

4th Battalion soldier assists home delivery

by John Cosgrove

The miracle of childbirth has become a somewhat everyday occurrence for people throughout the world. In most cases a woman is admitted to the hospital of her choice, helped through the stages of labor by a well-trained maternity staff, and with foggy recollection, witnesses her newborn gasp for its first breath of life.

Anesthetics play a major role in the alleviation of pain in the modern-day delivery room, but this was not the case with SSgt. Richard Pruitt, a member of the 4th Battalion's S-2 shop, and his wife, Lori. Pruitt while on leave during the month of August, returned home from a shopping errand one afternoon, only to find his wife in the living room of their quarters ... in labor.

"I first called for an ambulance and took our two children downstairs to stay with a neighbor," noted Pruitt. He then proceeded to gather towels and blankets, and with the assistance of two neighbors, Arlene Kruse and Ramona Davis, he aided his wife in preparation for delivery.

He helped her with correct breathing techniques, and before the ambulance arrived, Rebecca Jayne Pruitt was brought into this world. The child was born on Aug. 26, and being born nine weeks prematurely, weighed only four pounds four ounces.

The ambulance, which arrived shortly after the delivery transported mother and daughter, first to U.S. Army Hospital, Berlin; then to the intensive care unit at Kaiser-Auguste Victoria Hospital in the Charlottenburg area.

"I've been scared before, but never to that extent!" said Pruitt, who revealed that he has received a sizeable amount of medical training during his military career.

He attended natural childbirth classes at Fort Ord, Calif. and trained with Navy field medics at Camp Pendleton, Calif. In addition, his secondary MOS is 42D, dental lab technician, which familiarized him with human anatomy in a general sense.

Pruitt suggests that all prospective parents attend some type of childbirth classes, even if it is considered a mere precautionary measure. Involvement in the delivery of a child, Pruitt feels, strengthens the bond between parents and children.

Change helpless into hopeful

CFC assists those that suffer

"I feel so helpless..." How many times do we mumble this phrase as we struggle for ways to comfort an individual, when we feel overpowered by the sufferings of millions?

There is a means for substituting the word, "hopeful," for "helpless," for aiding individuals or groups of persons in distress or struggling for a better life. "CFC" stands for Combined Federal Campaign.

More importantly, these initials offer a pathway to the 50 campaign participants, each of which has a mission of specific help to offer. The refugee, the ill, the disaster victim, the handicapped, young people seeking guidance, service families, and civilians in need of counseling, find sources of support from among the 21 International Service Agencies, the American Red Cross, USO, and 27 National Health Agencies.

This year's theme combats that helpless feeling: "Put a Little Love in Your Heart and Give Generously Through the CFC." A payroll pledge with allotments spread through 1982 helps produce a positive feeling of hope that energizes us, and benefits people close by, back home, and around the globe.

To kick off this year's campaign Brig. Gen. John E. Rogers, community commander and Col. Gary Spohn, base commander, Tempelhof Central Airport, made their donations Monday at a ceremony held in the main conference room of Building 1, Clay Headquarters. Both, Rogers and Spohn, stressed the importance of giving to CFC, and expressed their desire for one hundred percent solicitation.

JOINT PRESENTATION — Brig. Gen. John E. Rogers, community commander, (second from right), presents his Combined Federal Campaign contribution to Capt. Douglas B. Davis, commander, Headquarters and Headquarters Company, Berlin Brigade, while Col. Gary Spohn

Berlin goes back in time Sunday

It's time to fall back to Daylight Savings Time again. Don't forget to set your clock back one hour before going to bed Saturday night because at 3 a.m. Sunday, Germany, including all U.S. forces in Germany, will be going from "summer time" back to Central European Time. Just think, an extra hour of sleep!

editorial

Rogers' give support to CFC program

The 16th Overseas Combined Federal Campaign (CFC) provides an opportunity to express our concern by contributing to CFC agencies of our choice.

Last year, USAREUR soldiers and civilians contributed $3,045,006 to the 27 National Agencies, 21. International Service Agencies, the American Red Cross, and the United Service Organization through the CFC.

This year's campaign began Sept. 21 and will continue through Nov. 4. It will be the only regular drive for contributions to health and service agencies during fiscal year 1982.

The campaign theme, "Put a Little Love in Your Heart," suggests that even a small act of selfless giving on our part will allow participating agencies to continue to support health, morale, and welfare programs in United States and overseas.

The campaign's voluntary nature must be preserved. We ask your support to insure each individual in the United States Army, Europe, is given the opportunity to contribute.

Charles C. Rogers
Major General, GS
Acting Chief of Staff

The 1981, Combined Federal Campaign (CFC) opened on Sept. 21. This year's theme "Put a Little Love in Your Heart," is most appropriate for this fund drive where the money contributed does so much for so many.

