

Busing changes ahead

by Janet Motto

Major changes in military bus routes and schedules will go into effect, April 12, according to Maj. David J. Petta, deputy transportation officer.

The current Army bus routes and schedules have been under review during the past year, Petta said. Transportation officials searched for, and found ways to improve service and efficiency while at the same time cutting costs. The proposals were submitted to, and approved by, Brig.

Gen. John E. Rogers, community commander.

"Present scheduled bus operations serve the community well," said Petta, "but we thought there should be a way to 'fine tune' it."

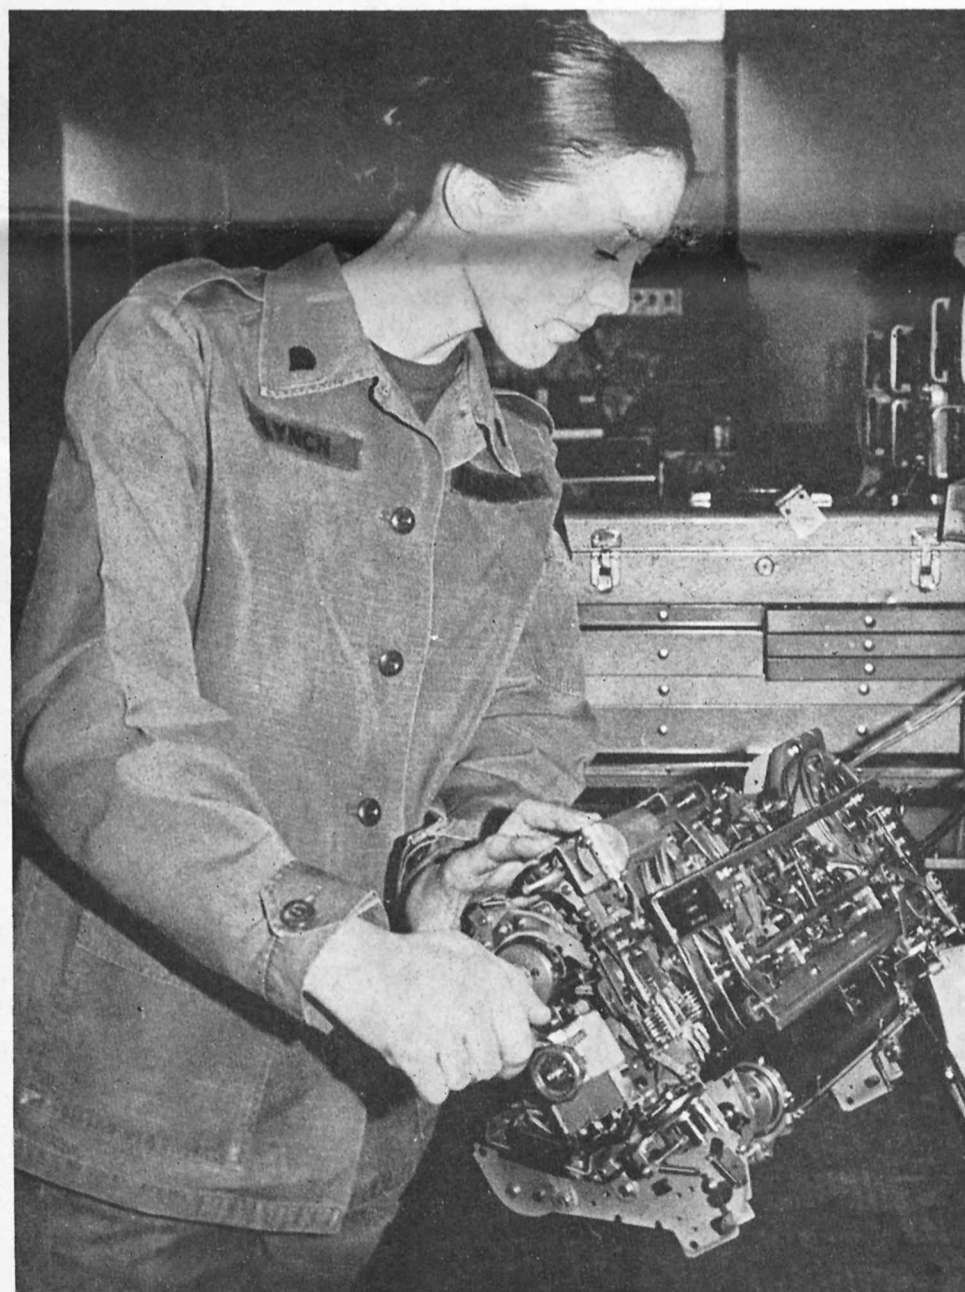

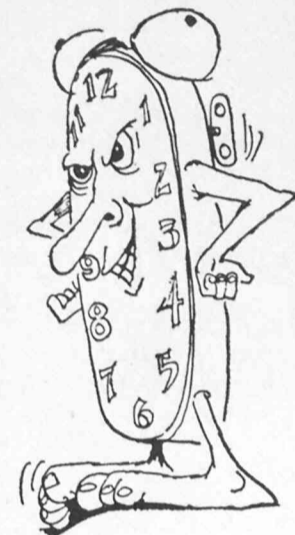

Fine tuning in this case, means realigning some service, adding buses where needed, standardizing bus routing plates, incorporating several "specials" within the major routes, and an attempt to end what Petta terms "scenic routes."

Under the new system, buses will be named "A," "B," "C," "East Loop," "West Loop" and "H" routes. Instead of the red, green, brown and blue routing plates currently displayed on buses, all plates will have a red background with white letters. This color combination is currently used for the Dueppel Housing Area buses. The American school buses will continue to use white route designators and John F. Kennedy School will still use yellow.

Under the new busing plan, the "A" and "A-1" routes serving the Dueppel Housing area will be combined. One "A" bus, an express, will

TOTAL CONCENTRATION — Sp4 Sherri J. Lynch, USACC, Field Station, Berlin, concentrates on repairing a teletype. Tuesday, Lynch was named

USAREUR top soldier from Berlin

"Oh wow, I did it," thought Sp4 Sherri J. Lynch, USACC, Field Station, Berlin, as she nervously listened to the announcement. She had just been selected the USAREUR Soldier of the Year.

