

New ARTEP tried

by Linda Jach

The men of 3rd Battalion recently went through their Army Training and Evaluation Program in the Grunewald. But, it was no ordinary ARTEP.

The soldiers were evaluated not only on conventional combat readiness, but on Military Operations in Urban Terrain as well. According to Maj. Eric R. Marshall, 3rd Battalion's S-3, "This is the first battalion to be tested on both types at once."

MOUT training involves combat-in-the-cities, while conventional training covers the areas of

"traditional war," Marshall said, "such as fighting in the country side, on hills, etc."

The men were tested on a number of skills," said SFC Wayne L. Gibney, 3rd Battalion operations sergeant. "Not only were they tested at battalion level, but at company, platoon, squad and individual levels as well."

The battalion as a whole was evaluated in movement-to-contact, night attack, withdrawal and deliberate attack.

4th Battalion tasked

Evaluators' job not easy

by Dave Moreland

The Army Readiness Training and Evaluation Program is designed to ensure units are capable of performing their combat mission. As in any testing situation, the evaluator plays an important role in the accurate evaluation of any unit.

During 3rd Battalion's recent ARTEP, 4th Battalion was tasked with providing evaluational support

1st Lt. Sean O'Malley, Company A, 4th Battalion, stood in an open field at Parks Range watching an 81 mm mortar platoon preparing for a mission. "It's my job, as a field evaluator, to insure that the platoon's actions comply with the ARTEP manual or that any discrepancies are recorded. I don't decide if the platoon will pass or fail a task. I compile my direct observations in a report for the senior evaluator."

The process demands careful attention and meticulous note-taking of the field evaluator. It's not an easy job, as many soldiers who have seen the evaluators at work will tell you. For every platoon of weary soldiers moving through the Grunewald there is an equally weary evaluator. Trudging along with the platoon, monitoring his back pack radio, the evaluator must control the test situation with skill.

1st Lt. Mark Rozycki, Company A, 4th Battalion, evaluated the operations of an infantry platoon throughout the ARTEP. While the platoon was halted before an assault on Doughboy City, Rozycki questioned each soldier on their mission knowledge. "It's the most effective method of checking the information exchange within a platoon."

For the five days of 3rd Battalion's ARTEP, the evaluators collected information by watching the platoon's actions, listening to instructions and information passed through the platoon and questioning soldiers. Although this is the most important part of evaluation, the field evaluator's job did not finish with the end of the ARTEP.

The field evaluator must then compile his pages of notes and observations into an evaluator's report. The reports will be used to decide if a unit passes or fails any portion of its ARTEP or needs additional training in a particular mission area.

The field evaluators are the eyes and ears of the evaluation system. It's a critically important job that is neither glamorous or easy. It requires true professionals.

WHY HERE — 1st Lt. Mark Rozycki, Company A, 4th Battalion asks PFC Harold Minor, Company B, 3rd Battalion, his reasons for setting up his machine-gun position here. Rozycki was one of the many evaluators involved in 3rd Battalion's recent ARTEP.

PULL — Sp4 Gerry Hogg, Company A, 3rd Battalion checks out the sub-caliber device before cleaning it. Clean-up is just one of the many tasks 3rd Battalion soldiers had to perform after their ARTEP.

Unity Week theme sought; contest on

The Berlin Community 2nd Annual Unity Week needs a theme. If you have a theme which you think will promote ethnic unity and pride in being American, send or bring your idea to ACofS, G-1, EOSO, Rm. 1069, Bldg. 1, Clay Headquarters or to the Army Community Services office located at Truman Plaza.

The person submitting the winning theme will receive a $50 Savings Bond. The contest is open to all military and DoD civilians and and their families.

Deadline for entries is March 2.

Sticks and stones may break bones but words abuse

by Jill Morgenthaler

(Editors note: Capt. Jill Morgenthaler is a member of the Berlin Women's Advisory Council, a command council set up to advise the commander on issues affecting women in the Berlin command.

"Hey cutie! Come up to my room, I'll exercise you! Hey, what a broad!"

As women go to work, shopping or jogging in the vicinities of the Berlin Kasernes, they sometimes find themselves subjected to obscene language and gestures, lewd suggestions, insults or animal noises.

Verbal assault is a dehumanizing violation of a person and a form of sexual harassment and it is punishable under the UCMJ.

A woman need not avoid the Kaserns or change her jogging route because of this harassment. There are other and more effective ways of dealing with the problem.

The most immediate solution is to identify the soldier or at least his unit by his unit crest, or by the window from which he is hollering.