We, in Berlin, will benefit substantially from the CFC contributions. Over the years, the Berlin Community has contributed generously, and I know that will be the case again this year.

Traffic rules apply to cyclists

The catalogue of cyclists' sins read like a western story.

They utilize bikeways and one-way streets going in the opposite direction, cross an intersection against red traffic lights, pass halted vehicles, run over pedestrians, ride without lights during the hours of darkness, ride their bikes while intoxicated, . . . the list goes on and on.

But those times will be over soon since, in the near future, cyclists will be treated like operators of a motor vehicle. For cyclists, the traffic ordinance is the same as for vehicle operators. As an example, going through a red traffic light will cost the cyclist DM50 for the first offense.

If you hop onto your steel horse, don't simply take off; if you do something wrong, it may not cost you only money, it may cost you your life.

Last year, more than 1,000 cyclists were killed in traffic accidents in Germany, and over 50,000 were injured. In an effort to reduce cyclist related deaths/injuries in Berlin, the G-1 Safety Branch has provided a list of important rules that cyclists should be aware of and follow.

- Cyclists must use bikeways whenever they are available, always riding on the right hand side of the road.

- Those cyclists who want to make a left turn must first check to the rear, display a positive hand signal, and then steer towards the middle of the road. They have to stay on the right side of vehicles turning left. At very narrow streets, cyclists should not move to the middle of the road but stay on the right side, wait there, if necessary, until all following and oncoming traffic has cleared, then turn.

- Passing maneuvers among cyclists on bikeways are only authorized if there is sufficient space.

- In case the bikeway is occupied by a parked vehicle, drive around it using the sidewalks, however, stop or walk, if pedestrians are endangered.

- At combined areas marked with the sign 'pedestrian/cyclists,' the pedestrian always goes first.

- On sidewalks without a bikeway, only children up to the age of eight may use the sidewalks as a bikeway.

- At marked crosswalks within the road, pedestrians crossing have the priority.

- On one-way streets, the bike must not be driven, or even pushed, in the opposite direction of the one-way traffic.

- Cyclists must drive in a single line, one behind the other, on bikeways and roads. Riding side by side is prohibited.

- The cyclist must always look to the rear before starting off, leaving the bikeway, entering narrow passages (construction sites, underpasses), and before every fast stopping maneuver.

- On bikeways running by a bus stop, extreme caution must be exercised. Many bus riders getting off at such stops don't realize that there is cyclist traffic, and may walk right into the cyclist. When approaching a bus stop where people are disembarking, slow down and sound your bell to warn them of your presence.

Garrison soldiers tackle field

by Sue Sweeney

Field training isn't just for infantry soldiers. It's for all soldiers, no matter what job they perform.

The soldiers from the overhead and chaplain's division of Headquarters and Headquarters Company, Berlin Brigade got their chance to do a little field training this week when they moved out to a local training area near Parks Range.

"We went to the field to practice basic field skills," said 1st Lt. Mary Redditt-Zvarich, the company's executive officer. "It was super training. Some of these soldiers had never spent time training in the field, and I'm sure they learned many new skills."

"It was a really good experience," said PFC Luana Elison, one of the clerk/typists in the Personnel Administration Center. "We learned about the field radio and how to operate it. I learned about two different types of machine guns. It was really good and interesting training."

"This was the first time in two years that I went to the field, to stay overnight for training," said Sp4 Jim Casson, a chaplain's assistant. "Normally the chaplain's division doesn't train in the field, but I'm going to get a taste of the field again when I go to West Germany with 3rd Battalion."

"Going to the field was much the same routine as staying in the barracks," said PFC Tanya Jones, a supply clerk. "The only difference is that instead of issuing linen, and other barracks supplies, I issued tents, field heaters, cots, and other field equipment. Physically it's harder to work in the field. We put up tents and did things we don't normally do."

"I learned a lot in the field," said Sp5 Bobbi Coffman, from the chaplain's division. "I learned the mechanics of a field generator, how to assemble and disassemble two types of machineguns, how to set up a field stove, and how to operate the field radio. We even pulled guard duty."

According to 1st Sgt. George P. Moffett, the training was difficult and most of the soldiers had never done anything like it before. All the soldiers learned from it he added.

Moving out and training in the field is some of the training that every soldier gets, and Headquarters Company plans on making sure that all of their soldiers get that training.

3rd Battalion soldiers streamline motor pool

by Sue Sweeney

The 3rd Battalion has reorganized its motor pool recently.

Operation Mercedes as it's affectionately called, has helped streamline the Prescribed Load List shop. Motor stables have also been changed. They are now conducted on battalion level rather than company level.

Motor stables include a hands-on class designed to teach drivers simple checks and services that they can perform on their vehicles.

"Battalion directed motor stables are more efficient than company level," said MSgt. Roland G. Cyr, motor sergeant. "I'm the battalion representative at the motor stables. I supervise them and help with any problem that might arise."