Lynch, who was named the Association of the United States Army, Berlin Soldier of the Year earlier this month, represented Berlin in the USAREUR board held in Wiesbaden, FRG on Tuesday.

Twelve soldiers, 10 males and two females, from throughout Europe were there to compete for the title.

"It was a short board," said Lynch, "and I thought it was easier than the one here. The questions were military related, but weren't basic soldiering questions. They asked a lot of things to which there weren't definite answers. They were looking for our opinions and what kind of thoughts we could pull from our heads."

Following the initial question and answer period in front of the board, Lynch said she felt confident she'd done well.

"I thought I did well, but from talking to the other individuals here I knew they were excellent soldiers. So, I was prepared to lose too"

It was a nervous group of soldiers who filed back into the board room to hear the final results. The president of the board, CSM Walter W. Krueger, USAREUR sergeant major, reviewed the questions soldiers were asked, gave them the answers the SPRING FORWARD — On Sunday Germany will change to "Summertime" hours, the equivalent to the U. S. Daylight Saving Time. U. S. Forces in Germany will observe the time change and everyone is reminded to reset their clocks from 2 to 3 a.m. Sunday. Summertime ends at 3 a.m. on Sept. 27 when clocks will be set back an hour.

Community blood drive starts soon

The USAREUR Blood Drive 1981 will be on here April 8 and 9 for all active duty military, Government Service and Local National employees and their family members, according to Lt. Col. Bernard F. Griffard, deputy chief of staff, Community Affairs.

"The Blood Drive will be conducted by the USAREUR Blood Bank, which provides whole blood and plasma to all hospitals within USAREUR. Without an adequate supply of blood to draw upon, the lives of both our fellow soldiers and family members could be endangered in the event of an emergency," said Brig. Gen. John E. Rogers, community commander, in a letter to commanders here.

If woman says no; stop or else

A man asks a woman to join him for a car ride. She accepts.

They drive around the countryside for a while and then end up at a lover's point. He starts making sexual advances. She responds.

Things progress until she suddenly yells "stop" and tries to push him away. But he doesn't stop and finally has his way.

Could this man be brought up on a rape charge?

If you say no, you may be one of the many people who are confused about rape.

In a case like this, regardless of initial consent, once a woman says "no," any force by the man may result in a rape charge, according to Army officials.

There are a number of myths about rape that many men and women believe are true.

Some of the myths include:

● It couldn't have been rape. She wasn't beaten and he didn't use a weapon.

● "She didn't fight it, so it couldn't possibly have been rape."

● "She asked for it."

● "There is no such thing as rape. Every woman secretly wants to be taken by force."

● "Only stupid or loose women are raped."

Men should be aware that when a woman says "no" she means it, officially say. Forcing her to go "all the way" could bring a rape charge.

A man who thinks he can commit rape without getting caught should know that the chances of being caught are increasing all the time.

Men should also be aware of the impact rape has on a woman. Besides possibly injuring her during the assault, rape can psychologically scar a woman for life.

Men can keep from crossing the line between "Mr. Nice" and the potential rapist by keeping the following in mind:

● Differences in background cause different views of women and sex.

● When a woman says "no" it doesn't mean yes

● Petting doesn't automatically mean that a woman wants sexual intercourse.

● If she offers a drink at her place, that doesn't mean she wants sex. This also applies when a man invites a woman to his place.

Women are a small part of the Army's population figures. A woman, out of necessity, will often mix with a group of men; for example, watching television in the dayroom. Men shouldn't take this to be a sexual invitation.

What it all boils down to is that a woman's body is hers. Men have no right to it unless she says so. (USA-REUR PAO release)

Learn your part by visiting past battlefields

The 120th anniversary of one of America's most important historic events will be celebrated next month. It was on April 12, 1861 that the Civil War began when Confederate artillery bombarded Fort Sumter in the harbor of Charleston, S.C.

Thus began a bloody war which claimed more than 600,000 lives. The figures don't seem large compared to the losses suffered by all sides during World War II. But the population of the United States was only 33 million at the time.

Today, we have a population almost seven times as large as we had 100 years ago. If 600,000 is multiplied by seven, the result is 4.2 million. This helps put the tragic losses of the Civil War—or War Between the States—into perspective.

The wounds of the Civil War were slow to heal. In fact, it has taken about 120 years for the scars to disappear. This is not to say that we don't have regional rivalries, but the differences today are not likely to lead to armed conflict. We have made peace with ourselves, which is no small accomplishment for our nation-continent.

The Civil War lasted more than four years, but the nation survived to rebuild its cities and repair its moral foundations.

It would be inappropriate to say that the war was a good thing for the nation, but we cannot overlook the monumental sacrifices Americans made to defend their sacred values.

The lesson is our generation must shoulder the burdens that were carried by our fathers and earlier generations. It is a privileged burden.

Many of our military installations in the United States are near battlefields of our earlier wars. It is not a bad idea to visit these battlefields. After all, a portion of those fields belongs to each of us. It is a good idea occasionally to look at the land now ours to defend.

Soldiers overseas have a similar opportunity. A free world is a healthy thing to behold. (ARNEWS)

Sorry folks, I goofed I'll set record straight

by R. Gibson

Recently I reported on the International Police Weapons shoot that found our own 287th Military Police Company matched against members of the French, British and German police forces.

