no hope at all. When that bleak view predominated and some event came down like Altamont or the other disasters, it looked as if everything I had believed in had turned to dust.

Special Groups

But it hasn't turned to dust. Not as I see it. The fragmentation and withdrawal into special groups does not now seem to me to mean what it looked like it might come to mean, that the community no longer existed. That we were truly alone, each of us, and that no longer was there that invisible, tenuous linkage spread out everywhere, surfacing now and then like at Woodstock. There was a pause all right, and for the length of that pause it did seem as if the dream were over.

But the thing is, as time is showing, that we each face our own dream, our own problem, our own selves and we won't be fooled again when we say that we're not talking about a prophet who told us what the world was really about, damned the agents and their superhuman crews, then bought apartment houses and saw a blue moon on the way to Israel.

That betrayal exists only in the paranoia of those who cannot feel and cannot see in their own heads the vision of the dream. They are really only pinoffs of the Rubber Dubber, physics Weathermen trying to draw blood with art and we never did need a weatherman. We always knew which way the wind was really blowing.

No Other Way

The choice is to live or die and to live is to love. There is no other way. All the hate has to be regurgitated and the mind and soul cleansed of every bit of it to make it on through. There is a purity I hear shining through Donovan's songs that has not been present since the early days. I hope all of you take the time to get into it.

It has been a long hard pull but Monday I will have been in the Army for one year with two to go. I know that by keeping our heads together and sharing a little love with your brother we can all make it.

Peace and Power to the People.

At 'You're a Good Man, Charlie Brown' Comic Strip Heroes Come to Life

Dear Grandma, I'm going to be a star at the Outpost...

The audience at the Berlin American Community Theater's (ACT) production of "You're a Good Man, Charlie Brown" will visit not only the Peanuts world, but also the wonderland of comic strips, according to Director Enzo Napoli.

The audience will see most of the comic strips from The Stars and Stripes come to life, including Charlie Brown and his friends, which are delved into more deeply. The comic strips will be presented at the opening and closing of each act and between scenes to contrast and enhance the varied moods in the original script.

Other famous Peanuts characters have been added to the production, including No Name, Sally Brown, Pig Pen and Frieda. Also added are three cheerleaders who, through dance and mimicry, comment on the actions of the Peanuts characters. The cheerleaders, as the three witches in "Macbeth," boil up their own little troubles.

The show was originally written for an intimate house, having only six characters in the script: Charlie Brown, Lucy, Schroeder, Linus, Snoopy and Patty. Without interfering with the essence of the script, elements have been added to enhance the production and to properly place it in a larger facility demanding greater projection and a stronger empathic force.

Members of the cast of "You're a Good Man, Charlie Brown" include: Dennis C. Gregory as Linus, John Blinot as Charlie Brown, Kim Newton as Peppermint Patty, Tony DeWitt as Schroeder, Roy Aycock as Snoopy and Kathy Lapsys as Lucy. Music director for the production is James Gibson, choreographer is Gloria Lovelace and set designers are Hanna Olsen and Bob Brandon.

Performances are scheduled for the Outpost Theater Dec. 10, 11, 12, 17 and 18. Tickets will be available Tuesday in the lobby of the Shopping Center. Door prizes will be given at each performance.

Students Enact Nativity Scene

Berlin American High School (BAHS) and Thomas A. Roberts (TAR) Elementary School students under the direction of Mr. Wayne C. Fenstermacher and Mrs. Marika Heyck will present "A Swiss Nativity," by Paul Burkhard Dec. 16 at BAHS auditorium. Curtain time for the performance is 7:30 p.m. and admission is 50 cents for adults and 25 cents for children.

According to Fenstermacher, "A Swiss Nativity" is a modern teenage version of the Biblical story, which has been given a modern face because young people are tired of the traditional presentation. There is fun and sorrow, love and hate, laughter and tears present — all in forms of teenage expression.

Students from the high school music department and a number of younger players from TAR School are in the cast. A brass ensemble and two flutes, made up of the best players from the band, an organ and a harpsichord will provide the unusually expressive accompaniment, according to Fenstermacher.

