Educating the soldier

by William Moore, Field Station Berlin

Interested in oceanography, ancient history or perhaps a course in German literature taught in German? Maybe you want to get that high school diploma or improve Military Occupational Specialty (MOS) skills. Whatever the need, chances are good that the soldier stationed in Berlin will find what he wants.

The U. S. Government, realizing the importance of education and its relevance to today's complex society, is providing educational opportunities for its employees in various parts of the world. Berlin is no exception.

A better soldier

The U. S. Army, realizing that an educated soldier is a better soldier, is constantly improving in quality by requiring more and more education from its members. "In fact, the trend in the Army today is for all officers, non-commissioned officers and career-minded personnel to have their college degree or at least two years of college," says Staff Sergeant Fred B. Dowell, career counselor at Field Station, Berlin.

The first item on the agenda for all new arrivals should be a visit to the Army Education Center (AEC). Through counseling, testing and evaluation of transcripts, trained counselors can help prospective students choose their best course of action. Among the instruments available at the AEC to determine one's interests and aptitudes are interest surveys and specialized tests, as well as various test batteries.

Variety of programs

Educational opportunities available in Berlin are divided into four categories: academic programs, university programs, MOS-related education-training and special programs.

All adult education programs are designed to help those individuals interested in self-improvement. This program offers a wide variety of subjects to all military personnel and their adult dependents. Under this plan soldiers can earn their high school diploma, improve reading skills or study the language of their choice. Non-commissioned officers are eligible for courses which earn college credit and valuable promotion points. The academic program is an excellent base for eventual transition into the university program.

Four major universities

There are four major U. S. universities represented in Berlin, offering everything from freshman courses through complete graduate programs. They are the University of Maryland, Boston University, the University of Oklahoma and Wayne State University. Central Texas College is expected to make its appearance in Berlin this spring, offering an Associate of Arts degree in a technical field—the curriculum has not yet been announced.

The University of Maryland, European Division, offers courses at the undergraduate level leading to a bachelor of arts degree in general studies with principal concentrations of study in commerce (business administration), economics, English, government, history, philosophy and sociology.

Boston University offers two graduate programs on its Berlin campus, leading to a degree in international relations or a master of science in business administration.

The University of Oklahoma offers a master of arts degree in the fields of economics, public administration or human relations. These are fully accredited, no-thesis programs of 32 or 34 graduate credit hours, designed for career executives, military personnel and dependents who cannot devote their full time to a graduate program or attend school on the traditional basis.

Wayne State University offers a graduate program leading to a master of arts degree in education (major in educational psychology). The purpose of this 15-month program is to prepare military personnel and their dependents for career opportunities in civilian life in the areas of guidance and counseling.

Very popular program

How popular is the university program? Approximately 345 students from Andrews Barracks alone are participating in the various university programs offered through the AEC, and records indicate that attendance is increasing. Of this number, 80% are assigned to Field Station.

"It is a great chance for me to study the language and culture of the German people while living in their country," commented Specialist Four Rusty Yoder of Field Station, Berlin, when asked about his reasons for attending the University of Maryland.

Also available to the Berlin Brigade community are courses offered through correspondence. Most major universities in the United States are represented. The subjects offered vary from vocational courses and high school level studies through senior level college courses. Registration is also handled for all correspondence courses by the Army Education Center.

The MOS-related education-training program is used to furnish instruction and information having immediate application in improving the duty performance of military personnel.

Instructor assists commanders

This instruction is of great value in assisting commanders in executing instruction that is beyond the scope of unit training capabilities and facilities and helps the individual soldier develop his military skills. It also helps him prepare for evaluation testing, gives valuable assistance in completing Army school correspondence courses, and otherwise prepares him to better perform his duties.

Within the MOS-training curriculum are such courses as driver's training, map reading, Military Police procedures, food service and effective writing. Instruction is offered at no cost to qualified personnel both in the classroom and through correspondence. In order to assist the soldier, five MOS libraries staffed by trained counselors are located at Berlin Brigade compounds.