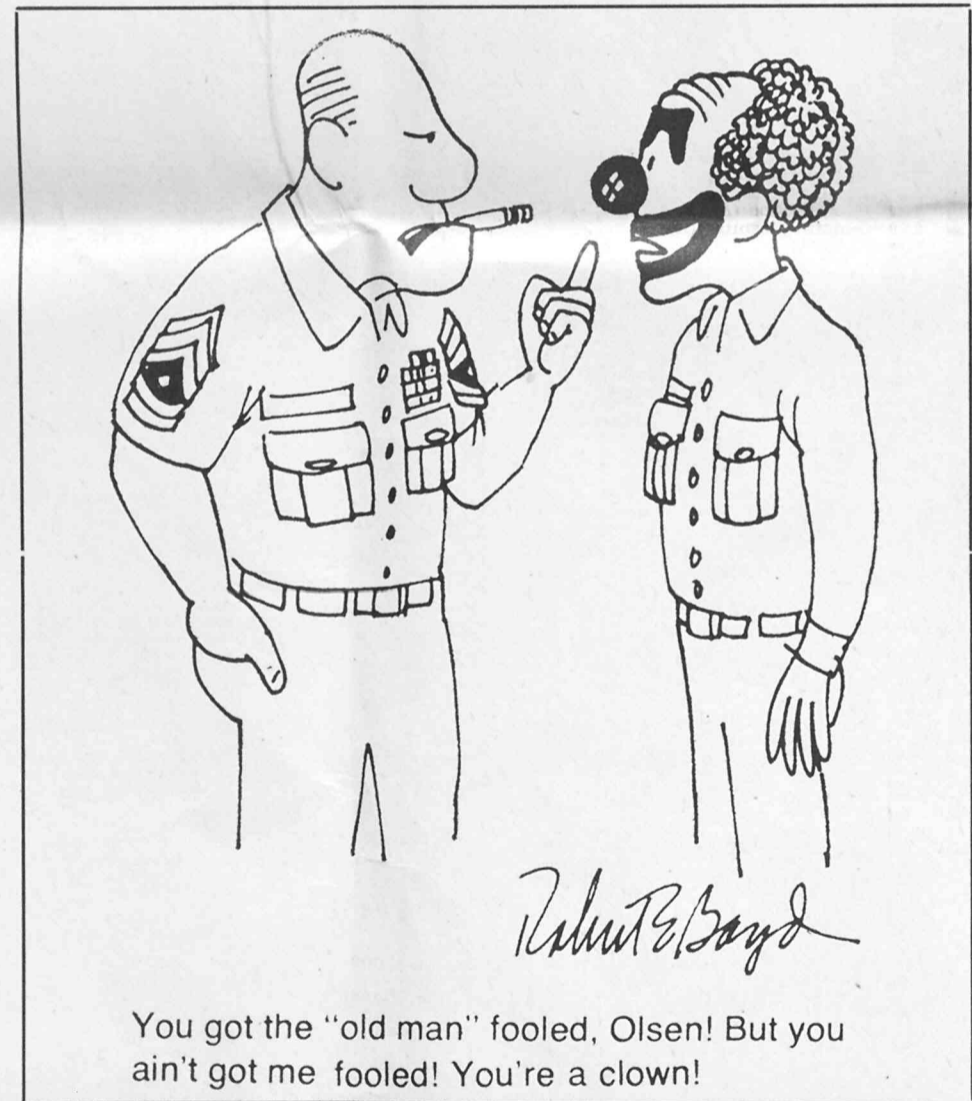

In my article I erroneously reported that the German police team won the pistol and machinegun events. Now I stand before you steeped in shame, because my report was false.

I hope all the members of the MP company, and especially the members that took part in the weapons match will accept my most humble apology. Now let me set the record straight.

SSgt. Dennis Albritton led the American pistol team to victory, and he himself won first place in the pistol event. Also a hearty congratulations to Sgt. John C. Herring for taking first place in the rifle event.

The Americans took second place in the sub-machinegun event and their two first places and the second place, did in fact give them the highest total score of the day.

You got the "old man" fooled, Olsen! But you ain't got me fooled! You're a clown!

FOUR IN THE CORNER — Sp4 Martin M. Millsaps, Company B, 3rd Battalion, plays a little pool on his off time while on Berlin Brigade guard duty.

Story and photos
by Linda Jach

HUP, TWO, THREE, FOUR — highly shined boots are one of the requirements of soldiers while on Berlin

Brigade Guard. Their brass must be highly shined as well. In fact, all of their uniform must be in top shape because they are so highly visible.

Spit 'n polish duty OK

When a battalion's in their blue block and gets detailed for Berlin Brigade Guard, it's no easy task.

For however long the unit assumes the guard, the soldiers must eat, sleep and live on the Clay Headquarters compound. However, the men of Company B, 3rd Battalion, who have guard now, say it's not as bad as it sounds.

"They have ping-pong tables, vending machines with snacks and we're allowed to go to the PX or movie on our shift off," said Pvt. 2 Jerry Johnson

Although the guards get 12 hours off, they must sleep, eat and prepare their uniforms, in that time, too.

"I get about eight hours sleep," said Sgt. Charles R. Eddington.

"I get about four hours," said Sgt. Frank J. Griffin.

"I sleep on most of my time off," said PFC Joseph Herise. "It all depends on the individual's needs."

One soldier who doesn't get all the free time the others do is the Officer of the Guard.

"I'm on call 24 hours a day," said 1st Lt. Mark Tolbert III. "I have to ensure that all my men are informed of their duties and make sure they're in a very high state of readiness. All of these soldiers must maintain a military bearing at all times. I have no time off myself and am restricted to the compound."

No matter what position or duty the guards have there are certain responsibilities that all share.

"It only takes me about 30 minutes to square my uniform away," said Sgt. Richard Crumm. "You see at the briefing before we assume guard, we're told what's expected of us as far as uniform appearance, so we have enough time to get it up to par. Once it's there, it doesn't take much to maintain."

"The soldier's boots must be shined as well or better than mine, since the guards are highly visible when they're on duty," said SSgt. Marshall D. Fleming, security NCO, Headquarters Commandant. "The same thing goes for their brass. Also, I check for correct wear of their insignias, medals, etc." said the former drill sergeant.

"BB Guard is an experience all its own," said Crumm. "Right before I'm about to go on duty I start preparing myself to get my mind on the job".

Before assuming guard, soldiers not only have to have their uniform squared away, but they must also know their general and special orders.

All the soldiers agreed however, that this wasn't a big task because all it takes is a little review.