During the motor stables, Cyr is available to answer any questions. According to Cyr it's an absolute necessity that every driver know about the preventive maintenance checks and services necessary to keep a vehicle in good running order. It can save time and money.

After the motor stables are completed. A random 20 percent of the company's vehicles are inspected," said Cyr. "I'm like a check valve. It's my job to make sure that the vehicles stay up to 3rd Battalion's standards."

The results of the inspection go directly to the battalion commander, added Cyr. Another recent improvement in the motor pool was under Operation Mercedes.

"The soldiers here in the Prescribed Load List shop do the same job as a parts shop in a Mercedes dealership,"

SHOW ME — MSgt. Roland C. Cyr, 3rd Battalion's motor sergeant shows some soldiers how to pull basic checks and services on a vehicle. Preventive maintenance is important, not only to the mechanics in the motor pool, but also for the drivers and other soldiers that work with the vehicles. (Photo by Mark Bixler) said Sgt. Dale Rudolph. "So now we're trying to make our office like that in some ways. For instance we got new tables and filing cabinets. Before, when we needed a table we used to find some plywood and nails and build one. This is certainly more convenient."

Operation Mercedes offers a strict check on property accountability. The clerks have new forms that enable them to see exactly what part arrived in the system and when.

"This also effects the mechanics," said Rudolph. "They now all have their own lockers to keep their coveralls in. Overall I would say Operation Mercedes has changed the appearance of our motor pool and it has certainly boosted morale."

Battle dress uniforms arriving in November

The European Army and Air Force Exchange Service's 45 Army military clothing sales stores are slated to get 36,800 camouflage battle dress uniforms in November when initial shipments of the 92,000 uniforms slated for USAREUR arrive.

Prices of the uniform replacing the fatigue uniform now worn by soldiers are: coat, $16; trousers, $17.20; and cap, $9.94. After the initial shipments, the Defense Personnel Support Center will send a shipment every 30 days.

Soldiers who can't be fitted from uniform supplies, which range in size from extra small to extra large, can use the special measurement requisition method, according to Vernon Runyan, chief, Military Clothing Branch, Headquarters AAFES-Europe. This method of obtaining uniforms is available at each of the 45 AAFES-Europe Army military clothing sales stores. "It usually takes eight to 10 weeks when this method is used by the customers," Runyan added.

EVERY ALLEY DANGEROUS — During squad level training at Bonnland, every alley and building was dangerous. Bonnland is an abandoned German village that the German government turned into a training area and 2nd Battalion soldiers got their chance to tackle the village while on a training exercise in West Germany. (U. S. Army Photo)

2nd Battalion trains in Bonnland 'village'

An infantry squad attacked a small German house occupied by a squad on the defense, in Bonnland, West Germany. As the attacking squad was advancing, suddenly a second story shutter opens and a grenade flies out at the attackers. The attackers use all the available cover and concealment as a machinegun opens fire from the house. Then it's all over as the attackers gain entry to the building.

Sound like a scene from a war movie? It's not. It's what happened this past week as soldiers from 2nd Battalion, with attached elements from Battery C, 94th Field Artillery, and the 287th Military Police Company, participated in Military Operations in Urban Terrain training at Bonnland.

Bonnland is an authentic German village which the German government turned into a training area for the military.

The training was centered around 2nd Battalion soldiers, however, Battery C had a battalion fire support element in Bonnland. The element consisted of three fire teams and a tactical operations center.

The new soldiers learned the ins and outs of urban training while the older soldiers refreshed their memories and sharpened their skills.

Individual skills were stressed as well as teamwork. Gaining entrance to a building and clearing it from the top floor down, required the soldiers to work together, and trust each other completely. Each soldier was vulnerable at some time during an attack and he had to depend upon the other people in his squad to cover for him.

"Bonnland is great for training for the simple reason it was an actual German village," said SFC Jimmy L. Mahaney, Company C, 2nd Battalion. "It gives the soldiers a chance to train in an authentic environment."

"Imagination and teamwork are vital to each mission that we have out here," said 1st Lt. Patrick M. Robey, Combat Support Company. "Only through a soldier's inventiveness and ability to use all available resources, can these mission be completed."

Squad and team leaders were given a mission and then left free to establish necessary fighting positions, defensive positions and plan routes to reach the objectives.

"This is really exciting training," said Pvt. 2 Michael Hall, Company C, 2nd Battalion. "We really have to work hard at it though."

The first few days of training are used as a building block to prepare the soldiers from platoon and company level operations, in Bonnland. Bonnland, the German village whose only occupants are soldiers learning and training in urban terrain.

Do Christmas buying early

ITT offers several shopping opportunities

by Dean Brown

For decades, American tourists have been lured to the European continent by promises of fabulous shopping opportunities. Travel books have long praised European craftsmanship as a particularly enticing facet of hand-made and factory-wrought articles in Europe.