Attacking drug abuse

Drug abuse is one of the more unfortunate problems in today's society, and because of its presence in the military community, the U. S. Army has initiated a special education program to inform the soldier of its consequences and possible effects on his career. This course is designed to disseminate factual information covering the entire spectrum of drugs and to provide the necessary information to help correct misconceptions and dispel myths and legends concerning various drugs. This instruction is considered important enough by the Army that it is mandatory for all ranks on a yearly basis!

Better understanding among the races is also emphasized by the Army through its race relations program, which is held continuously and is also mandatory for all ranks.

There are many opportunities in the Army for self-improvement. The costs are low and the Army is more than willing to do its part to insure that every member stationed in Berlin can make the most of his or her tour.

'Ski Weeks' continue

Learn to Ski at AFRC! Spring is getting near, but there is still plenty of time to learn the skills of skiing by taking part in one of the Armed Forces Recreation Center's "Learn to Ski Weeks" at Berchtesgaden or Garmisch.

Prospective skiers taking part in the "ski week" arrive at one of the recreation areas on Sunday and instruction begins on Monday, with the final day of instruction on Friday. Cost of the "ski weeks" is $65 at Berchtesgaden, and $70 at Garmisch plus billeting fees. This fee includes five days of instruction, all equipment (except socks and mittens), lift fees, graduation banquet, and most meals.

Reservations for the B'gaden ski week may be made by writing Berchtesgaden Recreation Area, Attn: USA Ski School, APO 09029, or by telephoning B'gaden Military (2538) 623 or 823. For enrollment in the Garmisch ski week, reservations may be made by writing: GRA Billeting Office, Attn: Ski Week Reservation, APO 09053 or by calling Garmisch Military (2535) 557 or 757.

Ski races set at GRA

Three special ski races are scheduled for March by the Garmisch Recreation Area. First race of the month is a Cross Country event on March 9. This will be followed by the 26th Annual Alpine Combined Slalom, March 16-17, and the Spring "He and She" Race March 23. The cross country race is planned for the AFRC Hausberg ski area and the two slalom races for the AFRC Grainau ski area.

All races are open to the authorized guests of the AFRC and will be run in accordance with the 1973/74 FIS (International Ski Federation) rules and regulations. Starting time for the races is noon.

Entries may be made by writing the GRA Sports and Tournament Section, APO 09053, or by calling Garmisch Military (2535) 679 or 824. Registration fees are $1.50 per person per event, and may be paid at the registration points on the day of the race.

The cross country race will have competition in junior, open, novice, and ladies classes; the Alpine combined, two runs on the slalom course and one giant slalom, will have junior, intermediate, expert, and ladies classes; while the skiers in the "He and She" race will compete in open and junior classes.

Each contestant must make his own billeting arrangements and may do so by writing the GRA Billeting Office, Attn: (name and date of race), APO 09053 or by calling GM (2535) 557 or 757.

Army-A.F. series

In an informal city championship series, the 7350th Air Base Group, TCA's intramural basketball champs, beat the Army's champs, Combat Support Co. 4-6 85-83 Tuesday night. The CSC team came back Wednesday night to even the series with a lopsided 104-67 victory.

The final game will be played next Tuesday at 6:30 p.m. at the Sports Center.

Singles handball champ

Major Oscar L. Ferrell of the 1946th Communication Squadron won the 1973 U. S. Army Berlin Singles Handball Championship and was given his certificate Tuesday by Brigadier General Robert D. Stevenson. Runner-up was Colonel Leonard L. Lewane, Chief of Staff, Berlin Brigade, also received his certificate.

Johnny Mitchell moves on to greener fairways

Johnny Mitchell, golf pro at the Berlin American Golf Club, leaves Berlin next month after more than two years in the Divided City. Mitchell's next assignment is Carlisle Barracks, Carlisle, Penn. at the War College.

Mitchell turned pro in 1956 and participated in many tournaments. He was drafted in 1961 and is now a staff sergeant. He came to Berlin in February 1972 after serving at the Heidelberg Golf Club.

Reflecting on his two years at the club here, Johnny Mitchell said that his greatest accomplishment was "getting more EM, both Air Force and Army, out playing golf."

