

Shoplifting: big problem with big penalties

by R. Gibson

Last week eight family members were apprehended in Berlin for shoplifting. Of the eight, ranging in age from 14 to 16 years, five were caught at the Truman Plaza Shopping Center and three were picked up at the Berliner Strasse branch of the Woolworth's department store.

These eight family members have all had their AAFES privileges suspended for six months. That means they will not be permitted to use any AAFES facilities, to include snack bars and theaters. Their I.D. Cards will be over stamped to indicate this, according to Lt. Col. Bernard Griffard, Deputy Chief of Staff for Community Affairs.

These measures may seem a bit harsh. The fact is, however, much more severe measures can be taken against shoplifters.

Family members may be sent back to the states and banished from Berlin as a result of a shoplifting conviction. If the family members caught downtown had tried to steal something from a civilian store in West Germany, they would find themselves subject to trial and sentencing from the German court system, Griffard said.

The conduct of family members may also have a direct effect on their sponsor. Counseling statements can be given to a service member when a member of his or her family is continuously in trouble for shoplifting.

Sales personnel at all AAFES facilities are trained in surveillance and observation techniques. The main exchange and other PX facilities are manned by store detectives, and mirrors are used to guard against theft, according to an AAFES official.

The stores on the economy are even more protected. With everything from closed circuit video cameras, to electronic door alarms, the German stores are very well equipped to handle shoplifters.

Service members should explain the penalties of shoplifting to their family members, letting them know what kind of things they can bring upon themselves and their sponsor if they are caught shoplifting. Family members should carefully consider the possible outcome if caught, before attempting to shoplift.

Soldiers move out to field training

by R. Gibson

Elements of the Combat Support Battalion loaded their tracked vehicles, gear and selves onto trucks and duty trains and left for Grafenwoehr, a major training area in West Germany. A convoy of wheeled vehicles departed early Tuesday morning via the Berlin-Helmstedt autobahn, and some soldiers left later on duty trains.

While in Grafenwoehr the soldiers will conduct various types of training that the geographic location of Berlin won't allow them to do.

According to Capt. Patrick Winn, battalion S-1 and officer-in-charge of the rear detachment, the soldiers have gone to the MTA in order to gain some valuable training in various types of gunnery and to prepare for their Army Readiness and Training Evaluation Program (ARTEP).

"Some of the training will be very extensive, and some will be conducted seven days-a-week," Winn said.

Not all of the time spent in the field will go into training. "They (the field soldiers) are scheduled to take a few tours while they're at the MTA", according to SSgt. Stephen Teeter, battalion S-3 NCO. "They will be visiting a crystal factory and a few other places," Teeter added.

The members of the Combat Support Battalion will be in the field for some time, but the training they will experience will make the entire exercise a worthwhile one.

There's lots new at AFN

by Mark White

AFN Berlin TV announces a number of new changes in their schedule to improve service to the community.

Starting Monday the station will sign on earlier with a TV Newscast at 8:10 a.m. and an expanded 30 minutes TV News Magazine at 11:30 a.m. on "Berlin Middy."

The first in a new series of daily quiz shows, "Family Feud," hosted by the well known Richard Dawson, takes to the air immediately following "Donahue" at 12:50.

Then another new two-a-week series, the popular and erudite talk master, Dick Cavett, has as his first guests, Jack Lemmon and Walter Matthau, discussing comedy acting versus serious acting. Dick will be seen every Monday and Tuesday following "Family Feud" at 1:15 p.m.

Wednesdays it's the new "Richard Simmons Show," featuring the health and care of your body with popular exercise specialist and entertainer, Richard Simmons.

Thursday and Friday at 1:15 p.m., super-entertainer Rich Little, hosts the highly rated show: "You Asked For It." The first two shows include Martial Arts in Taiwan, how the voice of Peanuts is done, a performance by Boomer The Dog, film clips of the cliff divers of Acapulco and a singing parrot.