On top of all that praise, European goods were described to foreign visitors as unbeatable bargains.

Alas, those days have vanished. Bargains are exceedingly difficult to find in the era of sinking dollars and rising inflation. And what craftsmanship there is to find, has virtually vanished from the price range of the typical tourist.

ITT tours, however, has discovered an ingenious range of shopping opportunities in this European city, a selection of market halls, neighborhood stores, and even factories that will take some of the bite out of the shopping crunch and place a little more power firmly in the hand of the harried shopper.

Marked halls (Markthallen in German) are full of the type of bargains that shoppers desire. Two of these establishments — in Wedding and Charlottenburg — are targets of ITT trips in the near future. The halls offer you vases, flowers, porcelain, crystal, fruit, meat (including Wurst), clothing, and more. Prices are lower than in normal shopping venues, partly because individual vendors take advantage of low overhead to keep their prices down within the realm of realistic levels.

ITT goes to Markthallen in October, November, and December, a schedule that jibes nicely with the approaching Christmas holidays.

The second ITT shopping excursion aims at four local neighborhood shopping areas. This tour heads for Zehlendorf, Mexikoplatz, Onkel-Tom-Strasse, and Roseneck. It is designed to introduce you to further examples of reasonably-priced shopping.

ITT will tell you about the neighborhoods through which you pass on the tour, and will explain how you can easily find your own way to the shopping areas on an independent shopping excursion. ITT takes this trip Oct. 27, and Nov. 24.

The third ITT shopping trip introduces you to the advantages of factory shopping. The IDEE candle factory will host you to a guided tour through its works, allowing you to witness the process of candle creation.

Afterwards, you will have the chance to purchase some candles at wholesale prices. An ITT informant states that a candle capable of being burned at both ends is one of the variations available.

An atmosphere of calm and intimacy is a welcome part of any home, particularly at meal time, and candles help create that mood effectively and at low cost. ITT heads for the wick works on Oct. 13, Nov. 10, and Dec. 8.

Porcelain is the last example of ITT's new shopping offers. Once again ITT takes you directly to a factory for a guided tour of the manufacturing process and for an opportunity to buy what you see. Caring more...

Show you care; keep it clean

by Lt. Col. Bernard F. Griffard

PRIDE is the hallmark of the Americans assigned in Berlin. Pride is present in the workplace; it exists in the classroom, and it is most obvious during field training in the Berlin Brigade. However, pride appears to be lacking in some of our community housing areas.

Littered streets, dirty playgrounds and yards are not a true reflection of the proud people who live in the Berlin Military Community. This situation is the result of carelessness on the part of many of us living in Berlin, however, carelessness is a curable disease.

Caring-less is cured by caring-more. Caring more about how our living areas appear to other people and our neighbors.

Caring more about the cleanliness of our playgrounds and common areas.