Allied police units in shooting match

by Captain J. Taylor, RMP

The first shooting competition ever between teams from the American, British, French and local Berlin police units will take place at Rose Range March 21 starting at 9 a.m.

Three classes of weapons will be used in the competition: pistol, submachinegun, and rifle, with each member of each team firing each weapon.

A prize for the best over-all team will be provided by the Berlin Police, while prizes for the three individual events will be provided by the French Gendarmerie. The British Royal Military Police will supply participation awards for each team. The U. S. Army MPs will be hosts for the event and serve refreshments.

Anna Miner talks 're-up'

by Gary Newman

A tornado has hit the flatlands. The wind that's raising the dust at Special Troops, Berlin Brigade is Sergeant Anna Miner, Career Counselor. She is the first known female battalion career counselor in USAREUR & Seventh Army. A sense of humor and honesty are the qualities she brings to the task of counseling 1300 men and a hand full of WACs. Add the intrepid will to do a job and she qualifies as a person of excellence.

Anna Miner is from New Hampshire. She graduated from high school in 1969 and landed a job as a legal secretary. She became disillusioned with secretarial work. There had to be more to life; she thought travel, a job that was more than menial, horizons that were larger than those of a small New Hampshire town.

In November of 1969, she joined the Army. After basic training at Fort McClellan, she went to Fort Hollabird, Maryland, to become an intelligence analyst. She soon moved to Fort Bragg where she processed security clearances for a year and a half. Then, wanting a job where she could travel and meet people, she applied and was accepted for recruiters training.

"Way down underneath, the Green Machine is not all that bad," says Anna.

Her first duty as a recruiter was at Charlotte N. C., where she remained for two years recruiting WAC ap-job. There are few WACs in Berlin at this time, and those who are pioneering for those who follow. Applicants. There she met her husband-to-be, Staff Sergeant James L. Miner, who was also on recruiting duty.

She and her husband were assigned to Berlin in late 1973. She was assigned to Special Troops battalion and her husband was assigned to Company C, Fourth Battalion, 6th Infantry.

About her job, Anna says, "The guys are reluctant because they are not sure that a female career counselor can get them what they want. But, they are getting over it."

She goes on to explain that she has an over-abundant number of visitors who come just to ask questions. They come to test her out—to see if she can give them the answers that they want about things that are not in her area, like personnel actions. Some come just to get a look at the lady career counselor.

Does Anna feel that she has to work extra hard because she is a woman in what is traditionally a man's job?

"Yes!" she says, adding that people judge by experience and generalize. If they have a WAC who doesn't do a good job, it will be hard on the next woman who fills the

SGT ANNA MINER, career counselor for Special Troops Battalion, discusses the advantages of an Army career with Staff Sergeant Antonio Tobias, who is assigned to the U. S. Army Hospital Berlin. (Photo by Dan Morales)

She says, "I'm no women's libber," and feels that this is one of the stigmas attached to being a WAC. As she points out, women have been part of the Army since 1945 and getting equal pay. In the future she plans to raise a family. Then, she says, "being a wife and mother will be my job."

Anna is a whirlwind of quick answers and straight talk. Her aim as a career counselor is to get good people. "What I don't want is the drug offender or the person who has been convicted of barracks thefts." She feels that her job as a career counselor is to advise and not to sell. "You can't feed people a lot of baloney. They have already formed opinions and know when you are feeding them a line," says Anna.

Talking with Anna leaves one with the impression that straight talk is more than just a Male Occupational Specialty.

Alamo city is Volksfest theme

San Antonio, the theme of this year's German-American Volksfest, will once again transport Berliners to yet another segment of America's West.

Bright lights, lilting music, the click of chips and the laughter of glamorous showgirls will all be found at Fiesta San Antonio, a subtle blend of Mexican, Old South and Wild West tradition. The festivities will be held from July 25 to August 11 on the field behind the Berlin Brigade Sports Center on Hüttenweg.

The 18 days of gaiety, music and games will feature the flavor of the Alamo City in its most colorful Texas style—complete with its food, frivolity and friendship.