After these men are through sleeping, preparing their uniform and perhaps getting in a little recreation time, it's back to work. So it goes for the men of Company B, 3rd Battalion until the next unit assumes guard.

ONE MILE, NO SWEAT — PFC Jeff Rounds (left), Sp4 Jim Andrews and Sp4 Lee Roepke all of Company B, Field Station,

Berlin, keep the pace steady as they near the end of their run. Saturday, 22 members of the company got together and ran a 65 mile relay around the American sector of Berlin. This was just a warm-up to a run coming in August, where they'll attempt to run the length of the Berlin Wall.

Record-sized hoagie hit at Starlight opening

What's 35-feet, 3-inches long and weighs 475 pounds?

No, it's not a boa constrictor. It's the longest recorded hoagie sandwich in USAREUR.

The sandwich highlighted the Grand Reopening of Berlin's Starlight Grove Enlisted Club, which was partially closed for renovation approximately six months ago.

It's not too hard to make a hoagie like the 35-footer. All that's needed is six, six-foot sections of bread, 300 pounds of assorted luncheon meats, 50 pounds cheese, 10 pounds onions, 15 pounds tomatoes, 36 heads of lettuce, four jars of green olives and two gallons of Starlight Grove's special sauce.

At a ceremony held Friday, Brig. Gen. John E. Rogers, Berlin Brigade commander, CSM Lester W. Conover, Jr., brigade sergeant major and the Starlight's manager, SSgt. James Glesmann were the first to slice the hoagie, but not the first to taste it.

The honor of the first bite went to some members of Combat Support Company, 4th Battalion, 6th Infantry, who had just returned from their Army Training and Evaluation Program that evening and were still clad in their field uniforms.

"It's good," was all they had to say. And actions spoke louder than words. The sandwich was totally consumed within two hours.

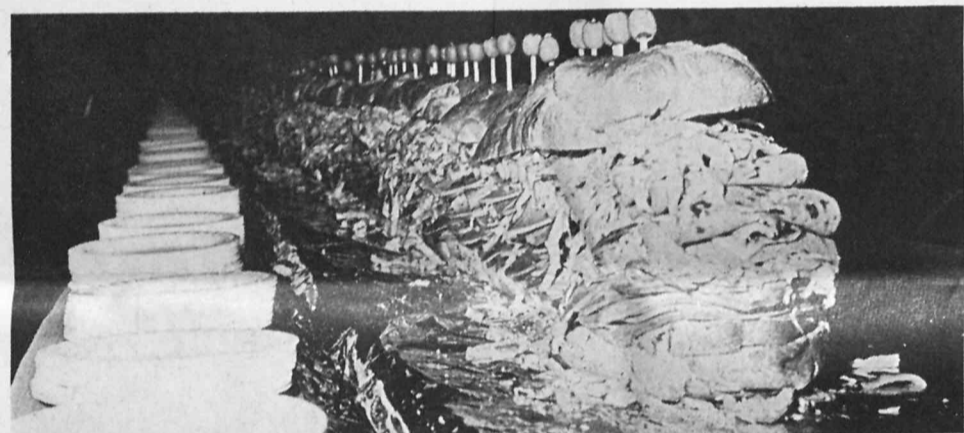

The extensive renovation included installing a new bar and enlarging the area around it for more table space. Restrooms and the stage area were also improved, according to Glesmann.

Now that the club is fully reopened, the club managers plan to provide live-band entertainment on Friday and Saturday nights.

MMM, GOOD — Pvt. 2 Jim McNulty tips his hat to get a bigger bite. Sp4 Gary Schumacher closes his eyes to get his mouth open wider, while a friend offers something to wash the food down with. No matter what the technique used, all soldiers agreed, "It's good." (Photo by Linda Jach)

WHERE WILL IT END — Layers upon layers of luncheon meats, lettuce, cheese, onions and tomatoes made up the longest recorded hoagie sandwich in USAREUR. Two hours after the sandwich was presented to the guests attending the Berlin Starlight Grove's reopening, it was gone.

4th Battalion home again

Troops 'weather' ARTEP

Story and photos
by Dave Moreland

Soldiers from 4th Battalion got a long, hard work out last week when they underwent their annual Army Training and Evaluation Program.

The ARTEP, conducted primarily in the Grunewald and the Dough Boy City at Parks Range, demanded special effort from the evaluators, aggressors, support troops. From the engineers of Combat Support Battalion placing explosive charges to simulate an artillery barrage, to truck drivers from 3rd Battalion moving soldiers to their next site, every soldier was kept busy. The aggressors from 3rd Battalion probably had some of the tightest schedules of the ARTEP, being rushed from one mock battle to another supplying prisoners for the 4th Battalion to process.

Fatigue and frustration were common among the soldiers. Each of them wanted to do well on the ARTEP even if it took some pretty long hours to do it. Even the classic 'hurry up and wait' was tolerated well as long as they knew they were getting the mission completed.

"One night I only had an hour of sleep," said Sp4 Willard Risher, Company A, "we were always on the move."

Pvt. 2 Jon Latshaw, Company B, agreed and added ruefully, "We did a lot of movement-to-contact, but we didn't make much contact."

When it was over, each of the soldiers viewed the training differently. Some, like Sp4 Mark Navare, Company A, concentrated on the actual training, and how well it went. "The aggressors really did a good job," he said, "they played the game well."

Other soldiers were concerned with the more basic of an infantryman's problems — lack of sleep, shortage of hot food, and weather conditions.

Most soldiers understand that to test a battalion's readiness, an ARTEP has to be demanding. Long hours and irregular meals are as much a part of an ARTEP as launching an assault or defending a building. The troops weathered these difficulties well, and even agreed the training could have been worse.

Like PFC Jesse Deel, Company A, said, "at least it didn't rain."

Medics get bed-side training

by Sue Sweeney

Under the Medical Proficiency Training program, medics from 2nd and 3rd Battalions have the chance to get special, on-the-job training and experience at the hospital here. Two medics from 2nd, and three from 3rd, are currently taking advantage of the 12-week program.