No matter if you are an officer, enlisted, civilian, wife, or daughter, you can walk into the unit and ask to see the commander or first sergeant. Explain the incident, identify as best as possible the offender and request that this behavior be stopped.

If it is after duty hours or on a weekend, see the charge-of-quarters NCO or Staff Duty Officer. As you look on, have them or yourself log the complaint in the duty officer's log, DA Form 1594.

The commander will receive the log and should take action to correct the problem. To follow-up, call the commander on the following work day to ask what corrective action has been taken.

If you are not satisfied with the response of the commander, could not see him, or chose not to see him, then you may go to the Equal Opportunity Staff Office, Bldg. 1, Clay Headquarters, Rm. 1069, Phone 6385 and lodge your complaint. The staff will promptly go through the chain-of-command to correct the situation.

If you cannot contact the EOSO, the last step is to Dial Action, 7777.

Leave your name, phone number and the details of the incident. Within seven working days you will be contacted by the commander or EOSO and advised of the measures they have taken.

Yes, as a person, you have the right to walk down the street, head high and without fear of harassment or embarrassment by ill-mannered, immature soldiers.

Lt. Fern

ARTEP — not just field duty

by Sam Williams

ARTEP. A simple and familiar term that has little more than "field duty" as a definition with most of us. However there is more to an Army Training and Evaluation Program than mere field duty. It involves numerous coordinations, much preparation and a serious mind once the training has begun.

According to 2nd Lt. Otis Gaines, fire support officer, Battery C, 94th Field Artillery, ARTEPs are very serious and complex exercises. Gaines said that ARTEPs are conducted as a means to help train for and maintain a high level of unit readiness for actual combat situations.

"The equipment today is so complex and the weapons systems so modern until it would be impossible to teach anyone how to properly operate them over night," Gaines explained.

As a result those who are in charge of operating these modern and complex pieces of weaponry must remain proficient at it. And, as Gaines puts it, that's where the ARTEPs come in.

"There's a lot more to participating in an ARTEP than just loading the vehicles and going down to the West (Germany)" Gaines continued. "First we must coordinate with the S-1 (adjutant) section to receive such information as unit strength, personnel strength, personnel management, morale and discipline reports and other information like that.

"Next we have to contact the S-2 (intelligence) branch to get data relating to intelligence training among other things.

"From there we go over to the S-3 (training) and there we pick up all pertinent information on organization, training and operations.

"And our final contact is normally the S-4 (logistics) section. There they set us transportation, maintenance, supplies and all other logistical concerns."

Following the contacts Gaines explained that usually a barracks commander will hold a meeting with his men to tell his troops what is expected of them on this exercise (as in relation to ARTEP standards listed in ARTEP Manual 6-635, 6-675 and 6-37) and what he personally expects of them individually and as a team.

Usually the battery commander heads the reconnaissance, selection and operation team who goes ahead to prepare for the battery. "The battery commander goes ahead to scout out the prospected terrain for the best possible location for his unit's ARTEP," said Gaines. "After carefully reconning the area a site selection is made. The word is then relayed to the waiting executive officer who then leads the convoy of men and equipment to the location for the occupational phase.

Now that all points are properly coordinated and the convoys have arrived, the ARTEP begins.

"But that isn't the end of it," Gaines warned. "The same processes must be used to get all of the people and equipment here back to Berlin. You just don't say 'That's it! We're through. Let's go home.'"

For their efforts, the battery receives the following Friday or Monday off as a training holiday, if all goes well and no maintenance problems occur. "Should problems occur however or should the battery not perform up to expectations there is no three day weekend for the men. Just business as usual," Gaines said.

According to Gaines ARTEPs are not tests. "In reality," he said. "They are nothing more than mere evaluations to point out a unit's strengths and weaknesses. In short you may say its just an evaluation of collectives tasks and training." Gaines went on to say that from these evaluations the commanders can usually construct the training chart for his unit for the next month or quarter because he knows what areas his men need to concentrate on most heavily.

Gaines said that on the last ARTEP the battery participated in, they received a level one rating. According to him ARTEP ratings are a good indication of the combat capability of a unit.

New eight-hour format has MPs in smiles

by Sam Williams

As of last Friday MPs here no longer have to pull twelve-hour work shifts.

According to Lt. Col. Kenneth Alderson, provost marshal, the MPs now operate on a eight-hour-a-day seven-days-on seven-days-off schedule. The seven-on-seven-off simply means the on-duty platoon pulls one full week of duty patrol before being replaced by another duty platoon.