Accidents — predictable, preventable

by Clarence McBride

If you visited a gambling casino in Atlantic City or Las Vegas and placed a bet, you wouldn't call it an accident if you lost your money. When you fail to wear safety shoes and something falls and breaks your toes, or you fail to wear safety glasses and a metal shaving causes loss of eyesight, would you say your toes were accidentally broken or you accidentally lost your eyesight?

When you put a match to a cigarette, you're not surprised when it starts to burn. If you smoke in bed and happen to fall asleep or leave an uncovered pan of grease unattended on a hot stove, should you be surprised if you wake up in the hospital with second and third degree burns?

When, as a youngster, you got caught talking in class and had to stay after school, you got the punishment you expected. When you "tailgate" in a line of traffic and crash or drive at the same speed on ice covered roads as you do when roads are clear and crash, can you say the crash was unexpected?

Many of our so-called accidents here in Berlin are, in fact, predictable events, with only the time and date unknown. Accidents don't just happen; they are planned in advance.

Eliminating unsafe acts makes sure accidents can't happen. If tasks are properly planned and unsafe acts are eliminated, you won't have to wonder, "When will I be involved in an accident?"

Secure those bikes

Larceny of bicycles increases each year with the onset of spring. More people each year purchase and ride bikes, and unfortunately leave them unsecured. Bicycle larceny is a preventable crime, if people will just take the time to secure their property.

Here are some tips on how to keep your bike safe from theft.

- Whenever you park your bike, lock it up.
- Utilize a good quality chain and lock.
- Place the chain through the frame and wheels and lock it to an immobile object.
- Store your bike in your quarters or secured storage rooms. If it's out of sight, it may be out of mind, for the thief!

Report changes now

All vehicle owners are required to report any changes in insurance data, especially a change of company, to the USAREUR Motor Vehicle Registry.

This is accomplished by bringing the new double white insurance card and a completed AE Form 1598 (Application for Motor Vehicle Registration) to the Provost Marshal Vehicle Registration Office. No fee is charged for this transaction. Failure to report changes in insurance data may result in cancellation of license plates.

List high value items

AE Form 3593 (Inventory of High Value Items List) is now available at the Crime Prevention Section of the Provost Marshal Office, Building 917, Andrews Barracks. Battalion crime prevention officers are encouraged to contact this office to obtain these forms for their subordinate units.

Family thanks Berlin community

Dear Maj. Gen. Boatner, Brig. Gen. Suddath, Berlin American Schools, ACC, and Berlin Community:

Thank you for the lovely scroll, certificate, Masses, and letters of sympathy on behalf of my husband, Roland, former Assistant Principal of the Berlin American Elementary School. Each day brings a new volume of mail reflecting the love and concern of so many beautiful people we had the pleasure of knowing.

We all loved Berlin, a community, family unto itself taking each and everyone under its wing, sharing the good and the bad. Of all his assignments, in his nineteen and a half years with the Overseas Dependent Schools, Berlin was his favorite.

Thank you from all of us, for making his last days his happiest memories.

Sincerely,
Agnes R. Dansereau

Working mother questions men's role

Dear Editor:
I've just read my umpteenth article about working mothers. They all seem to have the same basic theme: that it's naturally more difficult for a woman to have a career and a family.

I've often wondered about men who have kids and a career. Do they have doubts about their "dual roles?" When the kids come along, don't they take it for granted they'll continue working and be able to manage parenthood and a job? So why shouldn't women?

Women always seem to feel guilty about leaving their children with a sitter or at a daycare center while they work. Don't men feel guilt? Doesn't it bother them that they don't see the children all day? That they miss juniors first steps, his first words, etc.?

I've seldom read of the possibility of the father staying home with the kids and postponing their careers so the mother can continue hers. Why not? Why is it always the woman who wrestles with the decision to continue working or not? Countless times I've heard working women who become pregnant asked if they're going to go back to work once the baby is born. Have you ever heard a man asked that?

Men apparently can have their cake and eat it too. They have traditionally always had families and careers. So why should it be so difficult for women?