The medics rotate from one department to another. The departments they work in include: the emergency room, multi-service ward, pediatrics, the operating room, physical exam and the obstetrics ward. They also receive formal Skill Qualification oriented training twice a week.

"The guys are very enthusiastic about working here," said SFC Richard Smith, NCOIC for Nursing Education. "Besides the assigned areas the medics work in, they also help-out in other departments which are understaffed for the day."

"I like working at the hospital more than in my unit," said Sp4 Harry McNeary. "I deal with a variety of problems and it's good preparation for my SQT."

"It's refreshing to hear the guys ask questions about and why a certain method or procedure works during their SQT classes and while participating in this program," added Smith.

During a free moment, the medics can be heard swapping hospital and infantry stories.

Swapping stories like that is also a good experience," said Smith. "It gives the hospital medics a chance to hear what it's like to work on McNair and in the field and gives the infantry medics a closer look at the hospital-side of the work."

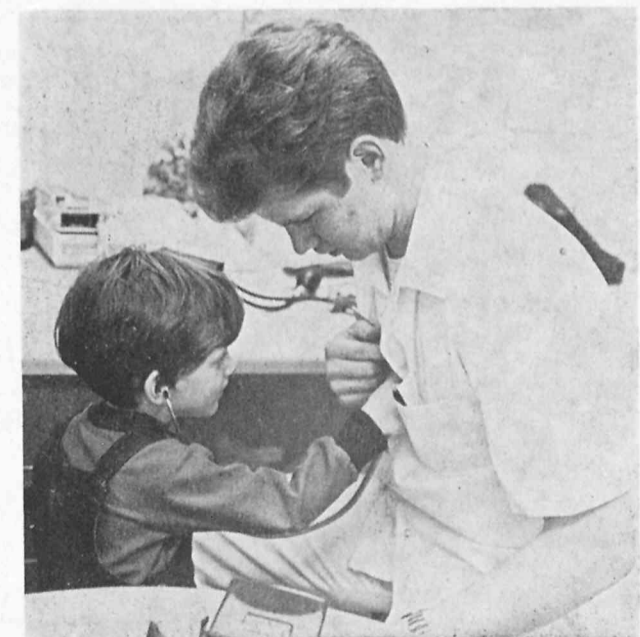

"Working at the hospital allows me to deal with more than just infantry soldiers," said PFC Robert Hyde. "It's not a routine job and I get to test my learning in real life situations. For example I can assist with an EKG or take blood from a patient's arm. When I'm in the field, it's very difficult to find anyone needing either done."

All departments allow the medics to work directly with the patients. And, whether they're changing bed sheets, taking blood pressures or screening a child at the pediatrics ward, the medics do the best they can to make sure the patient is "going to be just fine."

Ready, set

WHAT'S HAPPENING? — SSgt. Billy Clark, Company A, 3rd Battalion, stands ready as he checks out the action taking place on the streets of Dough Boy City. The 3rd Battalion troops acted as the aggressor force during the 4th Battalion ARTEP.

WHAT'S UP DOC? — PFC Robert Hyde, Headquarters Company, 3rd Battalion, gets his heart checked out by Air Force family member Bobby Silverio. Hyde is currently involved in the Medical Proficiency Training program at the hospital.

MSAD supports morale of all

by Dean Brown

Some people have never been to the circus, a problem remedied this month by ITT Tours, which invites you to join their trip to the Williams-Alt-hoff Circus with the benefit of discount coupons. The circus starts March 20 and stays in the city up to April 20.

More tours

That is merely the first in a long line of offerings from ITT. Wednesday sees the grand opening of ITT's new offices in the sports center on Huettenweg. Starting at 3 p.m., you are invited to drop in and sample the free gifts, door prizes, and newly-reorganized services of MSAD's travel services. Talk to the staff while you are there about ITT's plans for expanded programs both in and out of the city of Berlin.

On April 11, ITT will take you one of the most successful of American musicals, "West Side Story." On April 12, you can visit the Soviet Military Museum and the Museum of Natural History in East Berlin: before the museums, have brunch at the Harnack House, an optimal element of the tour.

Call ITT at 6523 about other entertainment ranging from a Mongolian barbecue to a tour of the Reichstag.

DYA offerings

The DYA recognizes the work of scores of volunteers Tuesday at 3 p.m. in the Harnack House. If you are among these persons, and if you have not received your invitation, call the DYA at 6952 or 6239.

Tomorrow, the DYA stages a teen dance starting at 7 p.m., and a preteen dance takes place on April 4 starting at 6:30. Young people can see the circus on April 16, a trip requiring you to sign up at the DYA's program office.

Rec centers

Call the Hi Lite at 3554 about its starving artist fair to be held in early May in conjunction with a community arts and crafts bazaar.

On Sunday, the All American at McNair stages a flea market from noon until 4 p.m., with live entertainment. Call 3125 about the All American's photo contest ("My Best Pictures of Berlin") and get into position to win a prize. On April 9, go Latin with a barbecue and Latino-disco; make reservations in person by April 6.

The USAREUR chess championships will be held at the All American on April 11. Call to sign yourself up and compete in West Germany if you end up as the winner.

Special event

Fans of the absurd remember last year's Gong Show (at the All American, McNair) with special fondness. They will be ecstatic to learn that the event will re-appear this year under a new name: The Bong Show. If you want to be part of this celebration of the nonrational, show up for auditions at the All American on April 7 or 8 between 6 and 9 p.m.

Library news

From April 5 to 11, National Library Week brings Berlin a variety of activity ranging from a community open house to a barber shop quartet, a candlelight concert, and an all-day festival — among yet other events. Call 6119 for more information on this stunning line-up.

Music and crafts

If you are part of a vocal, instrumental or specialty act — solo or group — show up for auditions for the USAREUR Star Shuttle Entertainment Contest going on tomorrow at 2 p.m. in the Music Center at Andrews: call 6907 for details.

If you would like to try to portray an American Indian in ceremonies and dances at the Volksfest this year, call 6907.

