Foot-sore and fancy-free

by AMIGO DE LA CRUZ and DAVE RACE

Members of the 2nd, 3rd, and 4th Battalions, 6th Infantry, recently participated in the Nijmegen International Four-day March. The march is 100 miles (or 160 kilometers) long and military and civilian personnel alike travel from all over the world to test their endurance.

The march consisted of four 25-mile loops that branch out from the city of Nijmegen like a giant clover leaf. All the marches (with the exception of the third day) were over flat ground. Rest and aid stations were placed along the routes to take care of the marchers who might be tired or injured.

Thousands of people

An estimated 13,000 turned out to participate in the event. Among them were 3,500 military personnel. The British led the pack with 1,700 personnel. Norway was second with 500 people to represent them and the U. S. showed up 380 strong and with 25 U. S. Forces teams to compete. Some of the teams came from as far away as Italy. The teams sizes ranged from 11 to 25 people.

Camp Heuenswoord

Camp Heuenswoord, or "tent city" as it was called by the marchers, was a rather strange combination of Woodstock and M*A*S*H. Woodstock, because of the great number of people, the omnipresent music and the good feeling between the different troops. Members of the different teams traded headgear, unit crests and patches left and right. And a little of M*A*S*H because . . .

The weather wasn't quite as good as was hoped, it rained two of the four days. It was cold, wet and miserable—nothing would dry out. Clothing was hung everywhere in hopes that it would dry. Dry boots were almost a luxury, unless one had brought more than one pair, but the men walked on.

Morale was high

Morale in the ranks was surprisingly high, considering the conditions. Competition in chanting and unit cadence calling was often fierce. Most of the competition came from our British allies. Several times a miniature "march off" would start and the officers would have to slow the men down, knowing that they would feel the results of their competitive spirit later in the day. The competition wasn't always on an international level, as was demonstrated by the 2nd and 3rd Battalions of the 6th Infantry when they joined up to chase and harrass the 509th Airborne team.

ONE FOOT IN FRONT OF THE OTHER—is what kept the 2-6 team on the move. The team, led by 1LT Patrick Rivette, was one of the three teams representing Berlin at the Nijmegen International Four-day March.

"Unity is Strength"

All of Berlin's teams did well—completing the march and living up to 6th Infantry's motto "Unity is Strength." The marchers sang to keep their minds off their aching feet, knees, and shoulders as they crossed the finish line.

One more march

But all was not yet finished—they had one more march to complete. The marchers were bussed back to the camp to shower and change into khakis and then they marched an extra three miles through town with the entire U. S. contingent. The parade was led by the 8th Division Band, and the three color guards representing the U. S. Army, USAREUR, and the 8th Division. The formation of marchers found the three Berlin teams leading the way, joined by the 1/509th Airborne as a fourth file. The guidons went up and down for a sharp "eyes right" in front of the reviewing stand which held all of the U. S. Army division commanders in Europe. But that's not what impressed the soldiers about the final parade.

Cheering Dutch people

The entire three miles of the march route was filled with applauding people, snapping cameras, and girls handing flowers to the marchers. One got the impression from the cheering Dutch people that the soldiers marching that day were the same ones that had liberated Holland 25 years ago.

As the soldiers prepared to return to Berlin, one wondered if the men thought the two months of training for Nijmegen, and the walk, was worth it. One soldier answered that question when he said to his team leader, "Sir, did you know that there is going to be another march in Paris in October? Can we go?"

JOHN, JOHN JR., AND MARIANNE Chowning check the bow mooring line on their boat "Skanda" as she lies moored in the harbor in Cannes, France, just prior to their departure for the coast of Italy. (Photo by Elisabeth Chowning)

Many of us dream about taking a year or two off, buying a yacht, and just sailing away. Many of us dream about it, but few ever do it. John and Elisabeth Chowning had the dream, but they were more determined than most, and perhaps luckier as well. John, who is in Berlin as part of the German Academic Exchange Program, was entitled to a sabbatical leave from Stanford University, where he was a professor of music. After a lot of thought, he and his wife, who has been a substitute teacher at the Berlin American High School recently, packed up their two children, John, 10, and Marianne, 8, and moved to Cannes, on the French Riviera. There they found and fell in love with "Skanda," a 25-year old cruising sailboat. She was cutter-rigged, and all mahogany below decks. She was destined to be their home for the next year.