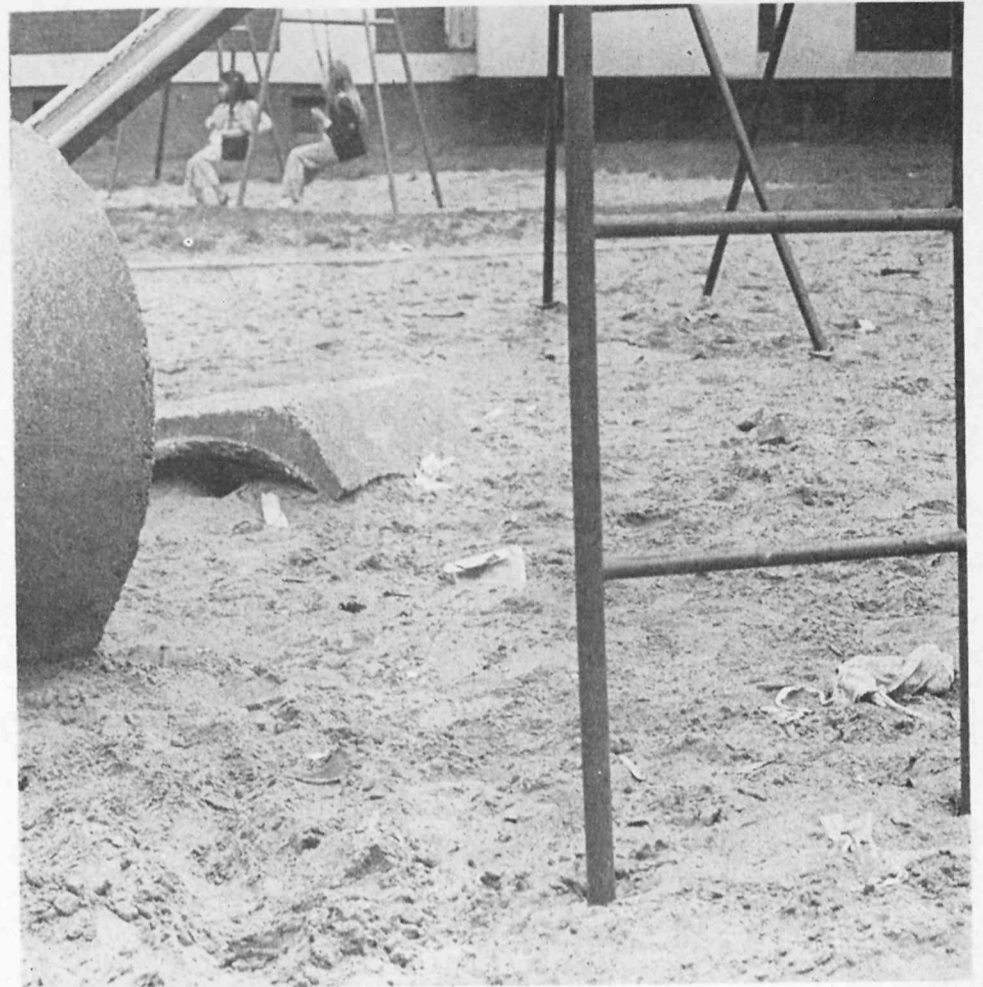

Caring enough to insure that our garbage is properly bagged and that trash collection areas are kept clean so that the wind doesn't spread our litter throughout the neighborhood.

Caring more about the cleanliness of our community than whether or not it is our turn to police the area.

Caring enough about our quality of life in Berlin to educate our children on their responsibilities as members of this community, and how they can help keep Berlin clean.

Caring enough to support the community chain of command in their efforts to meet the appearance standards which have been set by the community commander.

By working together for the common goal, a "care-less" attitude will be turned into a "caring-more" attitude, and the appearance of our housing area will once again reflect — PRIDE.

AFN announces new shows in October

by Mark White

The month of October on American Forces Network, Berlin, is filled with new shows and great movies appealing to all age levels.

Drama and variety head the list of newcomers including "Vegas" and "Boomer," a lovable dog belonging to no special person and having no special home.

The "Bad News Bears" are a junior high school baseball team made up of kids who have exhibited major difficulties in adjusting to a traditional school environment.

"Palmerstown" depicts rural southern life in the 1930's and focuses on the town and two of its leading families, the Freemans and the Halls. The series was created by the acclaimed author of "Roots," Alex Haley, and developed by the award-winning writer-producer, Norman Lear.

"Angie" is Angie Falce, a lovable coffee shop waitress from the wrong side of the tracks.

Everyone knows who and what "Barbara Mandrell" is and does, and Barbara, with her sisters Louise and Irene, host a long list of stars from all walks of show business on her show.

AFN has four Variety Specials during October. The first stars Frank Sinatra, Jr., with guest singers, Rudy Ford and Pia Zadora, along with comic, Pat Henry.

The second special is a genuine country music jamboree from Nashville's Grand Ole Opry.

"Futurestars" from Nashville's Opryland Theme Park is another special, featuring eight young entertainers showcasing their talent. Rounding out October's variety specials is "Lily Tomlin Sold Out" from Las Vegas with guests Paul Anka, Jane Fonda, Liberace, and Dolly Parton, to name a few.

Top Hollywood fare fills the marquee on Viewer's Choice with the "Hunchback of Notre Dame," "Cactus Flower," "Angel and the Badman," and "Hombre."

Also returning in October is Phil Donahue, the number one syndicated TV talk-show host in America. Hailing from Cleveland, his show is watched daily by millions of loyal viewers in over 200 cities nationwide and around the world on Armed Forces TV. Some of his featured guests are Senator Jesse Helms; actress and best selling author, Shelly Winters; and Jackie Cooper.

New shows coming up in November and December include "Concrete Cowboys" starring Jerry Reed and Geoffrey Scott who play two vagabonds foot-loose and fancy free in their perilous life style, and "Spyforce," and hour-long adventure series covering the top secret branch of Australian army intelligence.

Other dramatic shows to be seen on AFN later in the season are "I'm a Big Girl Now," Walter Cronkite's Universe," "Benson," "One Day at a Time," "Wonder Woman," and "Flamingo Road."

October should also bring AFN viewers a chance to watch, via satellite, some of the crucial games of the World Series and top college and pro football games.

Check your Stars and Stripes and Berlin Observer listings for exact dates and times for all the programming mentioned.

AAFES recalls toy bear

AAFES-Europe is recalling a potentially hazardous stuffed toy bear.

The toy, "Sleepy Bean Bear," style 9294 by Knickerbocker Toy Co., is considered dangerous because the nose and eyes can break off easily and can be swallowed. The bear is nine inches high, and comes in three colors: maize, blue and tan. It was sold at AAFES-Europe for $3.40.

If you've purchased the toy, remove it from use at once, and return it to your exchange for a full refund.

