

It's clean-up time!

Spring Clean-up for the American community begins April 20 and continues until May 6.

"This is the time for everyone to roll up their sleeves, pitch in and work together to make our community kasernes attractive and pleasant places in which to live and work," said Directorate of Engineering and Housing officials.

This is the year's first major cleaning and beautification program where troops will be working in their areas of responsibility and in common use areas, seeding lawns, repairing fences, removing unnecessary signs and doubling clean-up efforts around the installation, according to DEH.

The Facilities Engineering Division of DEH will support the program by assisting in maintenance and sprucing up community grounds. It will provide topsoil, grass seed and gardening tools when needed. However, flowers will not be available for issue until May 18 due to late frost potential, the officials said.

To better serve the community during this cleaning period, the Self-Help Issue Point at the DEH Compound will be open two Saturdays, April 25 and May 2 from 8 a.m. to 1 p.m. The normal operating hours are Monday through Friday, 8 a.m. to 3 p.m.

The SHIP will provide garden tools, grass seed, fertilizer, etc. to senior occupants. Top soil will be delivered on request of senior occupants and occupants of single housing. Call 6666 for more information.

Brig. Gen. John E. Rogers, community commander will inspect installations on April 28 and 29 and housing and community activity areas on May 5 and 6.

Coordinators and activity chiefs will accompany the community commander during the inspection of their respective areas of responsibility. Senior building occupants will accompany the inspection party at their respective buildings, the officials added.

New program affects housing alignment here

A realignment of the housing categories within the American community is currently underway. According to Directorate of Engineering and Housing officials, individual families will not be moved unless they choose to move at their own expense. The three-year program is designed to provide a better distribution of housing and common-use areas for officers, enlisted soldiers and their families.

During the realignment, which is slated for completion in 1983, officers and enlisted people may find themselves neighbors in American housing areas, sharing common-use areas. And, although the program will better the community in the long run, residents may encounter inconveniences during this period.

Brig. Gen. John E. Rogers, community commander, said "I and DEH officials regret these inconveniences and hope community residents will be understanding. The program is in the long-term interest of the command and there is no simple way to accomplish this task."

Berlin's U.S. housing has grown in eight different stages during the past five years, according to DEH officials. Distribution of ranks and grades housed within the American community were originally based on the housing requirements at the time each new building within the community was completed and ready for occupancy. As a result, an imbalance in the waiting times for some categories in housing arose. Also, officer and enlisted categories were concentrated in one area with shared common-use areas.

LET'S GET THIS TRASH PICKED UP — Spring has sprung and so has all the unsightly trash that was buried by snow for so long. It's going to take of work to get it picked up, but as you can see by the example that Brandy Camps sets, no one is to young or old to help. Dates for this years Spring clean-up campaign are April 20 through May 6. (Photo by Jim Joerger)

PT program builds morale

"Going out to the country, got to get away." "Up in the morning with the rising sun..." "I want to be an airborne ranger..." "All the way everyday..."

These cadences can be hard simultaneously at 3rd Battalion's Physical Training sessions held at 6:30 a.m. twice a week.

Battalion PT serves several purposes," said Maj. Eric Marshall, S-3. "The first is that it helps keep the soldiers physically fit."

"It also helps to build the soldier's morale," added Marshall. "The individual can see his entire chain of command, all the way up to the battalion commander out there with him, participating in the same physical training that the soldier is."

Easter — time to begin

Soldier tips hat to pros

by G. D. Gates

What is a hardcore professional?

The hardcore professional is that soldier lying camouflaged in the snow waiting for aggressors who are already 20 minutes late.

The hardcore professional is that leader who eats after his men in the field and scrapes what's left in the bottom of the mermite can on a piece of bread and drives on.

The hardcore professional is that leader who goes for 36 hours without sleep in the field, while at the same time insuring every soldier has adequate rest to sustain him.

The hardcore professional is that soldier who's leaning into a machinegun on the back of a gun jeep in a wind with chill factor of -15°, still "standing tall and looking good."

The hardcore professional is that leader who, during a night attack, notices a soldier without gloves and gives him his.

The hardcore professional is that soldier at the Listening Post, Observing Post who is alert and responding at 3:30 a.m.

The hardcore professional is that soldier who "humps" eight kilometers in ankle-deep snow and still has enough left in him to run 100 meters to help a squad in conflict.

The hardcore professional is that leader who spends the extra hours every day helping his soldiers with their problems.

The hardcore professional is that soldier behind the serving line who greets you with "how's it going soldier?" and then gives you an extra portion of bacon.

The hardcore professional is that medic who never complains about the distance or his load and always tells that "you're gonna be alright."

The hardcore professional is that leader whose team is a "School of Standards" every day.

Sunday marks the day that Christ was resurrected from the tomb. It is a time when people put on their best clothes, and children scurry about the yard in search of colored eggs. For members of the Christian faith it is a time to recall the life, death and resurrection of their Savior and Lord Jesus, who died on the cross, only to be raised on the third day, for the cause of peace, love and to open the way for man to go to Heaven.