The many details of buying, financing, and outfitting "Skanda" were slowly taken care of, but the Chownings still had to sit around the port waiting for the paperwork necessary to change the vessel's nationality. After six weeks the last hassle was behind them, and they were finally able to cast off their mooring lines and set sail.

Their first few months were spent lazily working their way southwards along the Italian Riviera, enjoying being free of any fixed schedules. Stops along the way included modern marinas, bustling ports, and sleepy little fishing villages, where "Skanda" was the local attraction. They visited the Isle of Elba, where Napoleon was imprisoned after his defeat and capture. The mild Mediterranean winter was spent anchored in the main harbor of the lovely island of Ischia. Ischia is the most popular yacht harbor in southern Italy, and is formed from the crater of an extinct volcano at the north end of the Bay of Naples.

The spring of 1973 saw the Chownings aboard "Skanda" and underway once again, this time around Sicily and the Tyrrhenian Sea, to the ancient island fortress of Malta. At Malta, "Skanda" got a much-needed bottom cleaning and other repairs.

The next leg of their journey gave the Chownings the chance to do some real open water sailing. From Malta they headed north once again, this time into the historic Adriatic Sea, at its imaginary boundry with the Ionian Sea, near the Isle of Corfu.

By now, young John and Marianne were old hands, and aided their parents with the actual sailing of their 41-foot craft. They admit to being "a little scared," the first time out in really rough weather, but they were soon "old salts."

All beautiful dreams must end someday, and the Chownings' was no exception. They have relocated in Berlin and, as they no longer had the time to spend on "Skanda" to keep her in the shape she deserved, they reluctantly sold her.

Perhaps the new owner is about to begin his own journey.

by MARTY BEST

Last weekend's games proved to be the most exciting American Soccer game of the year at McNair Field. The undefeated and seldom contested Berlin American Soccer Club, with a 10-0 slate, met the undefeated Schweinfurt club with a 7-0 record. The games were hotly contested with each club winning once.

Schweinfurt is by far the class of the league, and they showed it with fine passing, endless hustle, and a feel for the game not often seen on American squads. Schweinfurt squeaked by BASC on Saturday, slipping and sliding to a 3-2 victory in an incessant rain. BASC had not played in over three weeks and it definitely showed. The passing for BASC just wasn't as crisp as usual and many a player was feeling his oats out there. Schweinfurt jumped out to a 1-0 lead early in the first half, but BASC tied it up before the half on a goal by Karl Reich. In the second half, Schweinfurt again took the lead 2-1, but BASC jumped right back with former All-American Pete Milhado scoring the equalizer. The game appeared as if it would end in a tie when a BASC pass went astray by our own goal and a Schweinfurt player dribbled into the net from twenty yards out as time quickly came to a close.

Sunday the shoe went on the other foot. Schweinfurt was extremely cocky. BASC had a "must win" situation. Through the echoes of "Who's going to win today?"

Schweinfurt!" BASC was desperately trying to put it together to win for captain Vic Kastelanski. Vic was playing his last game for the BASC before his PCS this week. Vic, sometimes referred to in my column as the "George Blanda of Berlin," will be sorely missed by his followers and admirers in Berlin and the legendary figure will return to a retirement in CONUS.