Don't miss the excitement and entertainment of the 14th annual Volksfest.

E-5 promotion rules lowered

Here's good news for E-4s who thought they were too "short" to make E-5. In a dramatic change to the E-5 promotion criteria, Department of the Army has reduced the obligated active service requirement for promotion from 12 months to three months effective March 1.

This means that to be promoted to E-5 once you've achieved standing list status (and have enough promotion points), all you need is three months remaining on active duty. For many personnel, this change means putting on sergeant's stripes without having to extend or re-enlist.

That's not all—the number of promotion points necessary to be placed on a promotion standing list for E-5 have been reduced. Formerly, E-4s in the primary zone (at least 31 months active federal service) needed 500 points to get on the list; now they need only 450 points. For E-4s in the secondary zone (at least 19 but less than 31 months active federal service), the magic number has been cut from 550 to 500 points. This change became effective February 1.

Pet care limited at clinic

The Veterinary Clinic at the U. S. Army Hospital Berlin reminds us that their "primary mission" is to inspect food and facilities for sanitation and to control diseases which are transmitted from animals to man (primarily rabies in Berlin). Any pet care other than the control of diseases transmitted from animal to man depends on the time available once the primary mission has been completed.

Pet care provided by the small animal clinic is by appointment only. The amount of time available for such care is quite limited. Pet owners should seek the services of a civilian veterinarian when necessary.

Know how to use Berlin's taxis!

Should you ever have to call a commercial taxi here in Berlin, remember that you will be charged for the distance traveled from the taxi stand to the point where it picks you up. Berlin taxi rules differ in this respect from those in the States.

Lack of familiarity with this and other facts about local taxis have resulted in unfortunate incidents between taxi drivers and members of the Berlin Command.

Taxi meters in Berlin are calibrated in two rates: Rate 1, used by empty taxis while enroute to pick up passengers and on normal working days (Monday-Saturday, except legal holidays) during the hours of 6 a.m. to midnight; and Rate 2, used during the hours from midnight to 6 a.m. and on Sundays and legal holidays.

If you order a taxi in advance, an additional fee of DM 1 will be charged. If you cancel the trip, you will be responsible for the amount indicated on the meter. In addition, there will be a surcharge of DM 1 added to the fare indicated on the meter. This surcharge was authorized by the city government to cover expenses added by the fuel crisis.

The Berlin Observer will present more taxi information next week.

Customs & rationed items

Military personnel should remember that they may not import or export rationed items in unaccompanied baggage or by mailing through the APO system. This restriction applies to alcoholic beverages, coffee, tea and tobacco products.

Any amount of these items imported through German postal or commercial freight channels by authorized personnel will be subject to German customs control and payment of applicable German import duty.

These restrictions are spelled out in USAREUR Regulation 550-175. The regulation adds that, subject to additional restrictions on the types of goods that may be carried in government-owned or -controlled transportation (the Military Airlift Command, for example), authorized personnel may import or export on their person or in accompanied baggage, without payment of customs duties, rationed items in amounts not exceeding the following:

- Cigarettes—220 cigarettes for import, 600 for export.
- Other tobacco products—250 grams or about 8.8 ounces for import, 500 grams or about 17.6 ounces for export.
- Coffee—500 grams or approximately 17.6 ounces, or one of the following: pure soluble coffee (125 grams or approximately 4.4 ounces); mixed coffee extracts (250 grams or approximately 8.8 ounces).
- Tea, cocoa and chocolate or chocolate products: 500 grams (17.6 ounces).
- Wines and spirits—for import, two liters of spirits or sparkling wine, and two liters of still wine; for export, reasonable amounts in noncommercial quantities.

For additional information on all manner of customs matters, contact the Berlin office of the 42nd MP Group (Customs) at military 3522.

Skiing's an up & down affair for 3-6 soldiers

by Ralph Callaway

Ski training! For free! Breaking away from the usual drudgery of a MTA trip, this year the men of the 3rd Battalion, 6th Infantry included ski training in their MTA training. A typical group included the men of the weapons Platoon, Charlie Company.