The reason is, of course, that men still do not consider the upkeep and maintenance of the home as one of their primary responsibilities in life. Even if a woman has a job, she's still expected to cook, clean, do laundry and take care of the kids. It's disheartening to know that the time when men will assume their responsibilities in the home is a long way off. And, so women will continue to feel they must give up or postpone their careers because the "adults" they're married to can't see their way to scrub out a toilet, cook a meal or wash a load of laundry without being lead by the hand.

Oh, sure, I've heard some men say they "help" their wives around the house. What that means is they still consider the care of the home her responsibility, rather than it being a fair 50-50 split.

Women have come a long way in recent years, but men still have a long way to go, too.

Army band tapes SQT

The 298th Army Band is taking part of their Skill Qualification Test on tape, next week.

The band's SQT contains both hands-on and written components. The written portion consists of soldier's common tasks and specific MOS questions. It's the hands-on component that is a little different.

The SQT consists of nine playing tasks. Each of the 37 band members who must take the test will perform three marches, three concert music pieces and three stage band pieces on a tape. One piece in each group is written on Skill level 3, Skill level 4, and one on Skill level 5.

The band members have a minimum of 60 days to practice the music before the test. The test takes about 20 minutes of tape time.

After the taping session, the tape will be sent to Norfolk, Va. There it will be evaluated and the results will be sent back to the band member who made the tape.

Basically each member is taking the same test, but the difficulty of the music will vary.

According to CWO2 David Ratliffe, the band commander, "This SQT is basically a fair evaluation of the band members ability. Everything that is musically on the SQT is demonstrated to me by the members during rehearsals and concerts."

He also added that it was a very realistic test since it tested music that the band would be playing throughout the year.

Families aren't alone while husbands are in field

by David Sullivan

On March 4 family members of Combat Support Battalion soldiers filled the seats of the Andrews Theater for a briefing on field training in West Germany. The briefing was conducted by the Battalion Commander, Lt. Col. J. Frank Hennesse.

Hennesse spoke about the missions of each unit going to the field. He explained exactly what specific tasks the soldiers perform. With the aid of a slide show, which featured each unit in action, the commander summed up the battalion mission. "We are down in the field practicing our tasks, keeping ready to fight, hopefully, keeping us from having to fight," he said.

While the battalion is in the field family members will be aided by the rear detachment administration. Hennesse explained, "The rear detachment administration here in Berlin will help families with problems and situations that a husband would ordinarily help the spouse with himself." Types of situations that could come up are puzzling financial or legal matters. For these types of occurrences, counsel will be available. A spouses worksheet was provided at the briefing with points of contact listed should a problem arise.

Hennesse assured the group that if a true emergency such as a death or serious illness occurred within a family the husband would be brought home immediately. He concluded his remarks by urging the spouses to support the troops in the field, "The training mission in the Army is not always comfortable. Please write to your spouses. After a long day in the field they look forward to a letter or a box of cookies from home."

Following the briefing a super supper was held for soldiers and their family members at the CSB Dining Facility.

Granted, training is difficult in the field. The hours are long, and the conditions not as comfortable as home. Still, the family members back here in Berlin sometimes also find the going a bit tough, even with the availability of the Commissary, PX, and administrative aid, if needed. And the family is still without their loved ones.

Margaret Brelsford, wife of Sp4 William Brelsford, 42d Engineer Company, said that having her husband away can be tough. She said, "It is hard. The kids realize that dad isn't around, and they may try to get over more." As far as activities for the wives, Brelsford thinks the wives should get together more because, she says, "To combat the loneliness, it is important to keep busy."

Virginia French felt that the wives were very well informed about the field trip and services being offered to family members. She felt the information put out at the briefing along with the spouse's worksheet is sufficient for the families to get along.

On being a single parent while her husband Sgt. Michael French, Company F, 40th Armor, is in the field, she said, "Being any Army wife you have to learn to be both mother and father because the nature of the job causes the husband to be away much of the time. My husband was in Korea for a year without me, and I learned to adjust quickly."