Back to the action now, Sunday's game see-sawed back and forth with no score at halftime. The tempo of the match was extremely tense and tempers were short flared. The turning point was when a Schweinfurt player was ejected with less than fifteen minutes to play in the game. To that point, Schweinfurt had put on unmerciful pressure against the defense of Kastelanski, Kreusche, Best and Salmon, with goalie Taylor making some remarkable plays. With eight minutes left, Ricardo Lopez broke the ice with the first goal and came back a minute later to score his second goal. The echoes of "Who's going to win today? Schweinfurt!" came to an abrupt halt. The crowd went wild, the BASC went wild, the opponents hung their heads, and to add insult to injury Ken Salmon banged home another goal and the jubilation BASC was guaranteed a share of first place and Vic Kastelanski went out a winner (the only way for a champion to go) with a 3-0 BASC victory.

The lineup last weekend was rounded out by John Veenstra, Larry Reynolds, Larry Newton, Frank Chapman, Bermudez and Mike Kelly, and Dave Jung.

DYA announces tourneys

Championship play in the second annual USAREUR DYA (Dependent Youth Activities) baseball tournament for bantam, junior and senior age groups will be conducted August 6-10 at five separate sites, it has been announced by the U. S. Army Recreation Services Agency, Europe.

Competition in the DYA diamond championships will feature double-elimination play in each of five separate divisions. Bantam (9-12 years of age) and Junior (15 years and younger) groups are subdivided into "A" and "B" categories. Teams competing in category "A" will be formed from Army and Air Force communities with 601 or more dependent children. Communities with fewer than 600 dependent youngsters enter teams in

"B" category competition. Some 60 Army communities and five Air Force bases competed in regular DYA season play that got underway May 18.

USAREUR DYA championship sites:

- Bantam "A" Worms
- Bantam "B" Herzogenaurach
- Junior "A" Frankfurt
- Junior "B" Nellingen
- Senior (19 years and younger) .. Sembach Air Base

Individual and team awards will be presented to winning and runner-up teams participating in the championship tournament. MVP (Most Valuable Player) recognition will be accorded players distinguishing themselves in each of the five divisions of play.

The reason for little change and incomplete standings in the Pee-Wee League is that the weather would not cooperate. Of the last 5 games scheduled, "rain" won four. Make-up games are being arranged.

Air Force tops again

The Air Force officers made it three in a row when they defeated the Army officers 16-6 in the "Wine Bowl" softball game, held Sunday at Tempelhof Central Airport.

The Army seemed doomed from the start when the Air Force scored four runs in the first inning and five in the second. The Army only managed to get two men in during the first inning.

The first innings set a pattern throughout the whole game. The day was a bad one for the Army and they couldn't do anything right. Flies went over men's heads, balls jumped out of baseball mitts, and throws just didn't quite get to the bases.

To make matters worse, the Air Force couldn't do anything wrong. Their hitting was great and their fielding was even better. Tom Leinen, the Air Force left fielder, and Brew Nickles, the Air Force short center fielder, made several catches that looked almost miraculous. The team worked together on plays and had a polished look that showed much practice before the game.

The Air Force has won all three bowl games so far, the Beer Bowl (football), the Champagne Bowl (basketball), and now the Wine Bowl. What will be next, roller derby?

Although I'm below my maximum weight and have been taken off the mandatory weight reduction program, I am trying to get below 200 pounds. I have set my goal at 190-195.

I'd like to pass on a few hints to determined weight losers and to the people who are placed on "FAT BOY" programs.

1. Don't "buck the system."
2. Set a goal to reach (below your max.).
3. Listen to your dietician.
4. Exercise (start out gradually).
5. Don't give up (those last few pounds are the hardest).
6. Once you reach your desired goal, keep it there!!!! No one can make you lose weight; you have to want to.

Fat isn't where it's at

by JAMES R. HILLIARD

I am a first-term enlisted man who, unsuccessfully, has tried to "buck" the "FAT BOY" program in my service. Regardless of which service branch you serve, you may benefit from my experience if you're overweight.

Since I was 14 years old, I have weighed over 200 pounds. I was 18 and weighed 250 pounds when I entered the service. During basic training, I lost 30 pounds. But after basic, I began my overeating habits until I was put on a weight reduction program.