Alderson said that way of operating should provide better all around flexibility to the unit. According to him the new schedule will provide more rest time for the MPs after pulling partol duty, enhance unit readines and provide more time for company training exercises and training support to the Brigade. Alderson also added that the schedule would serve as a morale booster for the MPs since they now have the option of pre-planning their week-ends and free time days. This is an option that did not exist on the previous format.

"This format is the optimun," Alderson said. "It complements law enforcement as well training missions. Before training was limited to only one day without interfering with other on-going events, which could sometimes cause problems. But under the new format the company training NCOs have as many as four days available for continious training sessions."

However, the extra training and unit time is just one positive attribute of the new system. Alderson quickly pointed out others.

"The eight-hour shifts are also much more favorable to the MPs," he continued. "While working on the other format our people actually worked a minimum of 14 hours a days because of the standard pre and post shift procedures."

Also, Alderson said, with the eight hour shifts, the driver's will also have up to 16 hours to rest and prepare for the next day's patrol duty depending on the company's schedule.

Another big plus for the new format is that it provides for better MP support during brigade training mission.

"Because of the new working structure we are now capable of supporting Brigade training exercises with a platoon and maintain an on-duty platoon here," said Alderson.

toon here," said Alderson.

Alderson further explained that the MPs are presently divided into three platoon. The platoons are: on duty, off duty and administrative or law enforcement support platoon. (It should be noted, however, that "off duty" denotes such things as training, vehicle upkeep, complimenting on-going missions, and not necessarily "free" time). According to Alderson the military police tasks are rotated from platoon to platoon to provide all members of the company with the opportunity to become proficient at all phases of military police work and law enforcement.

Of course the seven-on/off is like all other systems — that is not without its deficiencies, and Alderson was quick to point them out too.

"With this method of operation the unit strength must be maintained because if it isn't you'll end up having to borrow from other platoons which can cause valuable training sacrifices or require a cut back in commitments."

But according to Alderson the advantages far outweigh the disadvantages and he's pleased to finally incorporate this new schedule into his system.

Modeling keeps soldier busy

Sp4 Edward Burton, U.S. Military Liaison Mission, likes building tanks, guns and airplanes — at a 176 scale.

Model-building isn't kids stuff for Burton, who estimates he has between 350 and 400 of them. Miniature tanks, cannons, aircraft and Russian, German and American soldiers cover almost every available space in his room. Only two replicas of antique cars break the main theme — the rest is all military equipment.

Burton explained that his model-building is just an extension of his interest in military history, particularly the World War II era, and in military equipment and weapons.

"Model building gives me a chance to see what the equipment actually looked like, and to learn what it was used for," he said.

As a child Burton built a couple of models, but it wasn't until last summer that he really got started in his hobby.

"I'm not interested in a lot of things most people are," he admitted, "I don't drink much and would rather spend my time working with my hands. I like building things. When I got to Berlin I looked for something to do. I noticed they were getting models in at the Four Seasons and at the PX so I bought a couple to try. They kept getting them in, and I kept buying them." He estimates his hobby has cost him roughly $500 so far, but says it's still cheaper than going out every night. It gives him a sense of satisfaction too.

"Not only do the models give me something to do," he said, "but I also learn about the equipment. I've always been interested in military history and in weapons. The models come with a synopsis giving the dates they were used, by whom, and what they were used for. And once they're built, I get to see what they really looked like.

"I have replicas of all of the most commonly known World War II aircraft — German and Allied, and most of the rest is World War II armor and vehicles."

Burton admits to some redundancy in his models, and to the fact he hasn't built all of them. Some have been collected from friends, but almost all are in the 176 scale. A few are in the 148 and 172 scales.

"I bought them in this scale so that I could make up platoons and simulate battle scenes and landscapes," he said. "Besides, if they were bigger I wouldn't have room for them! Some have been set up to show the entire line of equipment as it progressed. I hope someday to set up displays showing the evolution of certain military equipment."

Patience is the key word in actually building models, according to Burton.

"If you don't have a lot of patience, you'll probably just crush the model and throw it into the trash," he said. "Some of the biggest problems are breaking small pieces, using too much glue or getting it on your fingers when you don't have the proper tools! Or, when you paint, it'll smear and end up on the pieces you didn't want painted."

"Construction time varies. The more pieces, the longer it takes to put a model together," said Burton.

"I've built some in just a couple of hours, and others have taken days, and that's without the paint. I've usually got several started, and working on them a little at a time means it takes weeks to get them finished."

He feels fellow soldiers are tolerant of his hobby, although not necessarily interested. "I've gotten a few strange looks," he said, "because model building is usually associated with kids. But, I don't care — I'm keeping busy and learning too."

