

BOG bridges gap between you, field soldier

by Sue Sweeney

It's faster than air mail and cheaper than a phone call. It's a BOG, a Berlin-O-Gram.

A BOG is a message that family members can send to their spouses while they are in West Germany for training exercises. These messages are sent by the U.S. Army, Berlin, Radio Room.

The BOG can contain up to 25 words and be about any subject.

"Some of the BOG's we send, convey news about newborns, finances or even phone bills," said Sgt. Rose

Roger, team chief, "and, some of them are just love letters."

According to Sgt. David Flagler, assistant team chief, "A BOG is an unclassified message that's transmitted to troops in an major training area (MTA) for personal morale. It's like getting a telegram from home."

When the Radio Room receives a completed BOG form from a company, they type it out on a teletype machine. Then they check it for spelling errors and feed it into another machine. It takes about five minutes for the message to reach West Germany.

"After it's received in the soldier's battalion, the BOG is out of our hands," said Roger. "It's up to them to find the soldier and give him the message. This may take several hours, depending on where the soldier is when the message is received."

"It's really super," added Roger, "It's quicker than a letter and most of the family members that I've talked to say that it seems to cover the gap between Berlin and the soldier."

Roger is quick to point out that it's not only family members who can send messages. Anyone who holds a valid ID card or passport can.

Flagler says that it's really easy to send a BOG. Family members can go to the unit's Personnel Actions Center (PAC) and tell the clerk that they wish to send a BOG. The PAC will have the necessary form.

After PAC personnel receive the completed form, they'll forward it to the Radio Room where it's on its way to the soldier as soon as it's received.

Why not bridge the distance between Berlin and West Germany? Send a BOG to a soldier today!

Soldier's idea brings in bucks

by R. Gibson

Sp4 Scott D. LeValley, USBER Security, last week, pocketed $1,100 which he received from an idea through the Army's Suggestion Awards program.

Last year, LeValley was stationed at the Oakland Army Base where he was the acting operations officer for the cargo operations center. He noticed that the cost of using commercial carriers to transport and store out-going household goods and privately owned vehicles (POV's) was astronomical. So, he sat down at a typewriter with an idea to do something to save Uncle Sam some money.

LeValley suggested the government use military transport vehicles to carry household goods and POV shipments directly to the pier, thereby eliminating the cost of civilian transport and storage services. His idea saves the government $120,000 a year.

"The first thing I think I'll do with the money is take my section out for supper. I also plan to take some leave and go home for a while, but basically just have a good time. I mean what would you do with $1,100 free bucks?"

LeValley said he hasn't found anything here in Berlin that he feels he could improve on, but he's always looking. He says his supervisor, SSgt. Lee S. Mahlstede "keeps things pretty ship-shape."

So, how does LeValley feel about the suggestion program? Simply, "Hey man, it works!"

Defenders test MOUT skill

by Sue Sweeney

Soldiers from Company C kicked off a week of MOUT ARTEP for 3rd Battalion Tuesday with an attack on Doughboy City.

Other soldiers of 3rd Battalion also attacked and then defended the city on Wednesday and Thursday, with the final company completing their MOUT ARTEP early this morning.

The 3rd Battalion soldiers used the MILES system for the ARTEP. PFC Mark Drakeley said "The MILES system is as realistic as any training we receive in the Army."

Before their attack the soldiers were gearing up. They checked out their equipment to make sure it was in proper working order, laughed at each other's camouflaging attempts, and quizzed each other on plans of attack and operation orders.

One 3rd Battalion soldier said, "We're ready to go into Doughboy City and show everyone what we know and how good we are."

Sp4 Michael Butler agreed saying, "We're the best! We're going to go in

Red Cross: Together we can change things

The Red Cross provides help to the destitute, the suffering and the distressed and, in so doing, nourishes those basic attitudes and values essential to mankind's survival.

For 101 years the American Red Cross has provided a humanitarian banner under which men and women of goodwill unite. By joining and serving, each American can become a "Good Neighbor."

As our nation looks increasingly to the dynamic forces of the private sector to address the problems of our communities, the Red Cross' role of channeling and coordinating volunteer efforts into productive activities will grow.