Tickets may be purchased from any participant as well as at the lobby of the Shopping Center on Saturdays and at the box office Dec. 16.

Six Berliners Awarded Letters of Commendation

Five members of Berlin Brigade recently received letters of commendation for their achievements at the Combat Support Training Center and another was honored for his score on the PMOSC evaluation test.

Specialist Five Felton D. West of the Adjutant General Division was honored for achieving the highest score of any individual in the U. S. Army holding his MOS.

"You have given further proof of the high standards of excellence and quality that have been a trademark of the Berlin Brigade," remarked Brigadier General Raymond O. Miller, commanding general, Berlin Brigade, in presenting West with his letter of commendation.

Also receiving letters of commendation were Staff Sergeant Dennis L. Wilson, Headquarters and Headquarters Company, 4th Battalion, 18th Infantry; Privates First Class Michael J. Petruska and Richard A. Grimm, Headquarters and Headquarters Company, 3rd Battalion, 6th Infantry; Specialist Four Ralph J. Wadleigh, Company A, 3/6; and Private First Class Nathan O. Price, Company F, 40th Armor.

Wilson received his award for being selected Honor Graduate of his Unit / Organizational Ammunition Supply Procedures course at the Combat Support Training Center.

Wilson attained the highest grade average in his class, a 96 per cent.

Petruska was named the distinguished graduate of his Explosives and Demolitions class after compiling a 97.2 per cent average.

Another Defender Battalion member, Grimm, was named the Distinguished graduate of his Wheel Vehicle Organizational Maintenance class with a 97.4 per cent average.

The third Defender named as an honor graduate was Wadleigh, who compiled a 95.9 per cent in Small Arms Organizational Maintenance.

Also named as honor graduate of his class was 40th Armor's Price, who completed his Tracked Vehicle Maintenance Course with a 95.8 per cent average.

Staying Awake in Class Pays Dividends

by PFC Dan Eggleston

Some people sleep through Army classes, some write letters, but Specialists Four Ralph J. Wadleigh and Richard A. Grimm of the 3rd Battalion, 6th Infantry and Private First Class Nathan O. Price of Company F, 40th Armor were wide awake during the organizational maintenance schools they attended at Vilseck during September and October and finished as honor graduates.

For their efforts they received letters of commendation from Brigadier General Raymond O. Miller, commanding general, Berlin Brigade.

The Small Army Organizational Maintenance Course was attended by Wadleigh, armorer of Company A, 3/6. The school covered how to correctly disassemble, assemble, clean and troubleshoot a weapon and what to look for in maintaining the M-16, M-60, M-79, M-67, .45-caliber pistol, .45-caliber submachine gun and the .50-caliber machine gun.

Wadleigh received 968 points out of a possible 1000 from daily pop quizzes and two final exams, one at the end of each week.

Looking back on the school, Wadleigh said, "It was very detailed and covered everything the company-level armorer should know. The instructors were very good — the best I've had since I've been in the Army."

Grimm, a mechanic for C-3/6, was the outstanding student in the Wheel Vehicle Organizational Maintenance Course. This three-week course, concerned primarily with the maintenance of jeeps and 3/4-ton trucks, covered how the engine works, troubleshooting and maintenance of drive units such as the transmission and differential.

"The week on troubleshooting helped me the most" remarked Grimm, "but the whole course was very good."

Grimm accumulated 974 points out of the possible 1000 from two weekly quizzes and instructors' evaluation on practical exercises to emerge as honor graduate.

After five weeks at Vilseck in the M60A1-M113 Organizational Maintenance Course, Price, an M62 wrecker operator for Company F, 40th Armor, came out with a 95.8 per cent class average to grab top honors in his school.

The school dwelled upon the automotive aspects of the vehicle, what makes them move, along with practical exercises utilizing live engines and live vehicles. A week of electrical troubleshooting was given on both vehicles as well as a week of pulling maintenance on the individual tracks.

"The tracks were brought in from the field, so they were in definite need of maintenance," said Price.