Starting April 24, the Andrews Theater Center is the scene of Alan Ayckburn's hilarious play called "How the Other Half Loves." The play will run for two weekends, including three performances in dinner theater. Call 3550 for details.

If you do not understand your car, stop by the Andrews Auto Crafts Shop for classes on any Thursday of your choice at 6 p.m. The Woodshop at Andrews offer classes soon in veneering and wood lathe operation; it also offers classes in basic woodworking starting April 21. Call 3544 for details.

Clothes creating; 2nd Battalion soldier likes it

by Sue Sweeny

"When I inherited my godmother's sewing machine, I wouldn't touch it for months, because I was superstitious," said PFC Joseph E. Miller.

Now he designs and tailors most of his own clothes as well as some of the clothes to be displayed at the MSAD's Funk and Fashion Show tonight.

Miller, from Headquarters and Headquarters Company, 2nd Battalion, started designing clothes when he was 11 years old. That was when he realized that companies did not make clothes that would fit him in styles that he liked.

"Designing clothes is a talent that I have developed on my own, but I am planning to go to school at Temple University in Pennsylvania to become a professional," said Miller.

"Men's clothes are more difficult for me than women's," said Miller. "I like to do men's semi-formal the best though. These garments present a challenge."

This challenge is present in varied degrees in all of the clothes he designs and tailors. After he gets an idea for a piece of clothing, he criticizes and changes it many times. Then he draws a rough draft of the garment to see how it looks outside of his head. Picking out the material to project the right look is the next step. Miller says synthetics are best for semi-formal and leisure wear. After he gets the correct material, Miller cuts the pattern and begins sewing.

"On my first suit, I made no major errors until I began to sew. Then I sewed the sleeves on the wrong side of the suit," Miller recalled. "I don't do that anymore," he laughed.

"It's cheaper to make my own clothes than to buy them," said Miller. "Design ideas seem to come when I am busy at work, so I store them until I can get to a pad and begin work on them."

"Some designs come from other people's input. Often someone will ask me to make them a garment for a certain occasion and give me the material. Then all I do is prepare the best garment I can with that," said Miller.

"Designing for the fashion show was a fun project. My work is going to be on display along with some from the Main Exchange and others. That makes me feel terrific."

Hi Lite rec center sponsoring fashion show, dancing tonight

A fashion show combined with a dance occurs tonight at 8 in the Hi Lite recreation center at Andrews.

Both male and female models will demonstrate fashionable clothing ranging from casual sportswear to formal wedding attire.

The show will consist of four different scenes that depict the fashion world from the casual side, a Nashville flavor, disco wear, and the clothes you need after six in the evening. Organizers of the show explain that over fifty outfits will appear in the presentation.

After the fashion show, the music of Solid Funk will entertain guests interested in dancing or simply listening.

Drinks and hors d'ouvres will also make an appearance at the show in order to maintain a happy atmosphere.

For more information on the show, call the Hi Lite at 3554.

1,600 jog to Volkslauf finish line

The sun was out and so were the runners, and walkers of all ages for the 10.2 kilometer "Volkslauf" and Volks march. The site was picked and the course was set around the lakes at the Grunewald forest, and a total of 22 races were held.

The main event was the "volks de asse" or experts race which was won by Manfred Boehm with an incredible time of 36:53 for 10.2 km. Taking second place was a U. S. Army member Richard Huggins. Huggins had a finishing time of 38:25, followed by Rudi Borrmann's 38:41 giving him third place. Fourth place was awarded to Mulzaf Guenter with 38:58.

From a total field of 1,600 runners, according to Karl-Heinz Fluke, Berlin Sports Association, 1,400 finished in the times prescribed by the association.

An envoy of participants from Company A, 3rd Battalion was led by 1st Sgt. Wayne Gibney. The 3rd Battalion runners totaled 75 and all who ran finished in the 64 minute time limit.

RIGHT JAB — Sanford Robinson, USAB heavyweight champion demonstrates the form and impact that won him his title. Robinson's coach, Joe Rios said Robinson had a very good chance to take the USAREUR title to be hosted by Berlin at the BB Sports Center during the first week in April. We've got next boxing champs

by R. Gibson

Sweat, work and aching muscles are all part of boxing. Long hours and hard work are the things that pay off. Thomas (Rocky) Mazzeo is a man fond of the sport. He is the U.S. Army, Berlin Welterweight champion, and he said that the only thing he likes more than boxing is winning.

Joe Rios is Mazzeo's trainer and coach. He's also the coach for the rest of the Berlin boxing team, and he feels that Berlin has some definite USAREUR champions.

"These fellows work very hard and they have very high hopes for this tournament. The sport of boxing is like anything else, you get out of it only what you put into it." Rios said.

What do the boxers have to say about the up-coming fight? Sanford Robinson, Heavyweight from Deberry, Texas: "I'm going to win!" Gary Johnson, Light Heavyweight from San Diego, Calif., "Berlin on top all the way." Malcolm Harvey, Middleweight from Atlanta, Ga., "I want to do what I've been trained to do and that is fight." Aaron L. Jameson, Middleweight from North, S. C., "I'm going to work hard and be ready to win." Mike Taylor, Welterweight and 1977 USAREUR Light Welterweight Champ, from Baltimore, Md. "I'm going to win it again." Mazzeo, Welterweight from Warminster, Penn. "I'm going to take him out in the second round." Clinton Graves, Lightweight from Hemmingway, S. C. "I don't think there will be anyone there that can beat me." Andre L. Joyner, Featherweight from Patterson, N.J., "All I want to do is win." Ricky Carrillo, Bantamweight from Sequin, Texas. "I'm pretty sure I'll win the Bantamweight."

With all of this enthusiasm it is hard to say for sure how the Berlin team will fair. They deserve to win according to Rios who said that these guys put in about 35 hours a week training.

The big tournament is coming up on Thursday through Sunday at the BB Sports Center. All of the Berlin boxers have a better than fair chance to win their title according to Rios.