Recognizing its expanding responsibilities, the Red Cross has recently undertaken an ambitious, ten-year program to help improve the health of every American. This program is based on the simple concept that individuals play the principal role in reducing major health risks to themselves.

Through membership in the Red Cross, we can reach out to the world, to our country, and to our community — not only to help those in adversity but also to arm ourselves and others with information to deal effectively in matters of health and safety.

Moreover, we can help the Red Cross fulfill its traditional responsibility of providing essential communication, welfare, and educational services to members of our Armed Forces in time of peace or war.

Although chartered by Congress to perform specific duties, the Red Cross relies upon the time and funds of each of us to carry out its work. I urge the American people to assist our Red Cross by giving financial aid and volunteering their time so that, as the 1982 Red Cross theme says, "Together we can change things."

Reader upset with Observer article

Dear Editor,

The Berlin Observer in the March 5 issue, showed a bigger than average picture of the so-called new Berlin Orientation Tour, now sponsored and paid for by the German Berlin Information Center.

Whoever wrote the caption underneath the picture was either poorly informed by those who should know better, or didn't do the proper research. What got me was the line "... of showing newly arrived soldiers the city from a Berliner's point of view."

Well now, what did we five instructors (we are Berliners of both German and American citizenships) in about ten years of Headstart Program of which six years included a West Berlin Tour, do when not giving them a high-caliber tour, good enough that many of the Berliner university students functioning as tour guides and politically leaning to the extreme left, could still learn from us? Did your writer imply that our tours were given from a Chinese point of view?

At least the caption gave credit to the fact that tours like ours existed. The only thing that improved are the buses.

This so-called new tour barely gives the soldiers the chance to go to the bathroom except for once, and that in eight hours. And one can debate whether, or not, they see as much as when we conducted the tours.

Concerning this West Berlin Tour that was taken away from us, there isn't anything in this "new" tour that we didn't convey, inform, instruct, teach the newly arrived soldiers already in an objective, unemotional, always up-to-date way and, oh yes, with a Berliner's point of view.

In addition, the five Headstart instructors at McNair have definitely always been functioning as goodwill ambassadors, not only between the two nations, but in so many instances, going out of our way to help the individual soldier.

We are not envious, on the contrary, but we like the facts to be truthful. By the same token, we are glad to see, especially for the younger, less well-to-do troops, that they are being given a paid-for schnitzel dinner. There we couldn't have done better.

Let's hope that the "continuing friendship between Berlin and the American forces stationed here" is worth more than a "schnitzel."

Edie Baumbach
School of Standards

Berlin Observer responds:

The photo and caption were printed on the front page of the Berlin Observer to inform the American community about a generous gesture of friendship by Berlin city officials. The size of the photo was determined by the amount of space to be filled on the page.

We did not intend to imply that the West Berlin tours formerly given by Headstart instructors were not good; in fact, they were excellent. Nor did we mean to suggest that their tour was not given "from a Berliner's point of view." We were simply trying to make a point that Berlin city officials, through their own initiative, had made a significant contribution to enhancing German-American understanding in Berlin.

The weekly West Berlin tour for the School of Standards (SOS) is given by the Berlin Information Center at no cost to the Army. It is very comprehensive. According to Lt. Col. Bruce Moore, G-3, it is constantly being reviewed by SOS cadre to ensure it meets the needs of the students.

We appreciate the capable efforts of the Headstart instructors, and nothing can detract from the six years of fine work that was done. But, we also applaud and support the new tour for SOS sponsored by Berlin city officials as a very meaningful welcome to U.S. service members in Berlin.

Child, spouse abuse is community concern

Violence within the family unit seriously affects the Berlin Military Community as a whole. For this reason, I view any incident of child or spouse abuse as unacceptable behavior and a matter of command concern.

Therefore, I want to impress upon you the following:

- Proven child and spouse abusers can expect stern action within this command.
- Professional assistance with complete confidentiality is available in the Berlin Military Community for persons who need help in working out marital or child rearing problems.

Most children are powerless to seek help themselves when they are victims of abuse. Likewise many abused spouses are fearful to report incidences of violence. I elicit your support in identifying to the helping agencies those situations where assistance is needed.