Four days to learn to ski—impossible, I thought. But maybe it isn't. The first day the instructor, Specialist 4 Thomas Grice, took us to a field and demonstrated the proper way to get into skis. Clamp over the toe, cables underneath the first hooks, over the second and around your heel.

If that sounds different from the way you do it on your skis, you're right. These are cross-country bindings on military skis, and can be adjusted for either Alpine type bindings or for a toe-only fastening for cross-country.

After finally getting the bindings on properly, you stood up. Safe at last! Almost, I thought—those things were slippery! And so went the rest of the morning—up-down, up-down, until finally one could stand for a straight five minutes without falling. The problems started when the instructor told us to move forward. Whooie! All over again! One thought he'd get the hang of it!

After finding we could walk—after learning to shift our weight right—we went on to turns. For simple turns, you lifted the ski and set it down more or less in the direction you wanted to go.

For the hard ones, you twisted your ankle slightly to put more weight on an edge of the ski. This was supposed to turn you in the proper direction. At first, though, all it did was give you a sore ankle.

After we had our turns straight, we went the advanced class—tag on skis. While it seemed silly, it helped us build confidence in our ability to make the skis do more or less what we wanted them to do. We also fell a lot!

On the second day came the big test, even though all the muscles we had discovered the day before didn't want to do anything. We practiced a little bit more and then went on to a 10-kilometer cross-country ski trip. Over hill and dale and along the flats, we discovered a few new things. Like downhill skiing doesn't work too well over rocks. Uphill skiing doesn't work at all. You have to sidestep. And no matter how well you think you're doing, there's a fall out there waiting on you.

A little relaxation

The third and fourth days let us relax a little, because then we were introduced to the skiing you see on TV and all the posters—Alpine or downhill skiing.

After cross-country, this seemed easy. All we had to do was hold on to a bar up to the top of the hill and slide down—but slowly! We were not quite up to the Jean Claude class yet. All day, up-down, up-down, fall, up-down. After two days of this, we had just about used everything up. But it was fun, and we can't wait to try it again, (after our muscles recover)!

Maybe we'll try one of those ski-weeks, but I hope

PUTTING HIS BEST FOOT FORWARD is SGT Robert Callie from Charlie Co. 3-6. The battalion spent four days learning to ski while in the MTA. they don't have military instructors. That was doing it the hard way!

'Be a brother,' says 4-6 poet

Larry Anthony King is a cook in the 4th Battalion, 6th Infantry mess hall. In his spare time, he writes poetry. Larry had the opportunity to share some of his work with the command when he was asked to read the following poem at the Black History Dinner held last Friday night at the Club 50.

"Brother" by Larry King

Brother, the world is changing,
Where will we be tomorrow?
Can you arrange things
so there will be no sorrow?
Brother, be a brother!
Let's help one another.
The children, oh, they don't know what to do!
Where will they go?
Everybody wants to make it,
but everybody can't take it.
Brother, please be a brother.
You don't have to be Black or White to help somebody see the light.
Look at the nation,
The cost of living is high.
Some of us are playing games and our head is in the sky.
Skag, coke, grass,
and a dollar for a gallon of gas.
Brother, leave the drugs alone—
take care of yourself.
Don't forget about your home.
What happened to the Golden Rule?
Killing and stealing,
thinking that's cool.
Brother, be a brother!
Let's help one another!

'Enter The Dragon'

BRESS YOU! Here we see Bruce Lee and John Saxon practicing the ancient Chinese martial art of Ge Sund Hyt or aggressive sneezing. As you can see, John Saxon (right) is a master of the art which is denoted by the black Kleenex worn around his waist. Two months after this movie was made, Bruce Lee (upside down-side) was shot down as a UFO. (Photo by Warner Bros.)

by Michael S. McCollum

ENTER THE DRAGON — This was Bruce Lee's last film and is perhaps the best of the Fung Yu thrillers. The martial arts master is invited to participate in a Karate tournament on a mysterious island near Hong Kong. It takes all of Mr. Lee's deadly skills to survive the dangers of the fateful visit. It might take all of your skills to keep from throwing up after seeing this turkey.