New bonus system pays reservists too

Soldiers will get a $600 bonus for enlisting or reenlisting in the Individual Ready Reserve or the Inactive National Guard. The program began Jan. 2, 1981, with an effective date of Oct. 1, 1980.

The payments are authorized for eligible active, reserve and prior service enlisted personnel who have completed their military service obligation. They must have less than 10 years total service (waivers considered) and enlist for three years in the ING or IRR.

Active duty soldiers can apply for enlistment and bonus eligibility within 90 days of scheduled discharge or separation.

To be eligible for the bonus, service members must remain as enlisted personnel during their period of enlistment. They must possess and be qualified in a primary or secondary MOS specified for the bonus. All specialties except band are initially eligible. Individuals may not change their MOS unless reclassified by Headquarters, DA.

The first payment of $300 will be made upon enlistment or reenlistment. One hundred dollars will be paid each of the next three years completed satisfactorily. Additional bonuses may be paid for future reenlistments if the soldier continues to meet requirements.

Active duty soldiers may get more information through the Reserve recruiter at their supporting installation or nearest Reserve activity. Members of Guard/Reserve units and the ING should see their unit retention officer. Prior service personnel should contact a recruiting station or Reserve activity. Members of the IRR or Standby Reserve should contact their personnel center as follows: Commander, U.S. Army Reserve Components Personnel and Administration Center, ATTN: AGUZ-RCR, 9700 Page Blvd., St. Louis, MO. 63132.

Soldiers convicted in courts-martial here

Pvt. 1 Donald H. Lebo, Company C, 3rd Battalion, was convicted by a general courts-martial on Feb. 5 for conspiracy, failure to obey order, by having in his possession a knife, violating a regulation by possessing a smoke grenade, assault and possession of marijuana. Lebo was sentenced to be confined at hard labor for two years, to forfeit all pay and allowances and to be discharged from the service with a bad conduct discharge.

PFC Curtis L. Hunter, Company C, 4th Battalion, was convicted by a special courts-martial on Feb. 5 for dereliction of duty and wrongful possession of marijuana in the hashish form. Hunter was sentenced to be confined at hard labor for 45 days and to forfeit $334 per month for two months.

Pvt. 1 Gaile R. Cooper, Company C, 2nd Battalion, was convicted by a special courts-martial on Feb. 6 for violation of a regulation by possessing two ration cards and larceny of property in the value of $247. Cooper was sentenced to be confined at hard labor for six months, to forfeit $334 per month for six months and to be discharged from the service with a bad conduct discharge.

Thrift Shop - place for bargains

If one man's junk is another man's treasure, then the Berlin Thrift Shop is one store full of bargains.

The shop is located in the low, gold buildings next to AFN on Saargemuender Strasse. There's only a small, unpretentious sign over the doorway advertising its presence, but nonetheless, it's easy to find. It's open Monday, Tuesday and Thursday from 10 a.m. to 2 p.m.

Once inside, shoppers will find everything from TVs and stereos, to books, records, small appliances, furniture, mens, womens and children's clothing, uniforms, shoes and boots, maternity clothes, pocketbooks, belts and knick-knacks. It won't break the piggy bank to bring them home either. All items are reasonably priced. Be advised though, prices are listed in Deutsche Marks, not dollars, so they may appear a little high at first.

For soldiers too

"When people think 'Thrift Shop', a lot of times they automatically think 'family,'" said shop coordinator

Tina Chopin, "but troops can benefit from it too."

To prove her point, Chopin rattled off about a dozen items soldiers could buy to make their barracks rooms more comfortable: TVs, vacuum cleaners, pots for plants, books, bookcases, lamps, chairs, transformers, etc. "We also have military uniforms, both Army and Air Force," she said. "If a soldier wants or needs a set of greens, or an overcoat, he can buy them here at a considerable savings." These items are available to military ID card holders only.

Another way troops can benefit from the Thrift Shop is through consignment of unwanted goods. "Instead of dumping the things they don't want, or can't take home with them when they leave, soldiers may as well make a little money off them instead," said Chopin. "They'd be surprised what they can sell in here, and how quickly it goes." Chopin estimates that she easily makes DM 100 each month just by taking in her children's old toys, outgrown clothing, and unwanted household items.

Open for all

Anyone can use the shop. Individuals don't have to be in the military to buy items. All that's required is the specified number of Marks. To consign items, however, people need an ID card or valid U.S., British or French passport. The number from these documents will be used as the seller's account number.