Red Cross provides 'helping hands'

by Sue Sweeney

This month has been designated as Red Cross Month by President Ronald Reagan, The theme for the month is "Together We Can Change Things."

And that's exactly what the American Red Cross volunteers and permanent staff are trying to do in Berlin.

The Red Cross' job is to provide the Berlin military community with a social welfare program. According to Paul White, ARC station director, this program includes personal, family, and financial counseling, emergency communications, verifications for emergency leave and emergency financial assistance.

There are approximately 200 Red Cross volunteers in Berlin, and a small permanent staff. They serve the community in many ways. Some of these include staffing school health rooms, giving first aid and cardio pulmonary resuscitation courses, water safety, nursing and youth services.

"Being a Red Cross volunteer is very satisfying," said Kathy Leopold, a hospital volunteer. "The patients sometimes feel more at ease when I'm present with a doctor. I enjoy working with people, plus I can pick my own hours, so there's no strain from it." Leopold was chosen at the Red Cross Volunteer of the month this month.

"I receive invaluable experience from teaching children and their parents how to swim," said Karyn Gass, water safety coordinator.

"When parents find out that all of our courses are free of charge, they're surprised. But a Red Cross volunteer gave me 127 hours worth of classes, and now I'm helping the community by returning the time and effort that was put into my training."

The volunteers agreed that the time that they donated to the community was worthwhile, not only to the community but to themselves as well.

Cara Lamont, hospital chairperson of volunteers, said that she started volunteer work years ago. She added that she had wanted to do something for the community and the Red Cross was a handy tool to do that. She volunteers eight to ten hours a week.

"It's like your family away from home," said Sally Davis, chairperson of the American Red Cross volunteers. The other volunteers agreed. One added, "We get smiles from people just because we wear this uniform."

White pointed out that the Red Cross receives no government funding since it is not a government agency. Rather it is completely dependent on donations for its support. In the military, the Combined Federal Campaign provides soldiers an opportunity to support the Red Cross.

If you're interested in volunteering a few hours of your weekly free time to the Red Cross, there will be a Volunteer Orientation on March 31. Anyone can call 819-6437/6459 for more information.

Dedication recital held Sunday

Pipe organ fills chapel with new sounds

The American Community Chapel was filled with the music of the community's new pipe organ in a dedication organ recital Sunday.

The recital, played by U.S. Military Academy Cadet Chapel organist-choirmaster, Dr. John A. Davis, showed the almost 300 people who attended the results of a two year effort to get the new organ.

"This is a longed for addition to the chapel and the worship experience," said Staff Chaplain (Col.) Earl Andrews. "The organ has been in the building stages for two years."

The design for the organ was selected in the spring of 1980. The shape of the chapel ceiling was considered, and the organ built to fit. Karl Loetzerich began building the organ in July 1980 at his workshop in Wolfhagen-Ippinghausen.

The organ has twenty-two stops and 1,398 pipes. Of these pipes most are made of a tin alloy, but some are wood and others brass. The biggest pipe is 2.6 meters high, and the smallest is not quite one centimeter in length. No two pipes are identical.

Loetzerich flew into Berlin on Saturday to make last minute adjustments to the organ. He said it was his hope that the organ would be used for the glory of God.

Known as the "queen of musical instruments," this organ is built to last for generations and even centuries. It will certainly be filling the American Community Chapel with music for many years to come.

During the dedication, Chaplain (Col.) Conrad Loftus prayed that the organ "sing forever the praises of faith and hope and love and pardon and peace for all to hear."

Engineers have big gun, will travel

by John J. Spinelli

Contrary to popular belief, the Berlin Brigade's largest round is not found in the Artillery.

Although C Battery, 94th Field Artillery uses an impressive 155mm round, the Combat Engineer Vehicle (CEV) of the 42nd Engineer Company easily packs the biggest round in town — a 165mm main gun demolition round.

"We're not the most visible section in the Brigade," said SSgt. Gary Rivers, "But I believe we've got tremendous firepower for our size." What Rivers is obviously referring to is the CEV's main gun round, a 60 lb. high explosive plastic (HEP) round.