Rubber duckie returns to tub

"Ernie's Rubber Duckie" will frolic again in local bathtubs.

That's the good news from AAFES, which announced that the popular preschool bath-time playtoy has now been given a clean bill of health after having been taken from exchange shelves in July.

"Rubber Duckie" was recalled because the plug on its tummy could become loose and swallowed.

The duck's maker, Knickerbocker Toy Co., fixed the dapper duck and pronounced him fit. AAFES tested him too. "We dunked him, squeezed him, and tested him thoroughly," an exchange spokesman said.

The popular yellow duck is returning to European exchanges. He's now on the Atlantic Ocean, and will again be in AAFES-Europe stores sometime in October. (AAFES)

AFRC announces price reductions for Ski Weeks

The Armed Forces Recreation Center has announced price reductions averaging 25 percent for its 1981 Ski Weeks.

The amount of the reduction depends on the sponsor's rank, type of accommodations, and recreation area; but the price of all Alpine (down-hill) and Nordic (cross country) Ski Weeks have been reduced.

AFRC's Ski Weeks are total ski holidays balancing five days of skiing and ski instruction with after skiing activities, accommodations, local transportation, lift fees, and much more.

This winter, AFRC Chiemsee will offer Alpine Ski Weeks for as little as $72, while the lowest price in Berchtesgaden and Garmisch is $99. Skiers under 17 years of age can take an AFRC Ski Week for as little as $53.50 at Chiemsee, $66 at Berchtesgaden, and $73.50 in Garmisch.

AFRC Chiemsee also offers the lowest price for an AFRC Nordic Ski Week, with a price tag of only $52 for adults and $38.50 for children under 17. Prices in Berchtesgaden are $77 and $51, while Garmisch Cross Country Ski Weeks are just $62 and $43.50.

Alpine Ski Weeks begin Nov. 15 in Garmisch; Dec. 6 in Chiemsee, and Berchtesgaden. Nordic Ski Weeks begin Jan. 3 in Garmisch, Chiemsee, and Berchtesgaden, conditions permitting.

Ski Week reservations can be made up to 90 days in advance by phone or mail. To make Ski Week reservations in Garmisch contact: Accommodations Office, AFRC Garmisch, APO 09053, Tel: 2535-757/856.

For reservations at Berchtesgaden and Chiemsee AFRC facilities contact: Accommodations Office, AFRC Berchtesgaden, APO 09029, Tel: 2538-613.

When calling from bases with AUTOVON facilities, call 439-1110 (Munich Military Switchboard) and ask for the area and number listed. For more information about AFRC winter programs, visit any Recreation Center or ITT Office.

Army whips TCA in softball

Last weekend was not one that many at Tempelhof Central Airport will remember gladly. In a two-day tournament, the Army slow-pitch softball team from H & S Company, Field Station, Berlin, defeated both Air Force teams to win the Berlin City Championship.

The leading batter for the victorious Army team was Steve Gruber who went four for four. Runsbatted-in honors went to Bob Neely (10), Bob Beese (6), Ruben Lopez (6), and Harv Winans (6). Excellent base running by Tony Anderson, Michael Rodda, John Howard, John Hoskins, and Joe Martinez contributed to the Army triumph.

Winning pitchers, Rich Diesterhof and Jerry Leuthauser, took a game apiece, while Jerry Alwine won two games. The key to the Army victory was the fine base coaching by Clem Rodriguez and Frank Kettles. They teamed up to push the runners around the bases as 48 runs were scored during the four games.

Coach Larry Remick, Jr., praised the team effort and said that credit for the championship goes to every member of the H & S Company team, and to their loyal fans.

Protestant chapel gets new group leader

After five years serving as the junior high youth group sponsor at the American Community Chapel, Diane Hilbig turned over leadership to Gil Brown this week.

The Protestant Youth of the Chapel's junior high group has been in existence since 1976. "The junior youth group was established because it was obviously necessary to meet the needs of the younger teens," says Hilbig.

Hilbig, who has a degree in Christian Education and is currently working on a master's degree in Human Relations, says that the main direction of the youth program is toward fellowship. "There is a lot of peer pressure at this age. If young people have support from peers with Christian values, it is easier for them when they encounter peer pressure in school and other places. That little support is like a gift," says Hilbig.

Brown, PYOC's new leader, has been a tireless supporter of the group since 1978, doing much of the administrative work.

"Though I have the final say, it is the young people themselves who plan their own program," said Brown.

With 10 years of experience in teaching Sunday School, and a master's degree in Counseling, Brown looks forward to a good year. "I'm encouraged. Judging from the enthusiasm shown at the planning sessions, there will be even more participation by members of the group this year."

This month the PYCO will be planning a bicycle trip to Bremerhaven. Meetings are held on Wednesday at 6:30 p.m. in the basement at the American Community Chapel.