"And very early in the morning the first day of the week, they came unto the sepulchre at the rising of the sun. And they said among themselves, who shall roll us away the stone from the door of sepulchre? And when they looked, they saw that the stone was rolled: for it was very great. And entering into the sepulchre, they saw a young man sitting on the right side clothed in a long white garment; and they were affrighted. And he said unto them, Be not affrighted: Ye seek Jesus of Nazareth, which was crucified; he is risen; he is not here: behold the place where they laid him. But go your way, tell his disciples and Peter that he goeth before you into Galilee: there shall ye see him, as he said unto you." (Mark chapter 16, verses 2-7 King James version.)

In the beginning, Easter was celebrated by the followers of Christ on the first day of every week. Later, as the church began to grow, the celebration was held at the same as the Jewish Passover.

Since there was a difference in the calendars used by the Jews and the Christians, Easter was soon celebrated on a different day. This year

John Hall's scoutmaster; we apologise

Last week, the Berlin Observer printed the names of the Berlin Cub and Boy Scout leaders who received special recognition in two recent ceremonies — one here and one in Frankfurt.

However, we made a mistake in the names and awards presented.

Scoutmaster of the Year for Berlin, (not cubmaster), was John Hall, Troop 46 and Cubmasters of the Year for Berlin were Montie Bowen, Pack 157 and Allan Hall, Pack 152.

however, Easter Sunday falls on the first day of Passover.

Since it has begun, which of course was on the day of the resurrection, Easter has been celebrated by Christians everywhere. The Easter Egg was adopted into the holiday because it was, in ancient times, the symbol of new life, according to the book "A Treasure of American Superstition" by Claudia De Lys. De Lys also said in her book that in Egypt, many years before records were kept, the hare was the symbol of abundant life and fertility on earth. The Germans made the hare sacred to the goddess Eastre, and said that on Easter Eve it would lay eggs for good children. Thus the hare has for many years been a part of the holiday of Easter. However as the custom came to America the hare became a rabbit or Easter Bunny. This was an error for which candy makers were probably responsible, according to De Lys.

Though many people think that the holiday of Easter lasts for just one day, the fact is that it was originally celebrated for the 50 days between Easter and Pentecost. Many of the customs of the modern day church stem from this period of time.