Gerarpa Kieselstein, wife of SSgt. Mark Kieselstein, Battery C, 94th Field Artillery, feels it is important to bridge the gap between Berlin and the field with letters and phone calls. She adds, "It is especially important to have the kids write letters and for them to receive letters from their father because they miss him very much."

Now that elements of the Combat Support Battalion have moved out for some heavy training, let's not forget the many wives and children here who provide the moral support and love for those same troops. Theirs is not any easy job.

Soldiers load up for live fire

by John Cosgrove

Well, it's that time again when soldiers move out to West Germany to take part in annual field training.

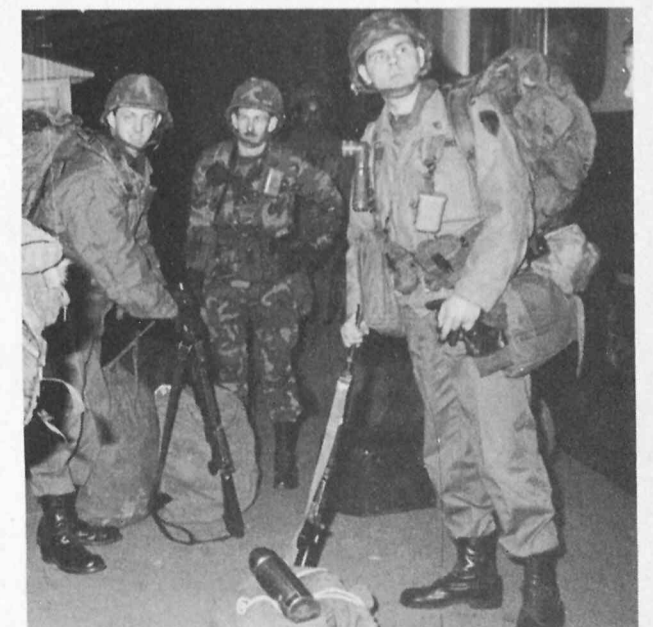

While elements of Combat Support Battalion were scheduled to travel, some soldiers of 4th Battalion took the opportunity to follow them out to do a little training of their own.

Companies of the 4th Battalion will be sending some of their assigned personnel to Grafenwoehr to take part in their annual weapons firing, firing the weapons which can not be fired in the city.

These weapons include the TOW, 90 mm, Dragon, and Mortar.

"I am really looking forward to the trip," said PFC David W. Drexler, Company C. "These trips are the only opportunities we get to fire, and it really is the best training we get."

"The 4th Battalion soldiers will be attached to Combat Support Battalion for administrative and logistical support," said CSM James E. Clarke, battalion sergeant major. "My soldiers will have chances to live fire on crew served weapons. It's really super training for them."

Soldiers tried

Pvt.2 Ronald P. Moon, Company C, 2nd Battalion was convicted by a Special Court-Martial on Feb. 22 of assault with means likely to produce a grievous bodily harm. Moon was sentenced to reduction to the grade of Pvt.1, forfeiture of $367 pay per month for five months and confinement at hard labor for five months.

Sp4 Fred B. Richard, Company F, 40th Armor, was convicted by a Special Court-Martial on Feb. 22 of being incapacitated for duty and wrongful appropriation of a government vehicle. He was sentenced to reduction to the grade of Pvt.1, forfeiture of $367 pay per month for three month and confinement at hard labor for three months.

Students' talents tickle tooth fairy

by Sue Sweeney

Students of the Thomas A. Roberts Elementary School recently took part in a dental health poster contest.

The contest was held during Dental Health Month, after the students had several classes on good dental health and how to properly care for their teeth.

"It's evident that the children have learned their lessons well," said Col. Herbert S. Kenigsberg, Berlin Dental Activity commander, after viewing the posters. "They have grasped the importance of preventive dentistry and preserving their oral health."