2nd Battalion over — 30 court kings

by R. Gibson

The final game of the regular season in the Berlin Brigade over-30 basketball league was played Monday night at the BB Sports Center.

The final confrontation was played by the 2nd Battalion team and the team from 3rd Battalion, ending in an upset by the 2nd Battalion players, as they defeated the team from 3rd Battalion, 49-47.

The players of both teams were so psyched up that several fouls were called on players from both benches. Despite the fouls, the defensive and offensive balance was so fine, there was no way to determine a winner until the final seconds ticked by.

Leading at one point early in the first half by 13 points, the team from 3rd Battalion looked like they would walk away with the win. However, their overwhelming offense met an equally overwhelming 2nd Battalion defense, that proved to hold it's own against the accuracy of number 25, Eric Marshall.

Marshall's eight first-half points carried his team to 27-21 lead at the half, with a six point assist by teammate Royal Watkins, number 27.

Only the players of the 2nd Battalion team know what was discussed at the halftime break, whatever it was, it seemed to make the difference as the 2nd Battalion team came back to tie the score and apply the pressure needed to vanquish 3rd Battalion's dreams of victory.

Coenell Cook of the 2nd Battalion team scored 12 points in the first half, and another six in the second. Teammate Ray Simmons, number 11 backed Cook's effort up, earning 10 points and putting the edge on their victory.

The next time these teams play will be in the double elimination, round robin tournament to decide the season's winner.

MPs - dedicated to difficult job

by R. Gibson

The evening comes like a silent passive demon, bringing with it an unusual warmth for the walled city for this time of year. "This warm weather always brings out the rats," said the MP as he cruises through the streets. Cars flash by and masses of people move through the streets. The MP has developed a keen sense for trouble. He seems to hear things that others would not hear, and see things that would pass unnoticed to the average eye.

The radio squelches an almost inaudible message that spurs the patrolman into action. Reaching for the button that activates the flashing blue light on top of his squad car he stated, "One thing you've got to know to be a good cop is how to drive," as tires squeal around a cobble stone corner.

"The two most dangerous things an MP has to deal with is a domestic disturbance, and a routine traffic stop. Especially if you have a possible DWI. You never know what a drunk driver is going to do."

Military Police Sgt. John C. Herring has been an MP for three years. He has seen a lot of things that he didn't like. One of the things that bothers him about being an MP is the harassment. "It used to bother me a lot if someone called me a pig," said Herring. "I still don't like it, but now I don't let it bother me as much."

His wife, he said, doesn't like his being a cop. But she knows that Herring enjoys his work so she never complains about the long hours and working weekends.

Herring's shift ends at 11 p.m. Then he can go home and try to leave the problems of his work with the desk sergeant.

Coming on to replace Herring and the rest of the men on the swing shift is Sgt. Mike Higgenbotham, shift supervisor, Sp4 Jay Olson and the rest of the midnight shift. They take to the streets and their expectations are summed up in Olson's statement, "Something is going to break tonight, I can just feel it."

It's a little after midnight. Again the radio whispers it's secret message, and the MP's respond to a possible fight at a bar in Berlin's Zehlendorf district. Olson's foot depresses the accelerator to the command "GO GO!" given by Higgenbotham. The engine roars to life, and in a very few moments, as the squad car closes in on the possible hot spot, the radio again cracks, "4-0 disregard." A long sigh of relief passes from both the MP's as they turn of the blue light and slow to a moderate cruise.

Returning to the station the MPs share with one another their memories of different calls. Talking with an air of revelry, the MPs recall the night a large fight broke out at a nearby bar. Some of the discussion is somewhat more remorseful as the patrolmen remember some of the less enjoyable and sad aspects of the job.

Police work is always demanding, rarely enjoyable, and only sometimes exciting. The members of the 237th Military Police Company here are greatly understrength and one wonders, what is it about being a cop that makes these dedicated people work the hours and tolerate the hassels that are characteristic of their corp. People here are invited to find out for themselves by taking part in the MP ride-a-long program. Anyone interested in riding with the MPs can call 3450 to make arrangements.

MEDDAC wins poster contest

Berlin MEDDAC soldiers took the top two places in the U. S. Army Berlin's "Love your Library" poster contest Tuesday.

First place went to Sp4 Rebecca Munoz for her design. Her poster will be sent to Heidelberg for the USAREUR competition.

SSgt. Arnaldo Flores, who took second place, will have his poster displayed here, according to Margarete Rice, reference librarian.

"I really don't know how I got the idea," said Munoz. "I just started fiddling around on paper and it came to me. I can't say I expect to win the USAREUR competition, but I do have a chance."

The designs were chosen by judges, Olaf Weghorn, Morale Support Activities Division's illustrator and Ruth Marmor of the American Art Guild. "The judges were looking for originality, ability and graphic design," said Rice.

If Munoz succeeds in having her poster chosen for best in USAREUR, she will receive a $100 savings bond and her poster will be reproduced and sent to all community libraries in USAREUR for display.

"This is the first time that Berlin has entered the USAREUR contest, but we hope to make it an annual event from now on," said Rice.

Battalion awards plaque to Hi Lite

The Combat Support Battalion recently awarded a plaque to the staff of the Hi Lite Recreation Center, in recognition of their support of the battalion's Reciprocal Dinner held there on Feb. 20.

The presentation was made by Lt. Col. William N. Johnson, battalion commander in a ceremony held on March 18 at the Hi Lite. The plaque was presented to Program Director, Mary Almond. Johnson said "The Hi Lite Recreation Center, and the personnel who work there, are the best I've been associated with in 19 years of Army service." He went on to say, "Their attitude is always one of 'how may we help you.' They are never too busy to serve the soldier."

The Reciprocal Dinner was held to honor the German families that participated in the Christmas Cheer Program, in which members of the battalion were invited guests to many German homes for a home cooked, holiday meal.

Johnson also stated that he "knows of no single service in Berlin that has a better reputation with the soldiers. My only regret is that myself and the other members of the battalion and, Andrews Barracks do not recognize them enough."