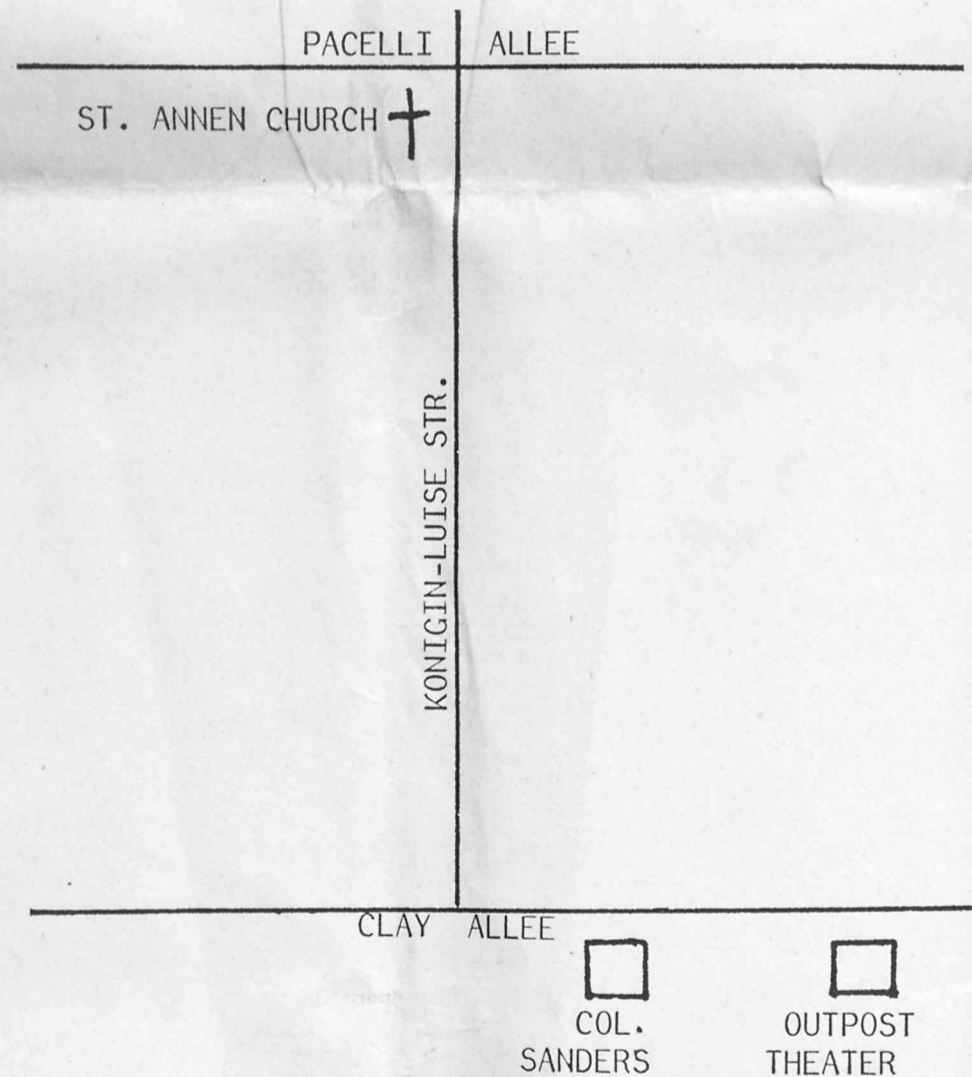

Community residents invited to Easter Sunrise festival

The American community Easter Sunrise Service will be a German-American Festival of Easter this year.

The service, which begins at 6:30 a.m. Sunday, will be held at the St.

Annen Church, Koenigin-Luise Strasse and Pacellallee.

All members of the Berlin Community are invited to attend to take part in the Easter festival. The map shown below indicates the location of the church.

Mess hall offers dining delight

by Sue Sweeney

As you walk in you hear the music of a six piece jazz combo and see patrons dining by candlelight. The atmosphere is very relaxing and the aroma announces tonight's special-oriental food.

Although this scene isn't unusual for a restaurant, it's a bit out of the ordinary for an Army Dining Facility. However, the 3rd Battalion Dining Facility creates this scenario every Thursday evening during their Ethnic Dinner.

"We emphasize a certain type of food during these nights, but still try to have something for everyone," said SFC Clifford Anderson, the Dining Facility manager. "For example, last week I had ham steaks, spare ribs, ham hocks, barbecued chicken, chittlins and much more."

The soldiers that come to these dinners often bring their families," said Sgt. Michael Lee, shift leader. "The families come in here with certain notions about what the Army food and dining facilities are like.

"They are prepared for the worst," continued Lee, "then they sit down to enjoy the music and eat. I'm sure they all come back, everyone seems to enjoy it."

Preparing for this meal starts about 10 a.m. and lasts most of the day. It takes one whole shift to get it ready and the amount of work is tremendous.

"I feel that having these dinners is important for the morale of 3rd Battalion's single troops as well as the married ones," said Anderson. "I want to give them a special atmosphere, like that of a nice restaurant, but without the expense. In order to achieve this, it takes a great deal of planning."

"I enjoy getting ready for the dinners," said Sp5 Arthur Woodall, the Dining Facilities administrative clerk. "It takes a fair amount of paperwork for me, but, when I look out into the mess hall and see about 250 people seated and enjoying the food that we all worked to get ready, I feel terrific."

"When I see all those people coming in here I know that all the effort we put out is worth the end result," said Anderson. "When the soldiers and their families are happy, then I'm happy."

VEHICLE ORIENTATION — Tempelhof District Mayor Siegmund Jaroch gets an orientation on a armored personnel carrier. The mayor and 35 members of his staff visited with the 4th Battalion to see how an American soldier lives and works in Berlin. The visitors were shown military equipment, a tour of the museum and barracks, and were treated to lunch in the 4th Battalion dining facility. (Photo by Jim Joerger)

Berlin district officials pass Army driver's test

Tempelhof district officials, including Mayor Siegmund Jaroch, spent a day with Company C, 4th Battalion soldiers last week to see just what it is that the troops do here in Berlin.

Their day started when a bus picked them up at the Tempelhof City Hall. From there they were taken to the Berlin Brigade Museum where they were greeted by Brig. Gen. John E. Rogers, Berlin Brigade commander, and 4th Battalion Commander, Lt. Col. H. I. Buckles. CWO2 Guido Rohde presented the Brigade briefing to the officials in German. From there they were off to see the "action."

The visitors were treated to a static display of weapons and equipment plus a rappelling and building clearing exercise. They also got the chance to ride in and drive an Armored Personnel Carrier and fire the M-16 and 90 mm recoilless rifles.

The highlight was the riding in and driving an APC but the mayor didn't drive the tracked vehicle. "I have never sat at the wheel. Without a license I will not drive," he explained.

The Berlin officials were also given an all-American lunch at the batalion's dining facility. They were given the choice of turkey and sweet potatoes or good ol' fashioned hamburgers. The only thing missing was the ice cream.

One soldier was very impressed by the Berliners' interest in the troops' duties. "I was really proud to show them what I do on my job."

The guests enjoyed it just as much. In fact, they were so pleased that other Tempelhof district officials will be coming soon for a visit.

Save energy; use cold water

Wash clothes in warm or cold water and rinse in only cold water. Use hot water only if it is absolutely necessary.

Besides using warm and cold water washes and rinses to maintain the color-fastness of your garments, you will also use less energy.

Fill clothes washers and dryers to capacity, but avoid overloading, unless the washer or dryer has a small-load attachment or variable water level.

3rd Battalion keeps vehicles 'on the road'

"An ounce of prevention is worth a ton of cure."