This year 627 students from kindergarten through 6th grade submitted posters to the contest.

Judges were Norma Kenigsberg, wife of the DENTAC commander; Susan Chapman, President of the Health Services Club, and Betsy Brumley, the Community Oral Health manager. Carole Suddath, wife of Brig. Gen. Leroy Suddath, Jr., community commander, presented the awards.

This year's winners were:

- Kindergarten
- 1st Jenny Parker
- 2nd Michelle Fisher
- First grade
- 1st Jason Peck
- 2nd Nicholas Fisher
- Second grade
- 1st Leann Burch
- 2nd Jacob Rouse
- Third grade
- 1st Nichole Turner
- 2nd Aaron McMannamy
- Fourth grade
- 1st Tina Palladino
- 2nd Casey Solh
- Fifth grade
- 1st Terrence London
- 2nd Hyoung Shin
- Sixth grade
- 1st David Nelson
- 2nd David Brumley
- Grand Prizes
- Kindergarten through Third grade — Kaitly Tammen (Third grade)
- Fourth grade through Sixth grade — Ryan Park (Fourth grade)

The winning posters will be displayed at the DENTAC Headquarters at the U.S. Army Hospital for the next several weeks.

BAHS students attend Presidential Classroom

by Suzanne Wood

Recently, four Berlin American High School students had a chance to view closeup the American system of government and to meet and speak with those people who keep it running.

Jennie Felker, Tom Hesse, Grace Soltys, and Suzanne Wood each attended a session of "A Presidential Classroom for Young Americans," and will be included in the more than three thousand students which graduate from the program each year.

Presidential Classroom is a week long Washington D.C. experience, in which high school juniors and seniors from all over the United States (and American citizens from all over the world) meet to see our nation's capitol, and to listen to and question some of American's leaders.

The intensive curriculum includes 15 formal seminars focusing on the three branches of the federal government, the major independent agencies, the media, the diplomatic community, labor, and the private sector. Several of the seminars included on-site briefings.

Berlin students had a chance to hear speakers like John Anderson, John Glenn, and Sandra O'Connor. They visited places like the Capitol, the State Department, the White House. They were also taken to several places of cultural interest including the Smithsonian, and to an evening at the theater.

The week's activities ended with a graduation banquet and dance, after which, diplomas were awarded to the graduates of the program.

All of the Berlin students felt they gained a lot from their trip. Felker said, "It was really great meeting so many new people. My Presidential Classroom experience helped me to understand what has to be considered in governing people."

Hesse said, "It was a fantastic experience that gave me more insight into how things really work in Washington — as opposed to what you read in textbooks."

Soltys remarked, "D.C. is a great place to get lost in, but the best part was meeting new people."

Happy Birthday

Girl Scouts in Berlin have been gearing up for the 70th birthday of the Girl Scouts today with many exciting activities. These activities included helping the honor guard during retreat ceremonies. Girl Scouts are concerned with conserving the best that America has to offer, both the traditions and the resources. (Photo by Sue Sweeney)

NCO wives club — a host of involvement

by Sue Sweeney

Do you want to help a welfare fund for charity and have some super fun at the same time?

If so, you should consider becoming member of the Checkpoint NCO Wives Club. To be eligible you must be a spouse of an E-5 through E-9, a female NCO or be allowed Checkpoint privileges. No, you don't have to be a wife.

Your main responsibility will be helping charitable organizations through planning and participating in events. Some of the programs include dances, such as the recent Sweetheart dance, or the popular Sock Hop, working at a booth at the TCA Open House or performing in such productions as Basic Black Dress, which portrayed facets of life for women connected to the military.

According to Rina Dean, activities chairwoman, the club is an evening club. She says that this is good because it gives woman a slight break from some tedious household chores, or an hour away from the children. She also feels that this makes it easier for the working women to attend the club.

The club meets on the first and third Monday evening of each month at 7:30 p.m. at the Checkpoint Club. They try to wrap up the meeting by 9 p.m. so that everyone can return home at a normal hour, according to Dean.