Grading was achieved by weekly tests, quizzes and instructors' evaluation of participation and safety during the practical exercises.

"The instructors were really great," remarked Price. "I was really impressed by some of the tools they had made themselves that lowered maintenance time, and in some cases, costs."

Although some Army schools fall below the level of expectation and leave something to be desired, when a good school is conducted the men will put out as shown by these honor graduates from the 3rd Battalion, 6th Infantry and Company F, 40th Armor.

Good, relevant training makes a difference.

CPD Outlines Job Criteria

The Civilian Personnel Department has released a set of guidelines for hiring U. S. dependents in jobs normally held by Local Nationals.

As vacancies occur, dependents will be hired for all Non-Appropriated Fund jobs and commissary workers, hospital ward attendant and KP jobs paid from appropriated funds.

In Berlin, qualified U. S. dependents may also be hired in any regular appropriated funds-paid LN job on a DM basis provided a qualified German applicant cannot be recruited in a reasonable period of time.

Dependents meeting civil service eligibility requirements will receive equal, but not preferential consideration for regular U. S. civil service or teacher positions.

The Civilian Personnel Department will issue recruitment announcements identifying and describing positions for which applications will be accepted although a vacancy may or may not exist at the time of the announcement.

Applicants must state the precise jobs for which they desire consideration and when the jobs become available, the Civilian Personnel Department will refer the applicants to the supervisor for a job interview.

Football Banquet

There will be an AYA football banquet, 6:30 p.m. Dec. 9 at the Har-nack House. Tickets may be purchased at the AYA House until Tuesday for $1.50.

Alert Idea Wins Award

Master Sergeant Camio Pasquaretta, Operations NCO of the 2nd Battalion, 6th Infantry, will receive a cash award for suggesting, through Dial Action, that Berlin Brigade conduct a monthly announced Operational Readiness Test (ORT)

The approved recommendation, which effected the Nov. 17 Brigade practice alert, will earn Pasquaretta $45 for his contribution to the increased combat effectiveness of the Brigade.

Basically, his idea was to conduct a practice alert, aside from the monthly unannounced ORT, to rehearse procedures and instruct participants for smoother deployment during an actual alert. He felt that if the soldiers were better informed in the procedures to follow during a non-move out alert, fewer problems would be encountered during the unannounced alert.

His idea gained momentum as soon as he phoned Dial Action. Good, thought-out suggestions are routed to the Incentive Awards Program where an idea may become a reality worthy of a cash award, if and when it is approved. Other suggestions, complaints and questions are handled directly through the office of the Modern Professional Army, the originating office for Dial Action. From there, the idea goes to the appropriate headquarters staff section for a reply. Upon return of the section's answer, the caller is notified of the results of his inquiry.

Dial 7-7-7 for Action. Your idea may be worth cash.

Run for Your Life

The AG Special Services sponsored "Run for Your Life" program is a purely voluntary and self-administered program of aerobic conditioning, which consists of running, walking and jogging various distances at your own pace. Aerobic (literally "with oxygen") exercises are those that develop the efficiency of the heart, lungs, and blood vessels and increase circulo-respiratory endurance.

Certificates acknowledging certain levels of accomplishment within this program are being awarded by the AG Special Services Sports Branch upon completion of the various distances by participating individuals.

Brigade Cagers Start Monday

Football is dead. Long live basketball!

The first dribble thuds of the roundball will be heard Monday and the echo won't die away until Feb. 4, 1972, when the company-level basketball season officially ends. A postseason tournament to decide the Berlin Brigade champion will be held shortly thereafter.

AG Special Services Sports Director, First Lieutenant Robert Starnes, expects between 250-300 players participating in this year's basketball program. There will be 26 teams in all—12 in Andrews League and the rest at McNair. Eleven of the Andrews League teams will be company teams, and the other is expected to be an independent team composed of anyone who does not want to be affiliated with any particular company.

Like flag football, company-level basketball will be played during duty hours. Games are scheduled starting Monday and during every duty day until Feb 4. There will be two contests a day at Andrews and McNair, 1 and 3 p.m. Since McNair League is divided into Vanguard, Defender and Guardian divisions, Starnes thought that "some of the games might have to be played in the Sports Center gym."

