Energy Awareness Week begins

Are you aware that the United States spends $10 million on oil imports each hour of each day, or that the average American uses half again as much energy as the average German?

If your answer is 'no,' then you are certainly not alone. That is why Energy Awareness Week, Oct. 25-31 concerns all of us.

As part of a USAREUR-wide campaign, the Berlin community is actively participating in the Energy Awareness Week. Several organizations including the Directorate of Engineering and Housing, American Forces Network, and the Army and Air Force Exchange Service have put together a program of activities for the week aimed to ensure that everybody is made aware of ways to beat the energy crisis.

Each day next week has a special theme. Sunday is Learn about Energy Day.

On Monday be a Watt Watcher; every one counts.

Tuesday is Car Less Day. Why not leave the gallon guzzler at home?

Wednesday's theme is Stretch Your Mileage. Learn some gas saving tips. Information will be provided on AFN and in the Main Exchange and Truman Plaza area.

Thursday is Winter Preparations Day. Start winterizing your car and home now.

Energy Independence Day will be Friday.

Saturday's theme, Save-So That They May Have, stresses that energy saving is family business.

There are many ways to conserve energy every day. Here are a few:

- If you wash dishes by hand, rinse them in a pan rather than in running water.
- If you use a dishwasher, stop the cycle before the dishes are dried. Let them dry naturally.
- Report leaky faucets. One drop per second adds up to about 200 gallons per month.
- Never fiddle with the thermostat. Changing the thermostat setting several times a day wastes energy and money.
- Turn off lights when not needed. Avoid excessive indoor lighting.
- When rinsing off suds from your sink after dishwashing, use cold water. It will dissolve the suds faster than hot water.
- When shaving, don't let the hot water run continuously. By filling the sink, you'll not only save energy but water as well.
- Take more showers than tub baths. Showers use less than one half the hot water required for a tub bath.

— Avoid overfilling the fuel tank of your car, especially during warm weather. The gasoline, which is cool when it goes into the tank, will expand as it warms up.

— Join or form a car pool for regular trips.

— Don't warm up your engine for more than a few seconds in cold weather. If it takes longer, the engine probably needs a tune-up or repair.

— When driving, make a slow start and accelerate gently, building up to a steady speed.

— Plan the time and route of your trips to avoid rush hours and congested traffic. Slow driving with frequent starts and stops waste fuel.

— Don't carry excess weight in your car.

— Avoid "jack rabbit starts," jerky acceleration, and hot rod driving. These poor driving habits can increase your car's fuel consumption by two miles per gallon in city traffic.

We in Berlin can be proud of our energy saving record, which was the best in USAREUR last year. But there's still room for improvement. We can improve on last year's record if all of us think a little more about how energy should be used and a little less about how we used to use it.

Reminder: Energy Awareness Week concerns all of us.

Rogers leaves in November, Suddath to assume command

Brig. Gen. John E. Rogers, Berlin Brigade commander, will depart Berlin in November.

USAREUR Provost Marshal, Brig. Gen. Leroy N. Suddath, Jr., has been named to succeed Rogers. The change of command has been scheduled for Nov. 17.

Announcing Rogers' reassignment, Maj. Gen. James G. Boatner, U. S. commander, Berlin, praised Rogers' contributions to the brigade, the American community, and German-American relations. He cited specifically the heavy responsibility Rogers has shouldered as commander of most of the soldiers in Berlin, and as liaison with the six district mayors in the U.S.

sector of Berlin.

Rogers has commanded the Berlin Brigade since Aug. 1, 1980. His new assignment has not yet been announced.

Suddath, like Rogers, is a Georgia native and an experienced infantryman. He has held a variety of command and staff positions during his 25-year career, including company and battalion commands in the 82nd Airborne Division. He also commanded a battalion of the 1st Division in Vietnam, and was commander of the 5th Training Brigade, Fort Dix, N. J.

He is married and he and his wife, Carole, have three children.

Medic thinks letter about 'Doc' insulting

Editor:

I am writing in response to the insulting and factless letter from "concerned wife" which was published in the Oct. 2 issue of the Berlin Observer.

In the first place, we medics do not refer to ourselves as "Doc" as she wrongly states. That title is placed on us by the troops in the field, at the aid station, and at the Troop Medical Clinic (TMC).