That is exactly the saying the 3rd Battalion's Preventive Maintenance System was formulated on. Using this system, the battalion has had some remarkable records.

For example, according to SFC Roland G. Cyr, battalion motor sergeant, the battalion made a trip to Wildflicker, West Germany last year with no major breakdowns coming or going. Cyr also noted that during last February's ARTEP no vehicles broke down. The evaluators and battalion were forced to simulate down vehicles because there weren't any to be found.

The system that is partially responsible for these feat is the Preventive Maintenance used by 3rd Battalion. The system requires drivers to pull Preventive Maintenance Checks and Services every day. These preventive maintenance checks are as simple checking brake fluid or the air in the tires. Preventive maintenance save time in the long run because it enables the driver to catch any problems before the vehicle breaks down.

If the driver finds any problems, he is assigned a mechanic to take care of them. If a part is necessary, the Prescribed Load List clerks may have them in stock. If not they can order them. The clerks also handle parts for weapons, the communications shop, and other equipment within the unit.

"I have a busy job but I enjoy it," said Sp4 Gordon White, one of the PLL clerks. "I take care of stockage to help carry the battalion through any assigned mission. I am one of the many people who make sure that the battalion is ready to roll."

In order for a driver to get a vehicle, he must see the Equipment Maintenance Clerk for a dispatch and then the Quality Control sergeant for any late services or problem areas. The EMC controls the records on the vehicles. He tells the drivers when such services as tire rotations and lube jobs are due. He also controls the weapons records.

"A good PMCS should prevent many breakdowns," said Sp5 Clyde McManus, EMC. "If the driver does a PMCS everyday, unless a part gives way under stress, little else can go wrong."

"Preventive Maintenance is supplemented by a 'PM' magazine which is published monthly and is required reading," added McManus. "Often when someone asks me a question, I can find out the answer from it."

"The bottom line in maintenance," said Cyr, "is when scheduled maintenance is done in a timely manner, it eventually does away with the need to pull any unscheduled services."

Self help's for fix-it-uppers

Do-it-yourself repairs can be made easy, thanks to the Self-Help Issue Point at the Directorate of Engineering and Housing compound.

The SHIP allows occupants of government facilities a chance to perform minor maintenance by supplying 150 items, including paint, lightbulbs, locks and tool boxes, according to Capt. Patrick Devens, operations officer, Facilities Engineering Division, DEH.

There is only one requirement to use the facility.

Personnel must attend the Self-Help class, a general fix-it-up class at Roosevelt Barracks. The class is given every Tuesday at 9 a.m. After completion, community members will get a proficiency card. This is the pass card to using the store.

"SHIP is beneficial to us and the community because every year DEH receives about 70,000 individual requests for work or special orders. Without the SHIP, that number would increase by 15,000. DEH simply doesn't have the resources to accommodate that many orders, leaving some members' requests getting cancelled. SHIP gives them the opportunity to do it themselves and get it done," Devens said.

There's some confusion as to painting rooms, explained Devens. According to Standard Operating Procedures, all walls should be painted off-white. If rooms occupants would like it a different color, they must buy the paint themselves. Also the walls must be able to be repainted in one coat of off-white or else the personnel will have to pay for the additional paint. Occupants may also repaint the walls themselves.

During Spring Cleanup, a lot of painting, leaf raking and minor repairs will be done. For this reason, DEH and the SHIP are offering special services to community members.

The SHIP will be open two Saturdays, April 25 and May 2 from 8 a.m. to 1 p.m. The normal operating hours are Monday through Friday, 8 a.m. to 3 p.m.

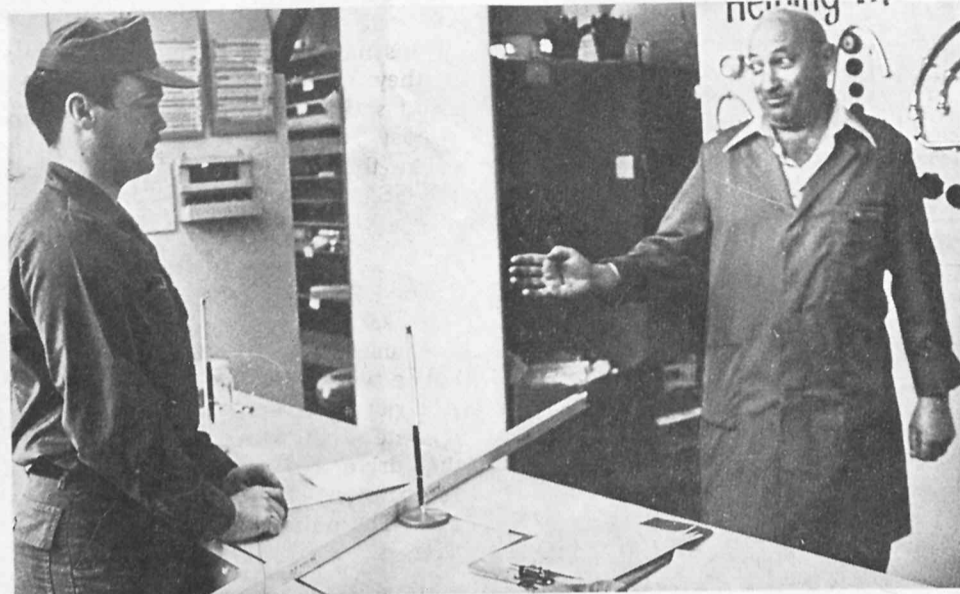

The SHIP will provide garden tools, grass seed, fertilizer, etc. to senior occupants. Top soil will be delivered on request of senior occupants and occupants of single housing.