"Of course," Starnes speculated, "there will probably be a few make-up games played at night, too, but they won't be regularly-scheduled games. Planning and arrangements will have to be done with mutual consent of the teams involved."

Starnes pointed out that anyone wishing to play for a company team must be on the morning report of that particular company. Both Andrews and McNair gyms are open during the day and evenings for those who wish to sharpen up their shooting eye or get into good physical shape.

A basketball clinic was held Tuesday-Thursday of last week and some 25 participants received refereeing certificates. Starnes called it a "complete clinic" in the respect that the new officials were drilled in every aspect of basketball refereeing under varied circumstances. "We hope we'll have at least two refs per company," Starnes said, "but we're still a few men short."

The focal point of the basketball season will be the Berlin Brigade Christmas Tournament, slated for Dec. 20-31 at the Sports Center. The Brigade teams and any service-affiliated team may compete for holiday honors. Service Company defeated Company A, FSB, 56-55, to win last year's tournament.

Headquarters Company, Special Troops, racked up an 11-1 season last year enroute to the Berlin Brigade championship, and dunked Headquarters/Service Company, FSB, 76-53 in the title game.

BAHS Coach Smith: 'We Should Be The Best B Team in All Europe'

Basketball practice began in earnest Monday at Berlin American High School and with it a run of optimism for the coming season by head basketball coach, Byron Smith.

The Cubs won the Red Division last year and finished with a 13-1 record for the season. Smith thinks this year's team will be every bit as good. "We should be the best B team in Europe," Smith stated. "I definitely feel that we're the team to beat this season. We've lost two games in two years, so people will be shooting for us . . . but I think we can handle it."

At first glance, Smith's optimism seems to be ill-founded. Ed Sears, a 6-2 junior, is the only returning starter from last year's outstanding team, plus three lettermen and another player who saw little action. The Cubs lost Bill Planz, the leading scorer in Europe, and Dan Sinar — two men who carried much of the Cubs' offensive effort last season.

It appears that the Cubs will have to find a new "star" for this year's cage battles. "We don't have any stars," Smith said, "only five outstanding players who will work as a team." He may be right. Besides Sears, coach Smith can expect a solid nucleus formed by a 6-5 Harry Smith, 5-10 Johnny Hayes, 5-10 Ken Jackson and 5-8 Pat Clyburn. Hayes and Jackson have little basketball experience, but according to Smith, "show potential."

If Hayes and Jackson develop, the Cubs should be on a par with last year's team. "We had all the height last year," Smith admitted, "so this year we'll have a smaller team, but a much faster team. I imagine we'll go with a 1-3-1 offense using the double post. It's too early to tell just exactly what we'll be doing."

Coach Smith expects the main challenges in the Red Division to be from Baumholder and Augsburg, but feels their potentials can only be tested cautiously because each school has a new coach.

The climax of the season is four months away for Berlin's Cubs, when they take on some of Europe's best teams in the Spring Tournament at Rhein Main in early March. The BAHS team lost to Bitburg, 43-34, in the tournament last March. Smith is hoping for better things this year, however. "I feel we can win it," he maintained. "We came in second last year, but somehow I feel that this is our year. We're the team to beat."

A Man for All Seasons

TEA FOR TWO (THE GREAT HEISMAN TROPHY RACE, 1971)

Auburn's talented quarterback, Pat Sullivan, and Cornell's record-breaking halfback, Ed Marinaro, are the best bets to receive the Heisman Trophy this year . . . but don't bet on which one will get it.

The Heisman Trophy is symbolic of the best college football player in America, and is given by the New York Downtown Athletic Club. Football writers from all sections of the U. S. cast their votes for whom they consider to be the top three players. A player receiving a first-place vote gets three points in balloting, two points for second place and one point for third.