SCREAM BLACULA SCREAM — Maybe that'll be your reaction after having to pay 75 cents to see the worst horror/sci fi film since The Attack of the Jello Monster from Yog. Our Black Power advocate from Transylvania reappears in Louisiana. That's it.

THE FRIENDS OF EDDIE COYLE are the only thing going for this aging underworld freelance operator who works both sides of the fence. He's trying for a big break, but it's a dangerous game and his friends can get heavy when they're crossed.

CAPTAIN APACHE — I don't believe this thing is still making it's rounds in the movie circuit! Lee Van Cleef is undoubtedly the worst actor to hit the stage since King Kong. CPT Apache, an Indian working for the Army, is sent to investigate the murder of a reservation commissioner. He uncovers a plot to murder the president and have the deed blamed on the Indians. I'd rather pay 50 cents to watch grass growing. If you enjoy this one, get out your crayons and drop us a line to let us know.

IMPORTANT PROGRAM NOTE TO OUR VIEWERS

During the next few weeks, there will be numerous last minute changes to the published program schedule. The problem is caused by slowdown in the mail delivery of our television films. AFRTS-LA Angeles is sending us special film packages to insure that we have enough material to remain on the air. However, these packages do not contain all of the same programs that are presently being shown on AFN-TV Berlin. We cannot schedule these special film packages in advance, because we are not sure precisely when they will arrive here. We will strive to stick to the published schedule whenever possible and will promote the changes during our broadcast day. This undesirable situation should be resolved by late spring. Until then, we appreciate your patience and understanding.

Mariendorf Race Track

In the borough of Tempelhof's Mariendorf district, a "first" in Europe was constructed that deserves to be called a new attraction in Berlin, of not to say Germany. At the Mariendorf Trotting Race Track the first multi-purpose tribune house was put into use in November of last year and its ultra modern structure is an imposing landmark in this section of Berlin, which has a rather smalltown character.

Now a visit to the races, which are on each Wednesday at 6 p.m. and Sunday at 2 p.m., is no longer a question of the weather. Behind the huge glass front the race happenings can be observed from five different levels. One can choose between standing places on the ground floor, comfortable seats with a good view from each one the next level, or from the table of the restaurant level, where you sit in a cozy atmosphere having a snack or a meal. Of course, the most modern betting facilities are close at hand on each level. When you take the elevator or climb up the stairs to the top level of the new tribunes, you have a grand view over the track and the surroundings. While you are up there, you might bring to mind that you are in the biggest tribune house of this kind in Europe and the first tribune that has been built in such a terrace form.

If you aren't such a horse sport fan, but still would like to get acquainted with this novelty, then you are welcome to come out on the days when there aren't any races — this also is new. The Panorama Restaurant is open daily from 4 p.m. on and there is music and dancing awaiting you — the place is so lovely that clubs hold their formal balls here. Don't make your way out here on Monday, however, because that is the one day when the gates are closed to everyone. If you want to make sure that you get a table, call 741 85 27 or 741 70 11.

Opened in 1913

While this glamorous tribune house is brand new, the track itself looks back on quite a traditions already. It was opened in 1913, after which it went down in the world's racing annals as the first one to use starting gates and install floodlights (seems that pioneers have always been at work here!). However, at the end of the Second World War, 40 per cent of its stalls and buildings lay in ruins, and its oval trotting course was heavily pitted with bomb craters.

Fortunately enough the track was regraded and placed back into operation on July 3, 1946. And from then on its crowds grew and its facilities were improved. In 1952 it was named as the site for the annual German Trotting Derby Sept. 1-8 this year. Since then, this sulky racing circuit has become one of Germany's largest, with some 800 trotters currently housed in its stables. With the installation of a computerized totalizer system, it has become one of the nation's most modern tracks.

It is no wonder, then, that the Trotting Race Club Mariendorf has succeeded in having the first of the four World Champion Trotting Race Days to be held in Berlin. On Easter Monday, April 15, eight sulky champions from three continents will race for the much desired professional title. Put a big mark on this day on your calendar, because it is sure to be an exciting event with international flair. I wouldn't, however, wait so long until visiting the track.