For excessive amounts of trash,

DEH will send out additional garbage trucks to pick it up.

For more information on the SHIP and services provided during the Spring Cleanup period, call 6666.

CAN I HELP YOU? — Manfred Moeritz of the Self-Help Issue Point offers some suggestions to Sgt. Kenney M. Adkins, Battery C, 94th Field Artillery, on what equipment he needs for his repair job. Moeritz said he's happy to give the advice to anyone who wants it.

Everyone to have 'new' Army look; uniform changes help unit cohesion

Over the next four years, some soldiers may have to replace several items in their initial-clothing bag to comply with the "new" Army look.

By 1985, say uniform officials at the Department of the Army, all soldiers will have a distinctive dress green uniform, black outer wear and camouflage fatigues.

The "new" Army look will reduce the number of uniforms now authorized for wear by soldiers. For example, some soldiers now wear the starched fatigues, others wear the wash-and-wear fatigues and still others the new battledress type of fatigues. In addition, women soldiers are allowed to wear either the male or female fatigues.

Officials say requiring soldiers to dress alike will help promote unit cohesion. Also, the new consolidated look will help prevent uniform policy violations that result from soldiers improperly mixing the various uniform items now in use.

The future military look for both men and women consists of a year-round green uniform (slacks and skirt for women), green service shirt (short and long sleeves), black all-weather coat and camouflage fatigues.

All clothing items, except the year-round dress outfit, have begun to appear in the Army supply system. Officials expect the year-round uniform to be introduced in the system by fiscal year 1982.

In Berlin, the black all weather coat is available for both men and women at the Clothing and Sales Store according, to MSgt. Eddie McCarthy, chief NCO, Supply and Services Division.

The green service shirt for men is also available according to McCarthy, but the women's service shirt and the camouflage fatigues with the brown boots are not yet available at the Clothing and Sales Store.

The Army has set Sept. 30, 1985, as the wear out date for the following items: wash-and-wear fatigues; fatigue cap; tan uniform; poplin shirt; green raincoat; green overcoat; mint-green uniform; and the white blouse. Although soldiers may continue to wear the wash-and-wear fatigues until 1985, they must own one set of the battledress fatigues by Oct. 1, 1982; two by Oct. 1, 1983; three by Oct. 1, 1984; and four by Oct. 1, 1985.

Further, the women's cord uniform no longer will be authorized for wear after Sept. 30, 1981. The optional green windbreaker and green sweater, too, will be outdated on Sept. 30, 1983.

Uniform officials remind soldiers not issued the new items upon joining the Army that they will be required to possess them when the current items become outdated. The officials point out the monthly Clothing Monetary Allowance is paid to enlisted soldiers to help replace clothing issued during initial entry training. The amount soldiers receive each year is based on how long the issued items are expected to last and the price per item. In FY 81, for example, the monthly CMA for soldiers with more than three years of service is $12.60 for women and $10.20 for men. This figure is slightly lower for those soldiers under three years of service.

Until the wear-out dates of the various items take effect, soldiers may continue wearing the current uniform items.

COVERING UP — Sp4 Kenneth Pitts, Company C, 2nd Battalion throws the camouflage net over his vehicle during the squad and platoon Army Training and Evaluation Program held last week. The ARTEP included reconnaissance missions, setting up 360 degree perimeters, practicing offensive and defensive procedures and of course camouflage concealment. The soldiers also crossed a river in an inflatable raft and completed several road marches. Report accidents; save problems

Sp4 Gotim N. Gone hung a "for sale" sign on his car yesterday. An accident caused him to lose his license. He won't be driving anymore.

Gone was downtown when the accident occurred. It was minor; just a small fender-bender resulting in a dent in the bumper of the German National's car. Gone was scared. He'd never been in an accident before and didn't even know how to go about reporting one, especially here in Germany. "So why bother," he thought, "the car was parked and no one saw me anyway . . ." So he left the scene.

American servicemembers are involved in an average of 80 traffic accidents each month. Most of these are with German Nationals, according to Sgt. Joseph F. Bullock, NCOIC of traffic branch here. Five to 10 of these accidents are hit and run.

Leaving the scene

Leaving the scene of the accident was Gone's first big mistake, according to Bullock. His accident was minor, as are most of the accidents soldiers and their families are involved in. Ordinarily it would have resulted in three or four driving points, a small claim through his insurance company and counseling from his unit commander.