Consignments are accepted between 10 a.m. and 1 p.m. each Monday. Up to 30 items may be brought in one consignment, with no more than 10 of these being clothing items. Everything must be in good condition — no missing buttons, ripped seams, torn zippers, and appliances must be in working order. The selling price is set by the consignee but the shop receives 20 percent commission as a handling fee.

A full list of consignment rules is available at the shop during regular operating hours, or call 831-3648 for more information.

Volunteer staffed

The Thrift Shop is a community organization manned by about 35 volunteers and only three paid personnel. The money they earn is returned to the community in the form of scholarships for both students and dependent wives, Kinderkeller services, Boy and Girl Scouts, and special projects at the school or military organizations where the necessary monies can't be obtained elsewhere. So far this fiscal year DM 22,500 has been returned to the community. The amount is slightly over half of the shop's 40,000 DM goal for the year.

Even with 35 volunteers, the shop can always use more. "It's a good way for wives to get out of the house for awhile and help the community at the same time," said Chopin. Lunch and babysitting are provided for the volunteers, so while they're not making money, it's not costing them any either.

Whether people plan to buy or sell items, the folks at the Thrift Shop may be able to help them out. The shop won't always have exactly what they're looking for, but people are urged to keep trying. The stock changes often and there are certainly finds to be made.

ADDIN' IT UP — Kurt Oser, Thrift Shop volunteer, adds up the bargains found by Annette Krueger during a recent shop visit. Oser, who has worked every hour the shop has been open for the past three years, is the only male volunteer. He said he wanted to be active after he retired. The hospital didn't have a position for him, so he volunteered with the shop instead. The ladies are grateful, his fluent German is a big asset in dealing with some of their customers.

'Women' topic for seminar series

The G-3 Education Branch is sponsoring a number of seminars, which will be given by the University of Maryland through the year.

The first seminar, entitled, "Organizational Skills for Women," will be held Feb. 17 to 20 from 8 a.m. to 5 p.m. at the Andrews Education Center. The course, which is worth two credits, aims at developing within the military woman the capacity to establish realistic goals, make decisions and assert herself within the military context.

The second seminar will be given March 21 and 22 also at the Andrews Education Center. This course deals with the American woman — past, present and future. Its subject matter is well suited to women in the military as it deals with their ever increasing roles. The course is worth one credit.

"Women as Managers," will look at the realities of women in the work force — how women function as managers within organizational structures that have been traditionally male-dominated.

For women who wish to examine how organizations work and how to use these findings as a foundation to help them succeed in the military, the University of Maryland offers.

"The Organizational Woman." This is a one credit seminar which will be held May 2 and 3 at the Andrews Education Center.

From May 16 to 17, the university will be giving a one-credit seminar called "Focus on Women." This course was designed to help gather information and to develop skills in evaluating advertisements so that participants are less vulnerable to their impact.

"Organizational Skills for Military Women" will again be run from May 19 to 22 at the Andrews Education Center.

The last in the series, "Women and Employment," will examine legal remedies to employment discrimination and major court cases will be covered. A discussion concerning the future of economically active women is an important part of the seminar. The course will be given at the Andrews Education Center from Sept. 12 to 13. It is worth one credit.

Registration for the first of the series begins immediately. You may register for any of the seminars now, at the University of Maryland Office, Clay Headquarters, Bldg. 4, at the Field Station, Berlin, Room 219 or at the Andrews Education Center, Tel. 3103.

MSAD readers reject Sidney

by Dean Brown

Shocked readers of this column continue to flood the MSAD switchboard with doleful calls bemoaning the departure of Norman, the fabled chief correspondent of that division. Now residing in California, Norman writes for a great metropolitan newspaper. His associates report that he misses Berlin, especially its recreational aspects, and that his move to the sun may not fulfill its initial promises. True to form, however, Norman has made up his mind to give it his very best shot.

Norman's replacement, Sidney, has prompted reader response to a degree hitherto unknown in the history of the column now before your eyes. Unfortunately, it is not clear that the response will justify MSAD's hasty decision to hire Sid as Norman's replacement.

Here are samples from the phone calls, conveniently grouped according to the branch of MSAD concerned:

ITT tours

From Rodney McDonald:

"I am appalled by the lack of bite in Sidney's prose. Norman would have informed us far more entertainingly of ITT Tours' upcoming events. As all aware readers realize, those plans include the continuation of special tours to East Berlin, with trips to the Soviet Military and Postal Telecommunications Museum and the Natural History and Maerkisches Museums coming soon (Feb. 21 and 28).

"ITT goes to Munich for the carnival Fasching season Feb. 25 to March 2, and to Garmisch March 11 to 16.