Dean added that the club is a super way to make friends and that was how she met many of her friends here.

If you're interested in joining the club or would like more information you can call Rina Dean at 813-8977 or pick up a copy of their newsletter either in the Checkpoint Club, or at the ACS Information Center at Truman Plaza.

something special

Don't forget, Sammy Davis Jr. is presenting his Show '82 at the ICC, Saal 1 on Monday. Curtain time is 8 p.m. There are still tickets available, ranging from DM 18 to DM 53. You can get to the ICC by U-Bahn to Kaiserdamm or Theodor-Heuss-Platz, or by buses 4, 10, 69, 92 or 94.

Four Venetian horses are the gleaming attraction at a very special exhibition presently being shown at the Martin-Gropius-Bau, located on 110 Stresemannstrasse. The San Marco horses are four horse sculptures, which normally adorn the Basilica of San Marco in Venice. "Die Pferde von San Marco" form now the centerpiece of this exhibition, which was organized by Olivetti. The origins of these horses are still unclear. Doge Dandolo brought them to Italy in 1204 as a war loot from Constantinople in connection with the Fourth Crusade. In 1797 Napoleon took those horses to Paris from where they were brought back to Venice in 1815. Before this exhibition came to Berlin it had been drawing the attention of more than three million visitors in Mexico-City, New York, London, Paris and Milano. This exhibition also shows renaissance pieces and works from the 17th and 18th centuries. The horses from San Marco can be seen daily until April 25 from 10 a.m. to 6 p.m. Admission is DM 6 and buses 24, 29 and 75, or U-Bahn to Möckernbrücke, or Kochstrasse will take you to the Martin-Gropius-Bau.

April 14 marks a Country-Fest at the Deutschlandhalle. Country music fans will be able to spend seven hours with superstars, beginning at 7 p.m. that day. Nashville giants, like Kris Kristofferson, Jerry Lee Lewis and Roy Orbison will be performing at the Country-Fest, together with Don Williams, Marty Robbins, Billy Swan and Lonnie Donegan. ITT and Truman Plaza ticket agencies sell tickets by voucher, ranging between DM 30 and DM 70.

Top rollers go to USAREUR

by R. Gibson

Four men and four women have been selected to represent Berlin in the 1982 USAREUR bowling championship. The Berlin Representatives were chosen following the U.S. Army Berlin Bowling rolloff held at the Sports Center Lanes Feb. 23-25.

Those bowlers competing in the USAREUR championship are: Richard Pruitt, Headquarters and Headquarters Company, 4th Battalion; Robert Lee, U.S. Army Communications Command; Art Rood, Combat Support Company, 4th Battalion; and Howard Makynen, 766th Military Intelligence Detachment. For the women, Berlin's best are: Kathryn Markland, Company A, Field Station Berlin; Shirley DeLuna, Headquarters and Headquarters Company, Berlin Brigade; Sharon Pringle, MED-DAC; and, Christine Keller, Company A, Field Station Berlin.

The USAREUR Championships are scheduled to take place April 27-29 in Stuttgart.

Comedian Bill Cosby entertains and educates in the highly popular "Fat Albert" character every Thursday afternoon. Bill and the entire gang explain "lies" and how much they can harm individuals. Bill will be with you and the family every Thursday at 4:10 p.m.

AFN Berlin TV also introduces a top quality movie in prime time every Wednesday night right after "Mork & Mindy" and "B.J. and The Bear."

Look for "Cutting Loose" the first week followed by "The Comeback Kid" and "The Ghost and Mrs. Muir" in the weeks to come.

America's most watched TV program, "Dallas," returns on Friday nights starting March 26.

Other highly rated new shows returning to AFN are: "CHIPS," "Love Boat," "Three's Company," "Jeffersons" and "Facts of Life."

And remember, if AFN Radio or Television can be of service to you or your organization, simply write us and explain how we can be of assistance. If you have questions or comment relative to AFN then dial 819-6145, AFN's Action Line.