Instead, by not waiting for the Polizei and MPs to arrive, he lost six points from his license for leaving the scene of an accident, invoking property damage and failure to report. These points, added to the points he already had for speeding tickets put him over the 12-points-in-one-year mark. He lost his license.

"I can't emphasize enough that people should remain at the scene of an accident," said Bullock, "it just means more trouble for the drivers if they leave, once we find them. As it stands right now, we identify almost all hit and run accidents, often through witnesses observing the USAREUR plate. There's only so many places Americans take their cars . . ."

The MPs should be called whenever an accident occurs, no matter how minor it is. Often the German police will arrive at the scene first. American drivers are urged to cooperate with them. They'll ask for the driver's ID card, license and registration, then they'll call the MPs. The police will determine fault charges.

Bullock has been an Army traffic cop for about three years. In that time he's seen a lot of accidents, but feels that MPs offer some of their best customer service in this area.

Accidents not reported

"Often people don't report accidents because they're scared, or they don't know how to report them. That's what we're there for. We've seen them before, and we know how to lead people through the steps which follow the accident."

He adds that the police reports can also save difficulties later.

"No matter how minor an accident is, having the MPs there to document it saves the other driver from calling us and distorting the story. We'll already have the facts."

Exchanging information with the other driver at the scene of an accident isn't reporting it, according to MP officials.

"One big problem we've had is soldiers driving TMP vehicles are settling accidents themselves," said Bullock. "They return and turn the vehicle and the 91 card into the TMP and two or three days later they're charged with leaving the scene of an accident. Exchanging information isn't reporting the accident. The MPs must be called."

Make sure

Bullock and other traffic MPs don't want to see drivers end up like Gone.

3rd Battalion company gives AUSA total effort

Combat Support Company, 3rd Battalion was the most recent company to have all its members join the Association of the United States Army.

All 102 members of the unit joined the association within two weeks after the drive for membership began.

A four-day pass was offered to each platoon having 100 percent membership and now the entire com-

If they're involved in a traffic accident, they're urged to make sure the MPs are called. That's the first step in reporting the accident.

Drivers are also cautioned not to move the vehicles unless told to do so by the Polizei or if they're dangerously impeding traffic. The MPs can better determine accident fault if the cars aren't moved. If they must be moved, they ask drivers to mark the positions of the cars. This will aid in getting the "real story" for their report.

Traffic accidents can be a frightening and confusing experience for almost any driver, especially in a foreign country. If you're involved in an accident and don't know what to do — wait. The MPs will be there to help and waiting for them could save you trouble later.

pany is due to get one. Company F, 40th Armor had 100 percent participation a few months ago.

"During a command information briefing, I told all the soldiers in my company what AUSA was about and why it was worthwhile," said Capt. David A. Bentley, company commander. "I'm very proud that they gave 100 percent. I feel that much of the credit for this great achievement got to the platoon sergeants and the squad leaders."

Uniform delay expected here

Delays in the Army maternity uniform can be expected here.

"The delivery dates at this time are uncertain," said Henry Vinson, PX manger. "However, we think that it will not take more than eight weeks."