Statistics in balloting the last 10 years would tend to favor Sullivan, as six of the last 10 winners have been quarterbacks, including Terry Baker, Oregon State, '62; Roger Staubach, Navy, '63; John Huarte, Notre Dame, '64; Steve Spurrier, Florida, '66; Gary Beban, UCLA, '67; and Jim Plunkett, Stanford, '70.

If Marinaro gets the nod, he'll be in a class with such former winners as Ernie Davis, Syracuse, '61; Mike Garrett, Southern California, '65; O. J. Simpson, Southern California, '68; and Steve Owens, Oklahoma, '69. The Ivy League, in which Marinaro plays, hasn't had a Heisman Trophy winner since Dick Kazmaier won it as a tailback for Princeton back in 1951. As a matter of fact, Kazmaier is only one of three Ivy Leaguers ever to win the coveted Trophy, which goes to show how much stock writers place in the comparative toughness of the league.

Marinaro had the credentials last year to be considered in the race, but as we all know, '70 was "The Year of the Quarterback." His pace hasn't slackened any this year, and by pounding out 272 yards against Columbia, Marinaro became the first 4000-yard runner in the history of major college football. In 24 games, he had accumulated 4132 yards in 795 carries, eclipsing Oklahoma's Steve Owens, who had 3867 yards in 905 carries over 30 varsity games for the Sooners.

Critics yell, "Marinaro couldn't have gained that many yards in a tough league." The Ivy League isn't the Big Eight, the Big Ten or Southeastern Conference, but it isn't exactly powderpuff football, either. The plain fact is that anyone who could gain over 4000 yards in a football career has got to be good.

Marinaro, in an interview with The Sporting News, irately said, "The difference between our level of competition and the big conference is that there are more good football players in those schools. But on a first-string basis, an all-star in the Ivy League can be considered on a par with an all-star in any league." Perhaps Marinaro was thinking of the Dallas Cowboys' Calvin Hill, rookie of the year in '69 in the National Football League, and a former star at Yale.

As the top rusher in major college history, Marinaro's show is hard to follow. Auburn's Pat Sullivan puts on quite a show of his own, however. With Sullivan at the helm, Auburn has won 24 of its last 28 games, and is undefeated and ranked fifth in the nation this year (as of this column).

Sullivan led the nation in '70 in total offense with a 285.6 yards a game clip, touchdown responsibility (26) and a pass-completion percentage of .594. He broke an old record set by John Huarte at Notre Dame in 1964 with Auburn's 8.57-yard gain per play. He's still breaking school, conference and national records this year, and combined with outstanding receiver Terry Beasley, forms the best passing duo Dixie has seen for a long time. Perhaps it's the best ever, but that's an academic matter for nostalgia buffs.

Sullivan's coach, Ralph "Shug" Jordan, calls him a "complete quarterback." Bear Bryant of Alabama says he's "the toughest quarterback to prepare for we've ever played." Georgia Tech's mentor Bud Carson, praised, "If we had a vote for the Heisman, Sullivan would be Tech's choice. Nobody compares with him."

Carson may just have something there.

AYA All-Stars Lose Weekend Contests

It was a bad news weekend for Berlin's AYA Junior and Senior Division All-Stars, as both squads lost close decisions to teams from Bremerhaven and Worms, Saturday and Sunday.

The Worms All-Stars traveled to Berlin Saturday to face the Berlin Senior Division All-Stars. The trip was worth the effort as Worms pounded out a 19-6 verdict. Joe Walsh intercepted a Worms pass after a scoreless first quarter and waltzed 40 yards for the game's first score. It was a 6-0 lead for Berlin, but its last score of the game.

Worms came on in the third stanza to tie the game up, and then put it away for good in the fourth quarter, running back two intercepted Berlin passes for scores.

The Junior Division All-Stars traveled to Bremerhaven to take on the Bremerhaven All-Stars, but a bad snap from center was recovered in the Berlin end zone by a Bremerhaven Star to ruin the trip. It was a defensive game all the way, but Bremerhaven hung on to pin a 6-0 loss on Berlin.

Bremerhaven's Junior All-Stars will be here for a return match tomorrow, 1 p.m. on the AYA field.