"In Berlin, ITT takes bargain-hungry shoppers to a home furnishings store Tuesday and to the Reichstag (with a three-course meal) on Feb. 22. Call ITT at 6523 for details."

Recreation centers

Our next phone call comes from Huntley W. Fry, M.A.:

"As a professor of English, I am disappointed with Sidney's lack of clarity. Why could he not write in the following concise and clear manner:

"Tonight at 7:30, the All American of McNair presents the big hits of Led Zeppelin with free refreshments. Tomorrow at 1 p.m., the center stages a Hearts Tournay to celebrate the day of St. Valentine. Call 3125 for details.

"Monday is Washington's Birthday, an event celebrated at the All American with the George C. Scott film classic, 'Patton,' at 1 p.m. Feb. 21 witnesses a chess tournament at 1 p.m. as well.

"At Andrews, the Hi-Lite presents steak night, with a complete meal and drinks, Thursday (but reserve a place by Monday at 3554). Music fans can hear talented local musicians perform at a Folkhouse Friday at 7 p.m. On Feb. 24, you can dine distinctively at the North Pole dinner, but please reserve by Feb. 22."

DYA activity

From Roger C. Bartlett:

"As a parent of four teenagers, I miss Norman and his reflective writing more than I can express. So do my children, who miss his descriptions of events such as these:

"Tonight, the DYA holds a pre-teen Valentine's Party at 6 o'clock. Tomorrow, the Dating Game comes from Hollywood to Berlin starting at 2 p.m. There, local high school students will pick their dates in an amusing fashion.

"Parents and children will thrill to the 'Odyssey of Jeremy Jack' on Feb. 20 to 22. This event is a play guaranteed to thrill. Call 6239 for other DYA ideas."

Sports

From George Jacques:

"As a devoted sports fan, I too miss the toughened style of Norman's reporting. How excitingly he would write about these MSAD sports events coming to us soon:

"Female volleyball fans now have the chance to form company-level teams to compete in Berlin until May. They should contact their battalion A&R person or call 6168.

"Basketball fans will want to flock to the Sports Center on Huettenweg to watch players from the over-thirty league every Monday and Wednesday at 6:30 and 7:45 p.m. They will also flock to the center to watch the USAB basketball championship games from Feb. 23 to 26.

"Call 6168 to ask about boxing championships and other sporting opportunities from MSAD."

Library corner

From Harvey L. Bibliotake, Esq.:

"Libraries need Norman's ability to convey the usefulness of their services. The Main Library is now running fascinating video films on Thursdays and Saturdays. Artists and designers can enter the library poster contest to achieve fame throughout Europe. Black History Month is running strong, and the libraries will show people what it concerns with special displays and books. Imagine the excitement of National Library Week, with great programs designed to attract everyone interested in the world around them! Get Norman back to put out the word!"

Music and crafts

Our last call comes from Yancey Kleeglite:

"While training in creative arts, I became fascinated with Norman's well-turned remarks. Sidney is a pale shadow, indeed, unable to excite us with his limp and stale prose. Consider the following events and imagine how Norman would describe them:

"The MSAD craft shops at Andrews and McNair have packed their calendars with special classes. The McNair Photo Center will teach you color printing, slide printing, photos-without-film-or-camera, and more if you call 3484. Andrews Auto Crafts will teach you about general car care (call 3349); the Andrews Woodshop will orient you on the use of power tools (call 3544) and the Andrews Ceramics Shop will explain its arts, too (if you call 3534).

"If you have a singing voice between soprano and bass, call George at the Andrews Music Center and ask about the new classical choir. The number to call is 3550."

Sidney, now on vacation, needs support. Norman, it appears, is gone forever, and it seems only fair to give Sid a chance. Watch this space next week for further developments.

Bowling tourney big success

Bernd Kornak took the honors for both high game, 257, and high series, 678, in Saturday's German-American Bowling Tournament held at the BB Sports Center. The tournament, which was the first of its type held in two years, was termed an overwhelming success by sports officials.

MSAD officials who sponsored the tourney, worked closely with members of the American Berlin men's and women's Bowling Associations to get the competition set-up. Seventy-two people, 36 German and 36 American, made up 18 teams. Each consisted of two men, one German, one American, and two women, one of each nationality.

The action saw some exceptionally high scoring, according to Al Garcia, sports director, as contestants competed for first and second place awards. A special prize of a trip to the Hartz Mountains was also offered to the highest American scorer for a single game by the German Men's Bowling Association.

Hanni Farber took high series for the women with 561 points while Jo Ann Mitchell took the women's high game award with 224. Mitchell's score was also the American's highest, single game score, and she won the Hartz Mountain trip.