'Berlin Midday' debuts

by Monte Jones

If you watch AFN-TV's noontime news beginning Monday, you'll find ten more minutes of news, sports and weather. And, the show becomes a half-hour production with the emphasis on local information.

On that day in mid-March, the "Midday News" becomes "Berlin, Midday" and will present the present ten-minute capsule of news, sports and weather with a big plus. The addition is a bonus of twenty minutes of local information on subjects touching the American Community in West Berlin.

Plans are for the appearance of a guest each day and another segment dealing with such subjects as arts and crafts, cooking, hobbies, book reviews and the like. The show will also include locally produced news and feature stories, as well as material from ABC-UPITN and the News Information Weekly Service (NIWS).

The first "Berlin Midday" will start with a five-part series on "What Every Woman Should Know About Men." One part of the series will be presented each day Monday through Friday. In that series, Dr.

Joyce Brothers examines how men are different from women at work, in love, in marriage and as parents.

The live show will utilize a magazine format. In addition to being satisfying to American TV viewers, the magazine concept allows much more to happen within the show. This makes the presentation more flexible, and allows AFN to decide how long an event within the program will continue.

While the first program will begin on Monday with an established format, there will be fine tuning as the program goes on the air each day to tighten it up and make it more interesting and more palatable as well as more informative.

"Berlin, Midday" represents a mixture of what network television in the U.S. is doing early mornings and what major market stations are doing at noon. AFN has taken the best ingredients of both concepts and whipped them up into what we feel will be one of the best local efforts this station has ever made in its attempt to reach out and shake hands with the community.

'Nightwatch' changes nightly news format

by Monte Jones

"Nightwatch" is a word being used around the AFN-Berlin studios these days. And, there's a good reason. It's the new name for the 10 p.m. TV news show which begins Monday. The local show originating live from Berlin weeknights is a creative effort of Dave Hampton, anchor and producer of the 6 and 10 p.m. shows.