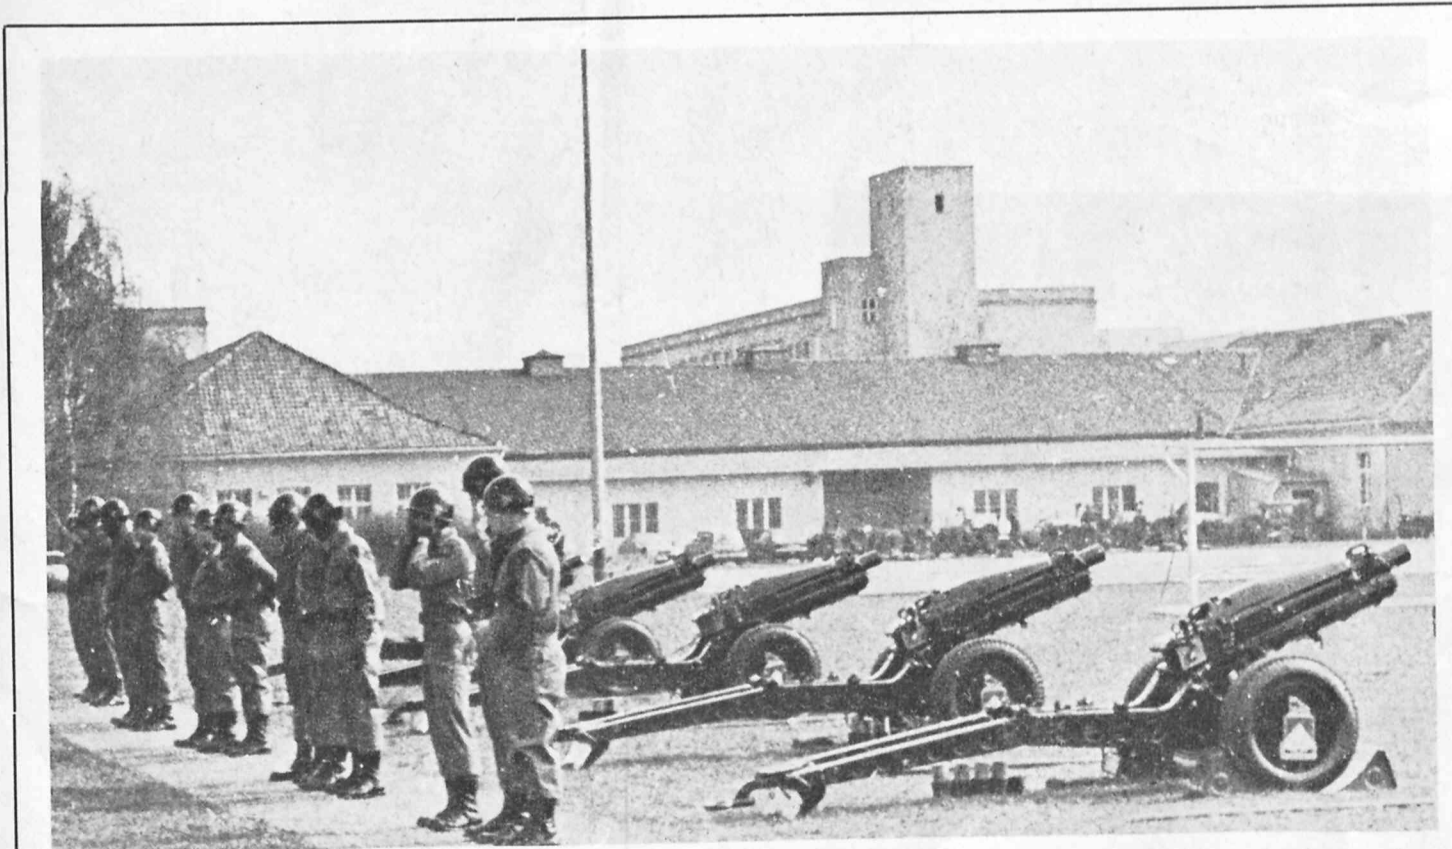

Orders are still being accepted, according to Vinson, but no promises on the delivery date are being made.

According to AAFES officials, the manufacturers of the maternity tunic, slacks and skirt have fallen behind production because of recent sizing revisions implemented by the Army's Natick Research and Development Laboratories.

The officials explained that up to now, AAFES-Europe has been able to fill individual orders within a few weeks of receiving the requirement from the customer.

"The exchange, however, can't stock this item in any store until sufficient quantities of the uniform are accumulated and production schedules return to normal."

AAFES will make an announcement when these problems have been resolved, the officials added.

Bong Show comes back join the fun

It was fully a year ago, but hundreds still suffer from memories of the show to end all shows. Last year, the Gong Show stunned a huge audience with its frenzied departures into the irrational, offering its fans a long line of acts in comedy, song and other realms of entertainment.

In order to avoid too close an association with last year's show, the organizers of this year's event have dubbed it the Bong Show. That camouflage will fool no one familiar with the mechanics of the performance, since the Bong Show will feature the same quality of entertainment, the same line of amateur judges, and the same intolerance of truly professional behavior on stage.

The All American recreation center will host the event, just as it did last year. It all takes place on Saturday, April 25 at 6:30 p.m.

Refreshments will be made available at nominal charge.

Because of last year's turnout, predictions abound this year of standing-room-only conditions, a trend that makes it necessary to advise potential audience members to pick up tickets as soon as they can. The tickets, offered with no charge whatsoever, are available now at the Hi Lite and All American recreation centers.

If you want to subject yourself to the rigors of the Bong Show as an actual performer, you still have time to drop by the All American for an audition. Call 3554 for details.

Berlin High School drama students compete for place in actors' festival

Berlin American High School students held three, one-act play presentations this weekend to select drama students to represent Berlin in the annual Speech and Drama Festival in Hahn, West Germany.

A horror, suspense play about a hitchhiker who takes a final ride with Mr. Death was the winner. The play stared Tom Graham.

Supporting cast members in the winning play were: Nancy Chartier, Vince Lingner, Mike Beech, Kathy Sands, John Bell and Suzanne Wood.

Other one-act performances included a story about an enchanted monkey's paw and a comedy about do-gooders.

"A lot of hard work went into our play," said Graham. "We practiced almost every night, sometimes twice."

Graham added that all of the actors plan to save their best performance for the festival which will be held April 29.

Reducing lights saves energy

It's easy to use more light than you need. More than 16 percent of the electricity we use in our homes goes into lighting. Most Americans overlight their homes, so lowering lighting levels is an easy energy conservation measure.

The following are a few practical tips for indoor lighting. Turn off lights in any room or area not being used. Light-zone your home and save electricity; concentrate lighting in reading and working areas and where it's needed for safety and reduce lighting in other areas.