Secondly, the medic is the first person the injured soldier goes to for aid and comfort when needed. This is a very important job. The medic's actions mean the difference between a quick road to recovery or permanent disability.

Fortunately, all the medics at McNair Barracks perform admirably and well above standard.

Yes, there are a lot of colds and "PT blues" in Berlin. If those soldiers who come on sick call for a cold, a pimple on their shoulder, or any number of petty ailments, realized how much they would have to pay a civilian doctor, they would not use sick call so loosely.

Once upon a time when I had a hospital assignment, I saw that family members are even more guilty of this.

When soldiers come on sick call, they are screened so that they can get the treatment they need, not what they demand. If a medic is unsure of the problem, or it is out of his realm, the soldier is seen by a Physician's Assistant.

If further treatment is needed, the soldier is sent to the divine MEDDAC to see a Holyman (doctor). A MEDDAC doctor would never work at McNair. He might consider it "slumming."

How to beat phone bill blues

by Linda Jach

Service members with more than $1,000 phone bills — it's a sad story, but one that's heard too often in the command.

"What the service members here don't seem to realize is that the German Bundespost telephone system is very different from the system they're used to in the states," commented Capt. Cindy J. Galindo, chief, Telephone Branch, Communications and Electronics Division. "The billing plan is different, plus, it's about five times more expensive for long distance calls to the U.S."

You may be able to avoid a large bill by understanding the billing plan of the Bundespost.

In addition to a DM27 service charge and perhaps another "special services" charge, a local call costs 23 pfennigs and depending on the distance of long distance calls — more. Service members are given 20 local calls per month free.

You have ten days after the date of mailing to pay the bill, however, by German law, the bill should be paid the same day you receive it.

If you don't pay the bill that month, you will receive a combined bill the next month.

If, by the end of the second month, the bill isn't paid, a partial block will be put on the phone. This means that incoming calls will come through, however, outgoing calls can't be made. By this time, if you can pay the bill, you will also have to pay the unblocking fee, plus the basic rental fee of DM27.

By the end of the third month, if the bill is still not paid, the Bundespost stops service completely and notifies the Telephone Branch, at which time, a command letter will be sent to your battalion commander, company commander, Deputy Chief of Staff, Intelligence and the Chief of Staff. The money can be deducted from your pay.

You may be able to stop the pay deduction and the command letter, if you're enrolled in the Army Community Services financial counseling program and have started a payment plan.

Also, you may go directly to the Bundespost Office at Truman Plaza or on McNair Compound to work out a partial payment plan.

You should know that your service will not be started again, however, until the reinstallation fee (between DM40 to DM200), the blocking fee and the bill itself are completely paid up.

The Telephone Branch offers some "telephone tips" for you to keep long distance call rates down and services continuing smoothly.

If you go on TDY or on leave, make arrangements with a friend to have the bill paid.

When calling long distance — call collect; the cheaper stateside rates apply when you do this.

Have friends and family call you. The number for direct dialing here from the states is 011-49-30-(home phone number). You can send your friends or family a check for the bill later.

The most expensive alternative is to dial direct. If you place the call, limit your call to three minutes. Galindo suggests however, to make the most of the money and use the entire three minutes. "No matter what portion of three minutes you talk, you pay for three full minutes," said Galindo.

If you do call direct to the states, three minutes costs approximately DM30. A three-minute call from CONUS to Berlin or collect from Berlin to CONUS costs $3.15 if it's made between 5 p.m. and 5 a.m. CONUS time.

To keep your telephone bill down, deduct official calls. You can do this by filling out form AEFA 034170, Application / Certification / Authorization of Official Local Telephone Calls.

If you have any questions or comments about your phone service, call Mrs. Mueller at the Telephone Branch, 819-6311.

High school hosts Kreuzberg students

by R. Gibson

Last Friday the Berlin American high school hosted 60 students and 6 teachers from the 2nd Oberschule in Kreuzberg.

The students, 30 were German and 30 were Turkish, visited the American high school as part of the student exchange program. On Nov. 25, 30 students from the American high school will return the visit.

All of the students who visited have had some education in the English language. Some of their comments showed that they found the rotating classroom schedule to be a bit confusing. According to Herr Werner Prigge, host nation coordinator for the Berlin American High School, the students were very impressed with the vocational study program offered by the high school. German students do receive formal vocational training, but at a much later time.

The visitors felt that there was a better and more relaxed student teacher relationship at the American school, but also felt that there was a much more structured discipline program.