That was in July 1972. I weighed the most I had ever weighed—260 pounds. I decided to quit "bucking" the system and try my hardest to succeed in losing weight.

At 6 feet 1 inch, my maximum weight should be 208. I started my diet plan by eating as little as possible. After losing the first few pounds, I reached a plateau and could not lose for a week. The next week only a couple of pounds came off. As time went on, my weight came off even harder. I could not understand why I was not averaging a loss of at least 3 pounds a week. I decided to heed the words of past suggestions—I started exercising.

I hated the thought of it, but I gave it a try. I started with an hour a day at the base gym using the equipment and finishing with a sauna bath. I gradually increased to a two-hour workout. Playing squash and paddle ball helped tremendously and sitting in the sauna eliminated a lot of my water retention. For about nine months I've worked out a couple of times a week, and have finally reached my maximum allowed weight.

The statistics are:

BEFORE	AFTER
260 lbs	206 lbs
42" waist	37" waist
17 1/2" neck	16" neck

'Latinos Unidos' adds much to '74 Volksfest

One of the places you won't want to pass by at the Volksfest is the 'Casadel Rio', run by El Club Latinos Unidos en Berlin. They sell tacos, enchiladas, and chile that's out of this world.

In addition to running the "taco stand", El Club Latinos Unidos has done much more for the Volksfest. As many members of the club are native San Antonians, they've contributed by adding authenticity to the Volksfest and by serving as technical advisors. Many members of the club are also involved in the entertainment aspect of the Volksfest. People like Juan Alaniz and Andreas Perales will be singing Spanish folk songs in addition to playing the guitar. Other members of the club will be found in the chorus line.

There are many people who give a great deal of time and effort to make the Volksfest a success. At this time, the "Berlin Observer" would like to thank all of you who help make "Fiesta San Antonio" a fiesta in the true sense of the word. Gracias.

By the way, go easy on the hot sauce. —MSM

I ESCAPED FROM DEVIL'S ISLAND — rated R — The fact that there is no way to escape the brutal penal colony known as Devil's Island doesn't stop Jim Brown from trying. His attempt for freedom is an exciting testament of daring and adventure. Also stars Christopher George.

LIVE AND LET DIE — Revival, rated PG — Some material may not be suitable for pre-teenagers. Roger Moore is James Bond and Bond is back in action like never before. His target is the deadly Dr. Kananga who has already notched three top agents. Their battleground is the whole planet and for an arsenal the foes have the selection of the most lethal weapons modern technology can offer. LIVE AND LET DIE is non-stop entertainment. Also stars Yaphet Kotto.

THE SCREAMING TIGER — rated R — Woe unto the murderers of Wang Yu's honorable family. The angry young man methodically decimates the ranks of a team of wrestlers and an entire judo academy on his way to get the man who killed his folks. It's non-kung fu action with fights aboard a train and on top of a waterfall.

NIGHT OF THE BLOOD MONSTER — rated PG — Some material may not be suitable for pre-teenagers. BLOOD MONSTER relates the grisly tale of the fate of a 17th century English prosecutor, whose specialty was burning witches. One of his victims was a bit more powerful than the magistrate bargained for. He arranges a fitting doom for the sadistic fellow. Starring Christopher Lee and Maria Schell.

THE BATTLE FOR THE PLANET OF THE APES — Revival, rated G — In the final chapter of the incredible apes saga, the earth is a wreck following an atomic war. The few surviving humans and simians are to be locked in battle for what remains of the planet. The conclusion to the apes series comes on as strong as did the mind bending opener, PLANET OF THE APES. Starring Roddy McDowall and Sam Jaffe.

Borrowing on credit—look before you leap

by CPT Joseph V. Ippolito

When a serviceman goes out to buy a car or tries to furnish a home, he usually discovers that these items cost more than he can afford to pay in cash. He also will find that several kinds of credit are available to help him pay for these items.