To reduce overall lighting in non-working areas, remove one bulb out of three in multiple light fixtures and replace it with a burned-out bulb for safety. Replace other bulbs throughout the house with bulbs of the next lower wattage, in other words, 60w instead of 75w.

Be sure to keep all lamps and lighting fixtures clean; dirt absorbs light.

Commanders, traffic managers and individual travelers should become familiar with how these fares apply to insure continuation of the program isn't jeopardized by either willful or accidental abuses.

MTMC officials also suggest that travelers shop around for the lowest fares. The furlough fares offer good savings, but there may be restrictions on length of stay and ticket-purchase deadlines depending on the airline. (ARNEWS)

A SECOND TOO LATE — Dana Burnett jumps to block the shot of her German opponent as her teammate Rose Short looks on in despair. The Ger-

Woman lose in hardwood game

The Berlin Brigade women's basketball team was defeated for the first time by a German opponent OTV Charlottenburg in an exhibition game played at the Schiller Strasse Sports Center Saturday. Final score for the match was 64-49.

The American team was greatly under — strength and — sized. The team feels that these two factors were reason enough to cause them to fall short of victory. With the odds against them they, good heartedly took to the courts anyway and got off to an amazing start, playing well both offensively and defensively. Scoring was not a big problem, as the half time found the Americans on top 23-21.

Dana Burnett led the scoring of both teams with a total of 32 points. Burnett, backed up by a tight defense led by Natalie Bass, greatly impressed their German counterparts, with high-speed ball handling and an up front effort on the part of all the Berlin women.

At the end of the game, despite the overwhelming defeat, the spirits of all the players both American and German was not dampened. The members of the American squad were all invited to practise with the German team, and were presented with the insignia of the DTV Charlottenburg women's team.

nity assets, but the closure of one building at Park Manor Estates will result in the loss of 83 permanent, and 128 temporary apartments. These combined factors presented DEH with the opportunity to realign the Berlin housing assets to allow the improved service.

Specifically, this will involve a change in the designation of two buildings in the BBde housing area and 16 buildings at Dueppel. In accordance with regulations governing redistributions such as this, residents of these buildings will not be moved. They will remain in their current quarters until normal rotation or an increased bedroom requirement permits a move. These same regulations do not permit government funded moves, therefore, people requesting moves as a result of the redesignation will not be moved at government expense. All incoming personnel will be assigned housing based on the new housing designations.

Reduce grocery bill; follow shopping tips

Inflation rears its ugly head everytime we turn around. It eats away at our income. It makes life difficult for us in many ways.

Shopping at the commissary helps, but even with the good deals offered by the commissary, following a few commonsense tips can help the Berlin-American community stretch their food budget even further.

- Avoid shopping as a team. Leave your spouse at home. Statistics show that families spend nearly one-fourth more when the mate is along so take turns.

- Never shop on an empty stomach. Don't go to the store when you're hungry and your resistance to those extra groceries is low.

- Clip and use the coupons that come to you through the mail or in newspapers and magazines. They really do help. However, don't buy a product just because you have a coupon for it. Only use them for items you planned to buy anyway.

- When you see a big display stack at the end of the aisle, don't assume the items are on sale. Sometimes they are and sometimes they aren't. (There is nothing wrong with buying at regular prices. Just be sure you know what you are paying.)

- When you buy eggs, be sure to open the carton to check for broken or cracked shells.

- Consider buying larger cans if there is a savings. You may put half away in a glass jar or refrigerator dish for later use. But don't forget it's there and let it go to waste. Use it within the next couple of days.

- If an item is priced at "2/89 cents," you can still buy one at 45 cents. You don't have to take two.

- When you're making a stew or casserole dish, cut down on the amount of meat you use. Increase the use of vegetables — especially fresh, "in-season" locally grown vegetables.

- If you know how to cut up a chicken yourself, you can save 10 to 15 cents a pound. It all depends if you want to take the extra trouble.

- Just about 25 percent of all groceries sold are what could be called snack items — for consumption between meals. You and your family will be slimmer if you simply stop to think, "Is this a between-meals item?"

- Look at all the shelves when you buy groceries. You may be more likely to buy what is shelved between your waist and your chin. So look everywhere. A better buy may be down lower or up higher.

- Frozen potatoes may cost from 50 percent to 200 percent more than fresh potatoes.

- When you go to the commissary for just a few things, don't take a basket down the aisles. Carry the items in your arms and you'll avoid the temptation to buy other things you don't really need.

"Finally it helps get the soldiers ready for the Brigade Fitness Competition," added Marshall. "We started out running two miles and we worked our way up to five."

"I feel terrific after battalion PT," said 1st Lt. Frank Kromm, liaison officer "I find that I am more alert after PT and that my body seems to be feeling good."

Those soldiers who don't finish a battalion run are placed in a remedial PT program. This program is stringent. It is designed as an incentive for fall-outs. Remedial PT meets at 6:30 p.m. every day.

One officer and two NCO's are in charge of the program and the participants do 50 repetitions of each exercise and they run. The soldiers are required to go to remedial PT until the next battalion PT run.