The thing that will likely be most remembered by the visiting students is "Spirit Week." The high school homecoming made a great impression on the students according to Prigge. They related spirit week to the "Fasching Season" that they celebrate during the spring.

The high school exchange program is considered by Prigge to be a very important tool to the community relations mission that all Americans must fulfill.

Oops! Berlin Observer goofs

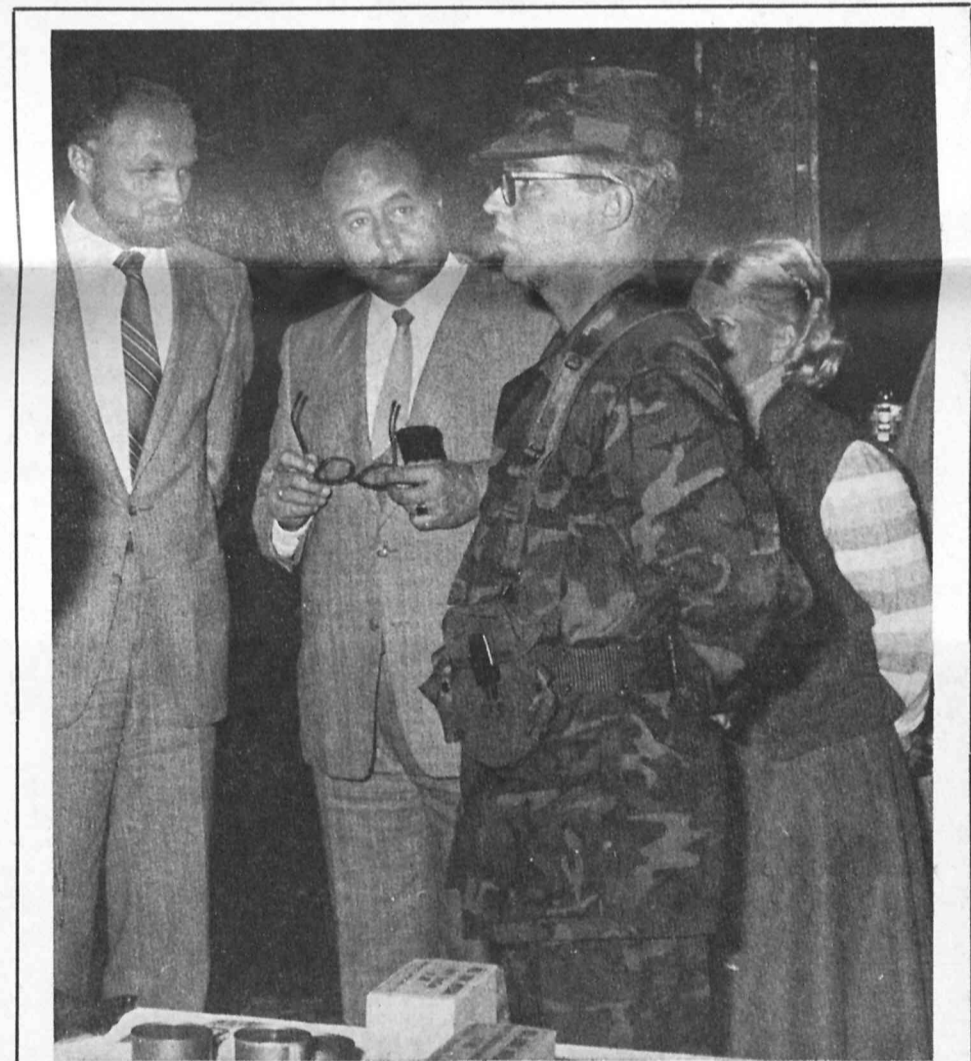

Last week a most unusual thing happened. In the light of a long weekend, caught up in the pace of the following short work week, The Berlin Observer made some errors.

On page three, we identified a TOW as a DRAGON, and a DRAGON as a TOW. But we want all to know that due to the assistance of some very professional members of our brigade, the staff of the Berlin Observer now knows the difference.

On page four, we ran a feature on the Rondo communications exercise. In our story, we identified Sp4 James Bittner as being assigned to 2nd Battalion.

Again we goofed because Bittner is a member of the 42nd Engineer Company.

The Berlin Observer would like to take this opportunity to apologize for our errors.