Sunday school classes start, pre-schoolers are included

The Confraternity of Christian Doctrine or The Catholic Sunday School, begins at 10:15 a.m. Sunday at the Thomas A. Roberts School.

Separate classes will be given for pre-schoolers to eighth graders, and pre-school children must be three years old to be enrolled. Terry Bregon, the CCD coordinator said that the Catholic Religious Education program is based primarily on the Sadlier's Lord of Life Series.

Two separate programs are being offered for the teenagers. Ninth and 10th grades will receive two mini-courses, "Life, How Do You See It?" and "Personality Puzzle." Students in 11th and 12th grades will be given a marriage course entitled "Matrimony — Jesus Calls Us to Love." The two programs for teenagers will take place on the first and third Sundays of each month from 5-7 p.m., in conjunction with a potluck supper. The groups will meet in members' homes.

Five children's Masses/Liturgies are being planned for this year. On Nov. 1, All Saint's Day, a children's Mass will be held at 9 a.m. at ACC. Sunday School will follow at 10:15 a.m. at TAR in the form of an open house for parents.

On Dec. 24 at 5 p.m., a Christmas play is planned in conjunction with Mass.

The Children's Stations of the Cross will be celebrated on Good Friday and on Ash Wednesday, there will be a Bible Pageant Play involving all students of the CCD program. "In pageant form, students will depict different scenes from the Bible, from Creation to Pentecost," said Bregon.

First Communion will be held on May 8, and on May 9, Mother's Day, the CCD will celebrate the Crowning of Mary, as part of the 9 a.m. Mass.

Jewish New Year begins

"Rosh Hashanah," the Jewish New Year, will be celebrated this year from sundown on Monday through sunset on Wednesday. "Yom Kippur," the Day of Atonement, begins at sundown on Oct. 7 and ends at sunset on Oct. 8.

These Jewish High Holy Days will be celebrated at all three of the German Jewish community synagogues. Anyone wishing to attend can learn full details at the Sabbath service held at the American Community Chapel this evening at 8 p.m.

Rosh Hashanah, a time of challenge, commemorates "Birthday of the Universe." A rabbi once explained this holy time, saying: "A man should so live that, at the end of his days, he can say, I have not wasted any day of my life." To Jewish people everywhere, Rosh Hashanah enunciates that challenge at the beginning of each year.

Yom Kippur is the holiest day of the year, and the richest in religious significance. The Jewish mood on Yom Kippur is prescribed by Jewish tradition as one of atonement and forgiveness, Yom Kippur, therefore, is an occasion for spiritual cleansing.

SWEETS FOR THE KIDDIES — Members of the Combat Support Battalion throw candy to children during last year's "Berlin Unity Day" parade. A parade, car show, belly

Berlin Unity Week has something for all

by R. Gibson

Americans everywhere are presently celebrating Native American Week. And the members of the Berlin American Community are preparing to celebrate our own ethnic extravaganza under the theme of "Americans on Parade II."

Berlin Unity Week, which is scheduled to begin Monday with a seminar hosted by SFC Sam Allen, NCOIC, Equal Opportunity Staff Office, promises to be informative, entertaining, and enlightening.

Allen will hold a lecture called "The Black Role Model for the 1980's." The seminar will begin promptly at 7 p.m. and last until midnight at the All-American Recreation Center on McNair Barracks.

There will be seminars like the one featuring Allen all week at the All-American Recreation Center. On Tuesday, the Native American will be honored.

On Wednesday, a Hispanic Heritage Review will be hosted, and Thursday will mark White Heritage Review with the variety band "American Dream." Friday will top off phase one of Berlin Unity Week with the Asian Pacific Review and Samoa Mo Samoa.

Oct. 3 has been named "Berlin Unity Day" and will feature a parade, flea market, car show, football games, train rides for the kiddies, musical entertainment, belly dancers, shoot-outs, and a performance by the Berlin Brigade Drill Team.

The days activities will be topped by an international picnic, which features foods from the different ethnic groups.

Holiday season nears; mail packages early to beat Christmas rush

by R. Gibson

If you have noticed that the weather has seemed to turn a bit colder, and the leaves are beginning to fall, then you may have realized that the holiday season is not far off.

The folks at the Army Post Office would like to remind members of the Berlin American community that now is the time to start planning to mail Christmas parcels to the United States or other APO's.

According to 2nd Lt. Mike Evans, A. G. postal officer for the brigade, the Christmas rush actually begins around the first of November and lasts until the middle of January.

"The APO will be augmented with seven people from various units throughout Berlin, just as all European APO's are, for the Christmas rush," said Evans.