Scott Rossi took second place in both high game and high series. His scores were 222 and 614.

Second place in the women's high series competition went to Siegi Reed with 553. Second place honors for high game went to Hanni Farber with 214.

The competition was tough, but spirits high as first place team members Ron Emery, Jo Ann Mitchell, Konni Altenberg and Michael Schafer edged a three-point victory over Hans-Joachim Plitch, Helga Hechel, Carol McKenzie and Steve Taylor. The final score was 2,165 to 2,162.

Awards were presented at the close of the competition by Brig. Gen. John E. Rogers, community commander.

According to Herman Sandoval, president, American Berlin Men's Bowling Association they hope to have another German-American Bowling tourney within the next three months. They are planning to hold the next one in a German bowling house and give American bowlers a chance to try out the German lanes.

Wrestlers battle away at All-Army team trials

Four Berlin wrestlers are competing in the All-Army wrestling trials at West Point, N.Y. The competition started yesterday.

The soldiers, chosen on the basis of their performances at the USAREUR Championships held last week are: Ed Miner, 287th MP Company, Geno Clemons and Al Hrncir, both from Headquarters and Headquarters Company, Berlin Brigade and Ron Williams, Company B, 3rd Battalion.

The USAREUR Championships which were held at Schweinfurt last week proved what the Berlin wrestlers were capable of.

Weighing in at 198 pounds, Al Hrncir was a double gold winner for the second straight year. Coach Hrncir has an outstanding 42-0 record with 35 of his victories being pins.

Earning his 11th and 12th titles of the season by winning all seven of his matches, Geno Clemons finished with the best record on the Berlin Brigade team, 46-0.

One of the Greco-Roman gold medalists, Ed Miner was undefeated. After the first day of free-style he was forced to withdraw because of a shoulder injury. He still managed to capture third place. His season record is 24-3.

Ron Williams lost his Greco-Roman finals to Ted Cuneo of VII Corps but came back to him in the freestyle competition. His season record is now 33-4.

Heavyweigh Ken Chorba won a silver medal in the freestyle competition to set his record at 12-4.

At 125.5 pounds, Michael January from Field Station, Berlin was eliminated after three rounds in the Greco-Roman competition and placed in the freestyle competition. His season record is 18-6.

George Loya, Company A, 3rd Battalion, weighing in at 114.5 pounds, captured the bronze medal in both Greco-Roman finals and freestyle competition. His record for the season is 3-9.

Overall Berlin wrestlers won three gold, one silver and one bronze medal in the Greco-Roman and three gold, two silver and two bronze in the freestyle competition.

Bear-a-Cudas break records; drown Heidelberg, 241-171

by Carol Cox

Coach John Fingerhut again coached his Berlin Bear-a-Cudas to a 241 to 171 victory over the Heidelberg Sea Lions in last Sunday's home meet at Andrews Pool.

Veronique Alderson broke her own European Forces Swim League record in the 100-meter butterfly with an outstanding time of 1:11.72 — almost two seconds faster than the old record. Also, several pool records toppled. Chris Parsons broke the old record of 1:28.44 in the ten and under boys individual medley with a 1:26.12.

Team effort and determination stimulated Karin Cox, Kristy Dimery, Peter Stowell, and Chris Parsons to victory in the ten and under age group free relay. Together, they broke their own 2:42.41 record, which was set in the last home meet, with a 2:39.30.

Several Bear-a-Cudas added to the team's winning effort by posting three first place finishes; Chris Parsons set a pool record with the individual medley and also took first in the ten and under boys free and breast stroke. Holly Braddock represented the ten and under girls in winning individual medley, free, and breast. Knut Asmis lead the 11-12 age group boys in individual medley, back, and breast. Lars Asmis took first in 15-18 age group boys individual medley, back, and fly.

The Bear-a-Cudas will be competing the SHAPE seals in Belgium on March 7. The next home game will be March 14 against the Lahr Beavers.

Tooth Fairy helps TAR pupils

by Linda Jach

Some call her the Tooth Fairy, others, Lynn Ballard, dental assistant. But, no matter what the name, she is doing a big job in the command by teaching Thomas A. Roberts Elementary school students good dental hygiene.

KILL THAT PLAQUE — Julio Robles, 6, brushes his teeth before digging in to his math assignment. Thanks to Lynn Ballard, dental assistant, students at TAR school are learning good dental hygiene. Julio knows her as "Tooth Fairy."

Ballard is in charge of the fluoride treatment program which was started a year ago by Berlin's DENTAC. The program is designed to provide children with weekly fluoride rinses, and teach them good dental care techniques.