This credit may be available from many sources, such as the retail seller, banks, credit unions, finance companies, or small loan companies. Further, the serviceman will learn that he is being encouraged by merchants and advertising to obtain "easy credit" so that he can afford the items he wants. Advertising may suggest "low, easy payments," "easy terms," or "no money down, take months to pay." The serviceman must be careful of "easy credit"—easy credit may turn into difficult bills.

It must be remembered that credit costs money. This is easily seen by comparing the price marked on the item with the total price of the item (the purchase price plus interest and charges). Essentially, credit is simply the renting of money, and just as a rented house or apartment must be paid for, so must rented money.

The "rent" that is paid for credit is added by the lender to cover his costs of credit checks, the work in preparing contracts, collection of payments, record keeping, filing fees, insurance to protect him from loss if the borrower dies before paying the debt, and interest on the money during the time the borrower has the use of it.

To avoid being confused about just how much credit will actually cost, the borrower must carefully analyze and read the contract. The Truth-in-Lending Law (Federal Reserve Regulation Z) is designed to help in making this analysis. The lender must completely fill out the contract before the borrower signs it. The contract must show the finance charge in dollars and cents, the "annual percentage rate" and must state the amount of each payment and number of payments.

The finance charge is the total of all costs that the borrower must pay, directly or indirectly, for obtaining credit. This is, in effect, the amount of "rent" that must be paid for the money borrowed. The "annual percentage rate" is the relative cost of the credit in percentage terms. A lender may tell a borrower that the interest will be "$5 per hundred per year." This is NOT 5 per cent per year. On a $2,300 loan for 36 months, for example, the rate of interest per year (annual percentage rate) is 10.24 per cent. Any contract in this example, therefore, would have to show the annual percentage rates as 10.24 per cent, not as "$5 per hundred per year." The finance charge in this example would be $419.08, and the total amount of money that the borrower would have to pay to the lender would be $2,719.08.

Small loan companies (companies lending up to $1,000 in one state, for example, may charge an annual percentage rate of 24 per cent on the unpaid principal balance not exceeding $500 and 22 per cent on any remainder of the unpaid principal balance. A $1,000 loan for 36 months from such a company would bear an annual percentage rate of 23.364 per cent. The total amount of money that the borrower would have to repay the lender would be $1,400.40. Small loan companies are often the most expensive sources of credit.

If a serviceman is thinking about borrowing money to buy an item "on time" (on credit), he should be sure that he understands all the terms in any contract he is asked to sign. If any term is unclear, he should seek to have it clarified BEFORE the contract is signed.

Help the Army and earn $$$

If you are a potential suggester looking for ideas, try the 4M approach—materials, methods, machines and manpower.

Let's take materials. What kind are used in your organization? Is there any way to save on them, particularly the expensive ones? Are some discarded that could be salvaged for another use? Are there substitutes that do the same job and cost less?

On methods, try these questions: Did organizational or mission changes make some methods obsolete or unnecessary? Do delays or bottlenecks exist that can be improved? Can changes be made to prevent peak work loads? Can some operations be combined to increase productivity, save manhours, materials? Could productivity be increased by separating operations, re-routing the work flow, or changing the sequence of operations?

There are two ways of looking at machines. First, are there some machines or equipment available at reasonable cost to increase your productivity or your organization's efficiency? Or are there machines and equipment now being purchased that could be cancelled without serious harm to current or future productivity? Could a standard model be used to make particular machines or equipment last longer or require less repair and maintenance without decreasing productivity.

Manpower savings you have just read! The questions above are just areas for starters, others will come to you. The important thing is to give the 4Ms—materials, methods, machines, and manpower the big question mark. They could well help you, your organization and the Army by helping you develop an award winning suggestion.

Chaplain Corps is 199 years old

The United States Army Chaplaincy was created by an Act of Congress in 1775 upon the request of General George Washington. Predating the adoption of the Constitution of the United States of America, the Army Chaplaincy has continued throughout our country's history.