Dakota Brave ... Allies working tog

by Linda Jach

Intelligence had reported that the Teutonian government, backed by Panslavia, was planning an attack on Berlin. The attack was believed to be planned for Oct. 20.

And, attack they did! But Berlin's British, French and American soldiers teamed up to defend the city eventually pushing back the Teutonians. This all happened during the Allied Field Training Exercise, Dakota Brave, Tuesday through yesterday.

The first day of action saw red forces, (the Teutonians), made up of allied units, attack the friendly blue allied forces in the north Dauerwald, the Grunewald, Ruhleben Fighting City and Doughboy City. The attacks succeeded and forced blue forces to withdraw.

A key operation of the first day's activities was a river crossing. The 42nd Engineer Company, Combat Support Battalion and a British engineer unit were called on to ferry a company of British soldiers from the Royal Regiment of Fusiliers in a withdrawal across the Wannsee.

Later in the day, a blue force of 4th Battalion soldiers and troops from the British Royal Regiment of Fusiliers were attacked by red forces made up of Company A, 2nd Battalion and soldiers from the French 11th Chasseurs at Doughboy City. Eventually, blue forces were forced to withdraw into the Grunewald.

Late Tuesday night until the early hours of Wednesday morning, the enemy conducted reconnaissance and combat patrols against the blue defensive perimeter.

Wednesday morning, the enemy was at it again, conducting probes at Avus underpasses along the blue's defensive perimeter to find where they should attack.

That afternoon, red forces conducted air mobile raids, using helicopters from the U.S. Army Berlin's Aviation Detachment and a British aviation unit. The operations included reconnaissance missions and lifting red force troops behind the blue force's front lines. "The objective of this mission was not only to improve interoperability between British and American pilots, but also to familiarize the allied fighting forces with air mobile tactics," explained 1st Lt. Earl Wingrove, assistant G-3 operations officer.

Later, the red forces surprised the blue forces with a chemical attack forcing them to don their protective suits and masks. A spray attack was also conducted from the air simulating a chemical substance.

And, the red forces didn't stop there. Wednesday night they again launched a general attack against the blue force's defensive perimeter, forcing them to withdraw even further.

But, yesterday morning, the blue force took the offensive and launched a successful series of counterattacks, forcing the enemy to withdraw.

Berlin was at last free from Teutonia's grasp.

The Allied FTX centered on a combined arms tripartite concept. Combined arms involves two or more combat arms providing support for one another. For example, in the exercise, a blue force was made up of infantrymen from 4th Battalion and the Royal Regiment of Fusiliers with support from French tanks of the 11th Chasseurs.

The objectives of the FTX were many. It was developed to promote allied cooperation and understanding, provide training to allied soldiers in Military Operations in Urban Terrain and conventional operations, improve allied logistical support, tactical communications procedures, medical support, and staff procedures and planning.

The logistical support was provided by the Allied Logistics Center, housed at Andrews, where British, French and American soldiers combined their efforts to give the units the supplies and replacements they needed. Plus, they maintained an allied communications center and processed and transported prisoners of war.

"Casualties" of the battle were given the medical attention they needed at the Allied Hospital. Anyone from patients with burns to broken bones to victims of a chemical attack were treated, as well as others who needed minor surgery. Set up at Roosevelt Barracks, the hospital was equipped with a reception area, a triage room, laboratory, x-ray room, operating room, and recovery room, and manned by British, French, and American medical specialists.

This Allied FTX, one of three that the allies conduct each year, was named Dakota Brave. The Dakota were a nation of related tribes of Indians, commonly called the "Sioux." They were known as freedom loving people, who were brave warriors when provoked. The word Dakota, their name for themselves, means "Allies."

Like the Dakota, an alliance made stronger in the face of danger, the FTX represented the solidarity of the U.S., British, and French Allies in West Berlin.

Bears pound Barons at homecoming games

by Sue Sweeney

The Berlin American High School Bears held off a late game surge by the Bitburg Barons, to win Saturday afternoon's homecoming game, 25-23.

The game topped off a week of spirited activities at the high school. The "Spirit Week" centered around the theme of "Bears beat the Barons."

To start off the week, on Tuesday the seventh and eighth grade students held a crazy hat and sock day. Freshman and sophomore punk rockers danced their way to classes on Wednesday. The juniors dressed in maroon and white for school colors day, Thursday. On Friday, Al Capone and other gangsters roamed the halls as the seniors sponsored gang day.