"I use the Bass technique of brushing and flossing," Ballard explained. "I teach the students that when brushing their teeth they should position the bristles along the gumline because that is where plaque usually collects and can do the most harm. I also instruct the students on how to floss their teeth and tell them how important it is to do it every 24 hours."

Every week, Ballard visits different grade level classes to make sure the students receive a fluoride rinse. On top of that, some teachers leave in their schedule for Ballard to come in and give classes on dental care.

"I use a large scale model of teeth, named 'Charlie,' to help the children learn proper techniques," she said.

"For motivation, I give the children a disclosing tablet test. This is a tablet which shows remaining plaque. The class at each grade level, with the lowest percentage of plaque in their mouths, gets the silver toothbrush award. Also, the child in each class with the most plaque-free mouth gets to help brush 'Charlie,'" Ballard continued.

"Fluoride is not available in the water supply here, like it is in many cities in the U. S. The treatments we provide help the children because the fluoride is incorporated into the enamel of the teeth making them harder and more resistant to decay," said Dr. (Lt. Col.) Robert L. Childress, pedodontist at the U. S. Army Hospital dental clinic.

When reading literature on weekly fluoride rinses and their effect, almost all experts agree that dental decay is dramatically reduced — especially in children. There can be up to a 60 percent reduction in decay, according to Childress.

Besides the benefits of the treatments, the children also learn to be good dental patients. "Parents tell me all the time about how their children make sure they brush their teeth thoroughly, especially the day I visit their class," Ballard added.

"I can see a big improvement," she said. "I started at the school when it opened in October. Then, the children had perhaps 20 to 30 percent plaque-free mouths. Now, some classes have up to 80 and 90 percent. It gives me a good feeling to know I've gotten through to them," said Ballard.

Parents who would like their child enrolled in the program may send a note to school, with the child, giving their child permission to participate in the treatment program. New children just registering into the school will automatically receive a permission slip for their parents to sign.

Today might be a good day to enroll your child. You could help recognize National Children's Dental Health Month and keep your children healthy — head first.

ARTEP

"One problem that we ran into but quickly overcame was the small land area available to us," commented Marshall. "To compensate for this, all we did was pull a sub-unit away from the battalion and have them tested at their level while the rest of the battalion trained as a whole."

"The evaluators were very fair with us," said Sp4 David D. Williams, Company A, 3rd Battalion. "They made sure that they knew what we were doing. They also watched very closely to make sure that everything was done right and, they stayed out of your way to let us do it."

PFC Norman Wells, also of Company A, 3rd Battalion claimed that the training he received and the knowledge that he gained were well worth the "the roughest five days I ever had."

After going through those rough days however, the soldiers were also required to take care of litter and holes that were left in the Grunewald.

They worked from Friday morning until late in the afternoon and then Saturday, morning also, just filling in foxholes, etc. and picking up litter.

"That is one of the conditions for being able to train in the Grunewald here," said Marshall. "We must make sure that everything is left exactly the way we found it — in tip-top shape."

The 3rd Battalion will be getting the results of their ARTEP today.

Field QM Laundry extends service

Laundry service has been speeded up for soldiers training at Grafenwoehr, Hohenfels and Wildflecken training areas.

The new Quarter Master Laundry Service features everything the old one did: individual piece rate service, cost per bundle rate, and payroll deduction. Only now, soldiers can have their uniforms back at their field sites in just 48 hours.

The new service, which will apply to all soldiers in major training areas for field exercises, was designed to cut the time needed for clothing maintenance. For more information on the program, contact G-4 operations at 6592 or 6598. Soldiers wishing to sign-up for QM laundry service should see their unit supply clerk.

AFN Berlin TV will present a special tribute to Martin Luther King, Jr., Sunday night, immediately following the Evening News at 6:30 p.m.

The civil rights leader is saluted in music and verse. Among those paying homage to King are award winning actress Cicely Tyson, tenor George Shirley, conductor Julius Rudel and the Buffalo Philharmonic Orchestra.

Joining in the salute to Afro-American (Black) History Month is Oscar Brown, Jr., composer and playwright, hosting the series "From Jumpstreet".

"From Jumpstreet" can be seen each Saturday night at 6:55 p.m. this month.

This week Brown presents the history of the Blues; how the Blues came about in the deep south and some of the composers and artists who sing the Blues.

On the following two Saturdays, Brown introduces the history of dance to music, Afro-American dances and some excellent, talented troupes performing them.

On his last "From Jumpstreet," Brown traces the Music of the Stage; how it originated; the history of minstrel shows and how the minstrels affected other music.