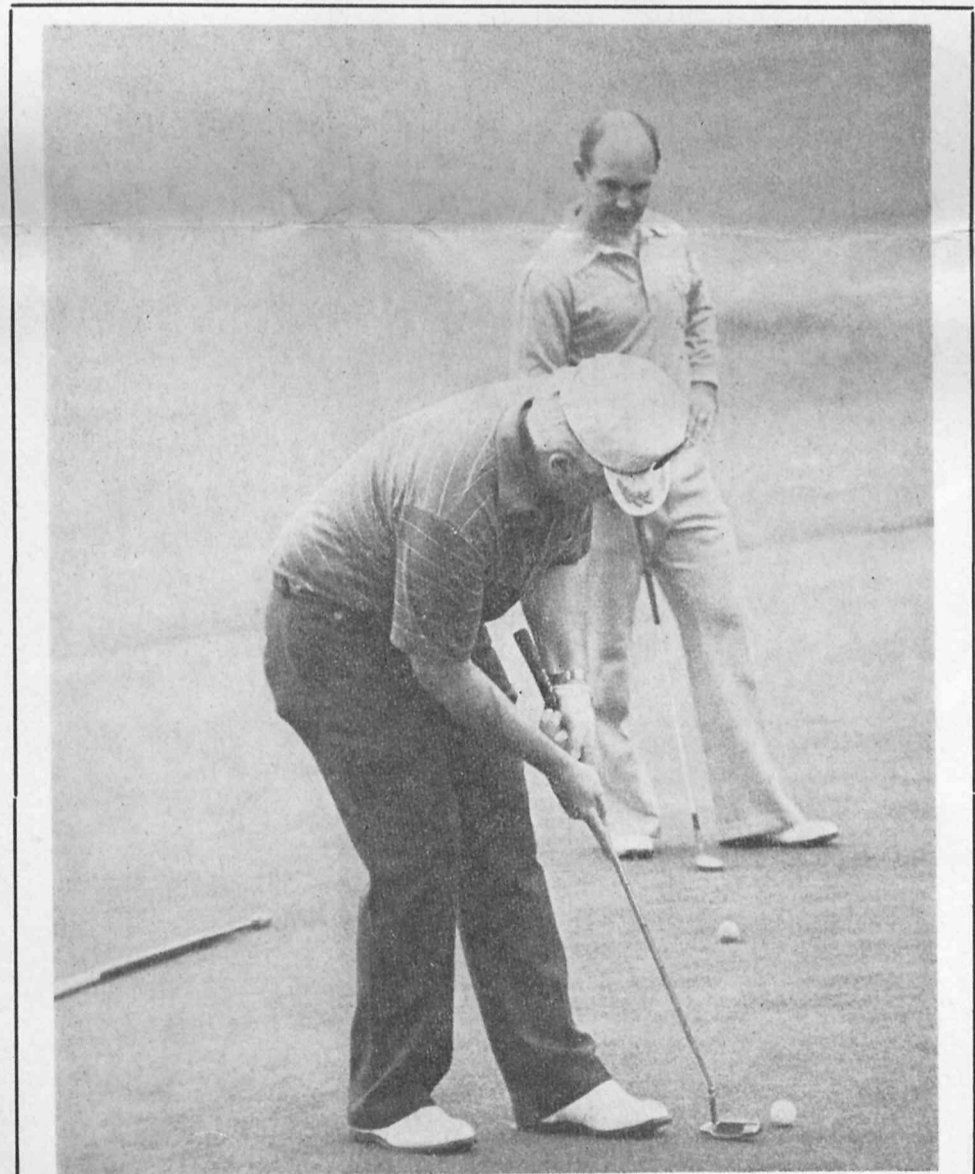

The reason for the additional help is to assist the transfer of the vast amount of incoming and outgoing mail and parcels. The APO also has a few helpful hints for people planning to mail Christmas packages.

First, be sure to mail early. If you are sending something via Space Available Mail (SAM), it must be sent before Nov. 19. If you want to send it through Parcel Airlift (PAL), do so by Nov. 15. And, if you want to send something as Priority Mail you have until Dec. 10.

SFC Steven Silas, NCOIC of the APO, suggest mailing to some places, like Korea or the Philippines, through another APO such as San Francisco; should be given it a full two months.

Evans added that if you send a fragile package, it should be double boxed with plenty of packing material. Also, the next time you stop by the APO, pick up a copy of USA-REUR Pam 65-2, "The Answer Book — A Consumer Guide to USAREUR/USAFE Postal Services." The pamphlet is free, and all of the branch offices have copies on hand. It outlines postal services, customs information, what can and can't be sent through the APO, and mail and parcels size and weight limitations.

The men and women of the postal service are here to serve you. So be smart, mail early, and have a happy holiday.

One more shot

Andrew Krasnacion lines up for the final putt of the day on the 18th green at the Berlin American Golf Course. Krasnacion took third place in his flight at the AUSA Golf Championship held Sunday. The wind seemed to be the only negative factor as the golfers turned in nothing but good reports on the course and tournament itself. The top money winner for the day was Jim Tabat, Company C, 3rd Battalion who took home a check for $50.