The girl's varsity volleyball team beat the teachers, 15-10, in round robin competition, Thursday. But teachers bounced back to defeat the junior varsity team later that afternoon.

In a role reversal, high school boys dressed as cheerleaders as the girls played a Powder Puff football game.

The Junior Varsity boys started Saturday's homecoming activities off with an impressive 12-6 win over the Bitburg Barons. Offensive standouts were end Delano Adams and quarterback Tim Shaw. William Pollard and Randy Smith held up the defense well.

The parade began at noon and wound it's way through the streets of Berlin around the high school and Truman Plaza areas. The parade featured floats from each grade, the BAHS marching band, the cheerleaders, and the drill team.

Then it was time for the game that everyone had been waiting for. After the players from both varsity teams had been introduced, serious play began.

The first quarter ended with no score for either side, but then Berlin got motivated. Matt Dover passed to John Cervantes for the first touchdown. Brian Frazier kicked the point after touchdown. Frazier ran the ball 39 yards for the second touchdown and kicked the point after.

The second quarter ended with the Bears ahead, 14-7.

At halftime, the BAHS marching band performed songs from "Star Wars," "It's a Small World," and the "Theme from Love Boat" under the direction of David Bryant, Harrison Reed, and Renee Wilburn. Matt Hughes soloed on the xylophone with the "Theme from Sesame Street."

Tracey Turner, daughter of Air Force Master Sgt. and Mrs. Edward M. Turner, was crowned homecoming queen by Brig. Gen. John E. Rogers, community commander. Helen Davis and Sharon McAuley were runners-up. The queen's court consisted of Beth Deasey, Jessica Jacalone, Sally Shoup, Pam Morey, and Mary Yancey.

The announcement that the seniors had won the float competition also came during halftime. The theme for their float was "Bears dog the Barons."

The drill team and the cheerleaders also performed at halftime. Then it was back to the game.

In the third quarter, Brian Frazier intercepted a Bitburg pass and ran 45 yards for a touchdown. Berlin's Matt Dover ran the ball three yards for the point after touchdown, and Berlin took a 22-7 lead into the final quarter.

In the final frame, the Barons scored a touchdown and a two point conversion to narrow Berlin's lead to 22-15. Brian Frazier then kicked a field goal for Berlin to increase the Bears' lead to 10 points.

The Barons final tally came on a long pass with the two point conversion. But time was in Berlin's favor, and they ended victorious, 25-23.

Outstanding offensive players were Brian Frazier and John Cervantes. Defensively, Aaron Owens, Frank Richartz, and Dan Quarter stood out.

Coming down

The Berlin Brigade soccer team played in a one-day "Knock-out" tournament Saturday that included teams from the British and French Forces, German Police and local German teams.

The competition was tough and the standard of play very high. In a hard fought final, the German Police came out on top in the competition while the Brigade Team placed in their division. (Photo by Sheila Graham)

Berlin soldier's hobby possible world's record

by Judy Connors-Tenney

What is a quarter-mile long, one inch wide, full of holes, cost $9,000 and has no use whatsoever?

Answer: a chain of flip-tops.

Sgt. James Lawrence, Company C, 2nd Battalion, spent almost two years collecting the estimated 17,000 flip-tops and stringing them together because he wants to get into the Guinness Book of World Records.

"I have the current edition of the book," said Lawrence, "and it doesn't mention anything about flip-tops. So, as far as I know, there's no record yet."

He estimates the chain to be 1,400 feet long and he and his friends "add to it just about every day." He does, however, agree that the chain serves no useful purpose. "At one time I had it hanging in eight-foot strips as a room divider in the barracks," he said, but the first sergeant made me take it down."

"Then the company commander asked me to hang it on the company Christmas tree. But, with the parties we sometimes have, it might have gotten torn up, so I didn't."

The chain, which contains flip-tops from about $9,000 worth of beverage cans is now kept in a locked footlocker.

Lawrence will be moving to Fort Campbell, Ky., in November where he will be reunited with his wife and two children, who are currently living in Troy, N.Y.

The chain, which will travel with him, will continue to grow there, he said.

"THIS IS JUST TOO MUCH" — After wrapping the chain around himself and his friends 17 times, Sgt. Jim Lawrence, (center), Company C, 2nd Battalion, is still left holding more than half its quarter-mile length.