NICE CATCH — An unidentified Berlin AYA Senior Division All-Star spears the ball between two Worms All-Star defenders during one of Berlin's better moments in a 19-7 loss Saturday. The game was played on the BAHS field and attracted a small but enthusiastic crowd which cheered as their favorites jumped out in front, 6-0, only to see two intercepted passes and a returned kickoff turned into Worms points. Highlight of the game was a touchdown by Joe Walsh, who returned a pilfered pass 40 yards in the second quarter. (Photo by SP4 Clyde A. Wrigley)

C/94 Pair Experience Command-Size Headache

At the time of the interview, Erwin had spent half a day as the battery commander. Did he like the job so far?

"I would need a lot more experience before I could say whether I liked it or not. I think I could get the hang of it after a while. I did not have any idea just how much work he (the CO) had to do. I'm glad I got the chance to try it. It is a worthwhile program."

Burns' evaluation of Erwin's performance: "He is doing a good job, considering his limited experience. He approaches every problem correctly. If he doesn't know the answer, he keeps digging until he finds out."

"I want to make one thing clear," Burns emphasized. "Everyone treats these people as if they were the actual battery commander and first sergeant. Everything that would normally go to First Sergeant (Paul) Greer and myself for consideration goes to these people. They are in charge for the day they are in office."

First in Program

Sergeant James L. Davis, who normally works as the First Section's Section Chief, was chosen as the first in the program to act as the first sergeant. Davis began his day by passing out information to the 'First Smoke' concerning what work was to be done that day and by whom, who had appointments and where, and what reports were to be turned in. That done, Davis turned to the mountain of paperwork that has to be put out every day.

Most of the first sergeant's time is taken up by administration and personnel action work," Davis reported rather enthusiastically. "He has to delegate a lot of work and make sure it gets done. That is not as easy as it sounds. I had always suspected that 'Top' was busy, but it is more of a mental type thing than I had guessed. It takes a lot of understanding and a very even temperament to be a first sergeant."

At 9:30 a.m., Davis inspected the battery's area of responsibility for cleanliness. Then a call to E&I (Engineer and Installations Division) received immediate action on a construction job for repair of a hole in the street near the battery.

"I've learned a lot about what goes on in the battery, what can be done and how to approach different problems," said Davis. "It felt very good to be able to get something done."

More Mental Strain

In talking about his morning as a first sergeant, Davis said, "Compared with my job, the first sergeant has more of a mental strain, quite a bit more paperwork and much more responsibility. In order to do his job effectively, a first sergeant has to have the cooperation of everybody in his unit. I think it's mainly up to him. His personality, the way he approaches people and so on."

Finally, Davis added, "This program is a damn good idea! I wish other units would try it. It makes for better understanding and easier communications with superiors."

The project has been in effect for several days now, placing six different people in the two slots of C Battery, 94th Artillery. It will continue until all of the junior non-commissioned officers in the battery have a crack at one of the jobs. After that, the lower ranking enlisted men will get their chance. If Sergeants Erwin and Davis are any indication, the program can already be counted a success.

Dancing, Riding Championships Compete for Weekend Attention

by Judy Pricks
Championships of quite a different nature are among the activities in Berlin this weekend. In the Deutschlandhalle tomorrow and Sunday, international professional dancers will cut fancy figures for the World Championship for professional couples.

Tomorrow, beginning at 8 p.m., the festive competition will feature the Latin American dances, while Sunday, beginning at 6 p.m., the standard dances will be performed. Altogether about 30 couples from all continents will participate in the glamorous happening.

The main part of this special attractions is 14 dance numbers of old Berlin dances in original costumes performed by dancers aged 6-60. Tickets (DM 5-25) will be available at the box office of the Deutschlandhalle.

Riding and Jumping
The competition for the Berlin Championships in Riding and Jumping began in the riding arena of the Riding Club of the Berlin Students in Dueppel (Koenigsweg 50 right off Potsdamer Chaussee) yesterday and will continue through Sunday.