The staff of the Hi Lite assisted the battalion by closing the doors to regular business, breaking out the decorations and converting the center into a dining area big enough to house the Germans guests. The staff also helped cook and serve, as well as giving a hand with anything else that needed done.

Prior to assuming his responsibilities in the House, Ford served for 14 years as the Cadet Chaplain at the U. S. Military Academy at West Point.

While at West Point, Ford took a little time off to pursue one of his favorite hobbies — sailing, while embarking on a personal Bicentennial venture. In 1976 he captained the "Yankee Doodle," a 31-foot sailboat, from Plymouth, England to West Point. It took Ford and his two crewman 52 days to cover 5,920 miles.

Ford is also well known for his expertise on the ski slopes. He has held several exhibitions of trick skiing and ski jumping and appeared on the CBS television program "I've Got a Secret" for his backward ski jump.

All members of the Berlin community are invited to meet Ford during Sunday's service.

now operate between Dueppel and the Main Terminal at Truman Plaza on a route similar to the current "A-1" bus.

According to Petta, the "B" and "C" routes reflect the most noticeable changes. The new "B" route will run from the Main Terminal to Park Manor Estate (Schlangenbader), via Pueckler. Persons from Park Manor and Pueckler wishing to travel to the hospital will lose little time catching a connecting bus at the Main Terminal.

TCA route

The "C" route features a direct run to TCA via the hospital. Buses will leave the terminal for TCA every 90 minutes. The travel time will be much shorter with the new express routing. The "C" route will operate daily.

"East and West Loop" changes will have little impact to Andrews and McNair compounds, according to Petta. "Service to these areas actually increases," he said.

The biggest change on these routes will affect drivers, not passengers. Instead of taking 15-minute breaks at Andrews, drivers will now take all breaks at the Main Terminal.

The "H" route will continue evening, Sunday and holiday service, but will not go to TCA. The new "H" route also shortens travel time between Dueppel and Park Manor for most passengers.

There will be some inconveniences under the new system, according to Petta. Service to Turner Barracks (with the exception of the troop duty buses), Schuetzallee and Ringstrasse will be discontinued. Also, fewer special buses will go to the 4-Seasons and Wannsee (seasonal).

TCA falls under both winning and losing categories. Fewer buses will stop there, but the buses leaving the Terminal and TCA every 90 minutes will make travel time shorter through direct routing.

Under the new scheduling, nearly everyone gains extended services. The 30-minute routes between housing areas, kasernes and the Main Terminal will start earlier and end later. Some, according to Petta, will run from 8 a.m. to 6 p.m. And, although some people may find they'll have to transfer buses to reach a particular destination, most bus connections have been coordinated for minimum waiting time.

Special buses on Petta was quick to point out that all of the troop duty buses, school buses, and Sunday school buses will continue as presently scheduled.

"The new system means more efficient use of personnel and equipment," said Petta. "In addition to improving customer service, the changes are expected to cut government fuel costs, increase passenger safety (by eliminating several hazardous, high accident areas), and benefit bus driver scheduling." Transportation officials estimate a nine to 12 percent reduction in bus route fuel consumption, and an overall four percent reduction in Transportation Motor Pool diesel consumption.

No frills

Petta describes the new, streamlined bus service as "no frills." For example, there will now be bus stops on both sides of the street in front of the hospital, eliminating round-the-block travel, and there will be no more scenic tours behind the Botanical Gardens or time consuming trips along Altensteinstrasse.

"We hope no one is totally cut out by the new service," said Petta, "but the changes could mean people on the fringes of the new routes may have to walk a little farther to catch the bus. It should be no farther, though, than some people have to walk now."

Schedules out soon

New bus schedules will be available at the Information Center at Truman Plaza the week of April 6. New route maps and schedules will appear in the "Berlin Observer" on April 10. Watch for further information next month.

Blood

The blood collection team from the 655th Medical Company near Frankfurt will be collecting blood from eligible donors on April 8 at the All American Rec Center on McNair from 9 a.m. to 4 p.m. and on April 9 at the HiLite Rec Center on Andrews from 7 a.m. to 4 p.m.

"The team can accommodate 40 to 45 people per hour," said Griffard. Also, some members of the Berlin MEDDAC will be there to help.

As an added incentive, GS and LN employees will receive four hours off after giving a blood donation, said Griffard.

Last year, the Berlin military community used 639 pints of blood from the USAREUR blood bank, but, only 104 pints of blood were replaced, explained Griffard. "This year our goal is 400 pints."

Donors will be allowed to rest after giving and will be given refreshments, such as coffee, juice, cookies or cake.

There are some eligibility requirements for donors. To find out what they are, contact your unit commander.

"I consider it to be in the personal interest of all members of this community to participate in this worthwhile program," said Rogers.

Soldier

board had been looking for, and presented their comments on how each individual had done in the competition. With the review over, the nervous soldiers braced themselves for the final outcome. Krueger named Lynch the new USAREUR Soldier of the Year.

Lynch remembers that, "Oh wow, I did it," kept going through her head, but added "It wasn't like I couldn't believe it, but I was pleased with myself and a little surprised."

Because of the high caliber of soldier represented at the board she still isn't sure why she was chosen over the others. "Unless it was my speech and the way I answered my questions. From a conversation with the sergeant major, I understand that was the main thing they were looking for."

Lynch received a hero's welcome at the RTO Wednesday morning. The band was playing as she got off the train, and Brig. Gen. John E. Rogers, Berlin Brigade commander, was on hand to congratulate her.

She admits she was surprised by the welcome, but not as surprised as her husband. Said Lynch, "He hadn't heard the news yet, and couldn't figure out why all of the people were at the RTO!"

Lynch will be representing USAREUR in the national AUSA convention to be held this fall in Washington, D.C. She's relieved that this time there'll be no boards although she found them a great learning experience.

"The best thing about going before the boards was all of the information I gained," she said. "You take it for granted you know a lot of the information in the study guide, but you really don't. All soldiers could benefit from standing just a Soldier of the Month board. I'm glad I went and feel I'm a better soldier."