Clergymen wearing military uniforms have accompanied American fighting men in all of their major conflicts. In times of peace, chaplains have provided help with the spiritual and moral needs of soldiers and their families. They have heard the confessions of the dying, they have offered prayers for the living; they have ministered to the sick and acted as counsellors to the wounded. They have encouraged and comforted the wives and children in times of need.

Chaplains serve in the physical and the spiritual battlegrounds and yet their purpose is neither death nor destruction. As soldiers of God they bear no arms. Their only weapon is the Word of God. Their armor is the shield of righteousness and their shield is the shield of faith. They are concerned with sharing, serving, and sustaining the men and women who have left their homes and private dreams in answering the call of their country.

As Army chaplains have assisted soldiers and their dependents in the past, so the chaplains of today are looking for ways in which they may continue to serve God and meet the needs of people in a changing day and a new generation.

All American Army chapels in Berlin will observe the Chaplaincy's 199th Anniversary this Sunday, July 28. Appropriate recognition will be made during the services and in most instances the anniversary will be celebrated in brief ceremonies during the post-service social hours.

SPOTLIGHT

July 22 was a very special day in the life of Specialist 6 Leslie A. Wehrer, an automotive repairman with Service Company, Special Troops. On that day, Brigadier General Robert D. Stevenson presented Wehrer with the Bronze Star for service against hostile forces, and the Army Commendation Medal for meritorious service. Both awards were for duty at "Camp Eagle" outside of Hue-Phu Bai Vietnam, during 1969-70. He was with the 101st Airborne Division.

Prior to coming into the Army in 1961, Specialist Wehrer resided in Seattle, Washington. He took his basic at Fort Ord, California.

He was stationed with the 43rd Group, Fort Carson, Colorado before coming to Germany. In 1972, he was stationed in Nuremberg. It wasn't until April '73 that he came to Berlin.

At the presentation, First Lieutenant Christopher Shoemaker, Aide de Camp to General Stevenson, read the citation. Attending the ceremony were Captain Thomas Lennox, Service Company Commander, and First Lieutenant Shannon Gomes, Executive Officer, Service Company, and First Sergeant Van Hunt of Service Company.

Savings bonds provide security

For those wondering what to do with their "Big 10" savings, the proposed October pay raise, or the forthcoming back pay from 1972, Mr. Jack Dunn has a suggestion . . . buy Bonds.

Mr. Dunn is the U. S. Treasury Department's Director of Sales for Federal Activities, Savings Bond Area. He visited Berlin this week to promote sales of U. S. Savings Bonds to military personnel and DOD civilians.

"It's amazing how many misconceptions there are regarding Savings Bonds," Dunn said. "I even talked with a colonel in West Germany who still called them 'War Bonds'."

Dunn said there are several advantages to Savings Bonds beyond the new 6% interest rate. This rate is for Series E bonds held five years.

"One of the better Bond programs is for your child's education," Dunn continued. "If you buy Bonds in the child's name you don't have to declare the interest on your tax returns."

If the child has a substantial personal income the interest would be declared on his or her return, but not many children have that problem.

Mr. Dunn also outlined a retirement plan wherein the Series E bonds are converted to Series H, or income-producing bonds. This plan also has an inherent tax advantage in that income tax on interest can be deferred until the individual is in the lower income bracket following retirement.

Of course the big advantages of Savings Bonds continue to be convenience and security. With payroll deduction the money is hardly missed and the bonds are always safe from fire, flood, theft, and other disasters, both natural and man-made.

"Interest from U. S. Savings Bonds is not subject to state or local taxes either," Dunn said. He explained that there are only about four states now which do not have an income tax and that many counties and municipalities also impose income taxes.

Bonds can be purchased through military payroll deduction for as little as $6.25 per month, which gives the purchaser a $25 bond each quarter, up to $150 per month with a variety of options in between.

Federal civilian employees can have amounts from $3.75 to $50 deducted from their pay bi-weekly.