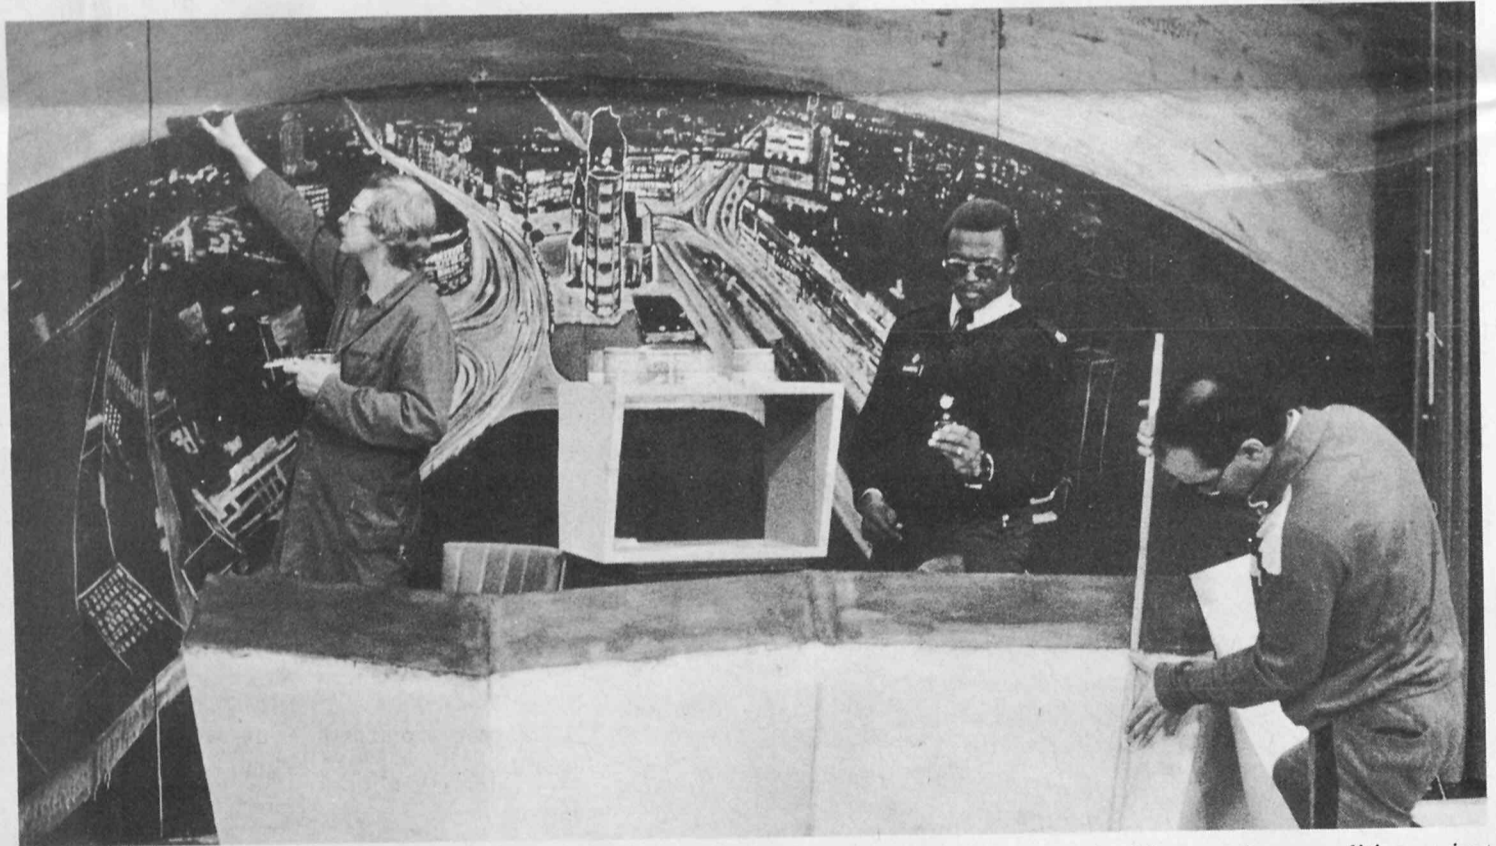

"Nightwatch" will reflect what most major market TV stations in the United States are doing with their late night newscast.

The late night news show will take on a more definite local look with a special segment of news covering Berlin and, if of interest to our audience, stories from West Germany. There'll be a special "Nightwatch Focus" each night dealing with a particular subject. The subject may be different each night or it may span several nights.

Of course, the show will continue covering international news stories, sports and weather. It will remain a half-hour production.

AFN has confirmed suspicions regarding the availability of people to add more substance to the late night program and see studio guests as part of the new look. There are many journalists who are based in Berlin and there are others who anchor themselves here temporarily. They appear to be willing to join AFN now and then.

Of course, there is an unlimited supply of guests who are experts in their own fields of economics, medicine and business, for instance, who can help all of us better understand a particular subject at hand.

Another aim is to bring in studio guests from the sports arena. It may be the captain of a high school, junior high or DYA team or a famous sports figure who is in Berlin for a couple of days.

AFN-Berlin is a local broadcast operation serving the community in West Berlin. It is not saddled with the on AFN's "Nightwatch" news set slated to debut on Monday. The "Nightwatch" program will focus on many problems that AFN headquarters is forced to deal with in serving all of West Germany from Frankfurt. AFN-Berlin is trying more and more to capitalize on the fact that it is local and to better serve our community.

The changes in the TV news programming are not merely cosmetic. AFN is adding substance while making the look of the newscast a bit fresher.

local subjects and personalities, as just one of AFN's services to the community. (Photo courtesy of AFN)

And, the improvements aren't limited to the late night news program. The news team is making major changes in the midday news program, and there are plans to provide a better service with the 6 p.m. program.

In the television business, nothing stands still. With that we are moving forward with a concentrated effort to keep the Berlin community better informed.