Besides the Berlin riders and their mounts, there will also be 130 'visiting' horses plus riders from West Germany who came to Berlin for a horse show which is also part of this four-day event. Hard-core fans of this fascinating sport could watch the show from about 2 p.m. to almost midnight today through Sunday because there will be so many horses at the various jumping trials.

Since funds are especially low this last weekend of the month, it will be good news for you that this is all free of charge. On Sunday morning, a traditional part of this tournament will take place outside (the other events are all inside). Hunting horses will be tested for their suitability - surely an interesting event to put some life in the Sunday morning of a horse sports enthusiast.

Guest Performances
Non-competitive events this weekend include another series of guest performances of the world-famous Don Cossacks Choir in the Sportpalast, where they have performed over 100 times for their Berliner fans. The all-male choir looks back on a 50-year tradition which began in 1921 in a troop camp in Turkey under the young cadet Serge Jaroff.

In the '20's and '30's the choir traveled through all of Europe and also to other continents, and after the outbreak of World War II they immigrated to the U. S. and became American citizens. But their fame continued and the choir still under Serge Jaroff, who now is 75 years old, came to Europe every year for a six-month tour keeping alive the songs of old Russia.

ASTRONAUT THEORY - Swiss pseudo-scientist Erich von Daeniken will lecture at the Hochschule fuer Musik Tuesday and Wednesday on his theory that astronauts from another world made humans out of apes millions of years ago.

This is to be their last tour and will also include Japan in 1972. The Don Cossacks Choir can be heard tonight, tomorrow and Sunday night at 8. You can get tickets (DM 6-14) at the Sportpalast.

Bockbierfest Time
And then it is that time of the year again - Bockbierfest time. In the Neue Welt on Hasenheide the first keg of the dark brew was tapped last Monday and now the merry activities will go until way into the new year. Each night, except Monday, there are all kinds of music, carnival booths, dancing, and of course plenty to eat (like grilled ox) and drink (and not only bockbier).

Tuesday there is no admission fee and on Thursday the ladies get in free. On the other days there is an admission charge, the weekends being the most expensive. Tuesday and Wednesday, the program at the Hochschule fuer Musik promises to be very interesting and controversial. The Swiss pseudo-scientist Erich von Daeniken will talk about his annual theory 'Were the Gods Astronauts?'

In two best sellers, the amateur archeologist set down a theory that millions of years ago astronauts from another world came to earth and through genetic transformations made humans out of apes. His proof bases on the unsolved riddles of archeology - pictures of stones, statues and monuments of bygone cultures.

Without any expert knowledge he has put his fantastic theory where science has not found answers yet. The scientists' opinions about Daeniken's works are very controversial, but his books, which have been published in many languages already, are still bestsellers and his lectures are usually sold out. If you understand German and are curious to hear more about the 'astronauts' that were to have come millions of years ago, you can get tickets (DM 6-10) for the 8 p.m. lectures combined with slides at the PX ticket agency.

Hansel and Gretel
While on the subject of fairy tales (pardon me, Herr Daeniken), the Berlin Opera has added Engelbert Humperdinck's (not the pop singer - he's using the famous composer's name) musical version of 'Haensel and Gretel' to its repertoire. This popular work, which was first performed in 1893, was given a new 'dress' after a pause of many years and promises to be a big success with the Berlin public.

The music is melodic and the stage setting gives forth a wonderful fairy tale atmosphere. The star of the evening is undoubtedly the witch, who is portrayed most expertly and not without humor by Patricia Johnson. Singing their adventurous way through the story as Haensel is Barbara Scherler and as Gretel is Gerti Zeumer.

So that this charming excursion into the world of fairy tales is not limited to the adults, the Berlin opera has set up three afternoon performances in December. 'Haensel and Gretel' can be seen Dec. 6 at 3 p.m. and 7:30 p.m.; Dec. 18 at 4:30 and 8 p.m.; Christmas Day at 3 p.m. and 7:30 p.m.; and Dec. 28 at 7:30 p.m. only. Tickets for this production are very much in demand, so make your reservations at the PX ticket agency as soon as possible.