"We can easily shoot in-city targets with accuracy," noted SSgt. Chester Steward, a CEV gunner. "Our safety radius for firing is equal to the CEV's effective range of nearly 1,000 meters."

The main mission of the CEV is to support the brigade with obstacle construction or removal. The main gun is primarily used for this task, although each CEV has a hydraulically operated dozer blade and boom for use as well.

During its annual training at Grafenwoehr, the 42nd Engineer Company will give its CEV section the opportunity to train realistically and witness the true effects of the main gun.

The unit's combat engineers will construct several massive reinforced concrete structures downrange. After about a week "cure-time" for the concrete, the CEVs will fire main gun rounds to destroy the targets.

All the way mechanic

Soldier says maintenance is team effort

by John Cosgrove

Berlin Brigade's top mechanic last quarter, Sp4 Everett Hughes, Headquarters and Headquarters Company, 4th Battalion, prides himself on his "all the way" attitude.

Selected as Mechanic of the Quarter, Hughes credits his success on the support of his section and general job skills.

"I received a lot of support from the Battalion Motor Sergeant, SSgt. Ronald Flowers," said

Hughes. "I enjoy my work and I'm proud to be a member of the 4th Battalion Maintenance Section."

Hughes was not always a mechanic. He began as an infantryman and became a mechanic after on-the-job training. He has worked at Fort Riley, Kansas, as a track-vehicle mechanic. Since October 1979 he has been assigned to 4th Battalion as a wheeled-vehicle mechanic.

Hughes is responsible for much of the initial training for new mechanics in the company. He has also performed as the maintenance section's primary welder, one of three Quality and Assurance (QA) Inspectors, and wrecker operator.

His superior knowledge in his field of mechanics has earned Hughes the respect of his co-workers.

According to Hughes, a good maintenance program requires the efforts of a lot of people — drivers, mechanics and supervisors. "Nobody can do it by themselves," he said. "If a driver doesn't do his job, we can't do ours."

Hughes, looking to the future, hopes to eventually use his experience in a field maintenance shop.

Troops learn by example

by Roger DeBenedetto

Currently, soldiers that have shown potential to be Noncommissioned Officers are undergoing leadership training in the 2nd Battalion.

These PFC's and Sp4's are being given special training in the areas of maintenance of vehicles and weapons that are organic to a line company. They are also enrolled in a writing course where they will learn how to do Senior Enlisted Evaluation Reports, counseling statements, and other aspects of leadership training.

The classes are all taught by 2nd Battalion senior NCO's with a theme "Leadership by Example." This course is in preparation for the Primary Leadership Development Course held in West Germany, which is a prerequisite for E4's to be promoted to E5's in 2nd Battalion.

"This course was designed to strengthen the basic knowledge of the fire-team leader and squad leader," said CSM Gregory McGuire. "It will enhance their writing ability and teach them the Army's new Battalion Management Training System."

The NCOIC of the Basic Leadership Course, SFC Robert McIntosh said, "The soldiers here in the school have shown me that they are willing to learn and I believe that they will turn out to be superb NCO's." SP4 Keith Imhoff of Combat Support Company, a student in the school, commented, "Overall the course is pretty good, It has a few drawbacks but I've learned a great deal."

I THINK I SEE THE PROBLEM — Sp4 Everett Hughes, Headquarters and Headquarters Company, 4th Battalion, keeps the vehicles of the batalion running with the dedication that won him the Mechanic of the Quarter award. (Photo by John Cosgrove)

Bears win European cage title

ON THE DEFENSE — The Berlin American High School girls team didn't fair as well in the tournament as they had hoped, losing to both Wuerzburg and Osterholz by identical scores of 37-27.

LOOSE BALL—Ron Watt (44) goes up for rebound against Wuerzburg's J. McKiven in the first game of the basketball championships. Berlin won 74-70.

The Berlin American High School boys basketball team ended their season in style Saturday. They won the European AA/A championship with a 60-56 victory over the Zweibrucken Trojans in the final game of the three-day tournament hosted by Berlin.

The Berlin Girls team however, was not as fortunate. They lost their first game against Wuerzburg, 37-27, early in the tourney and then fell to Osterholz, also by a score of 37-27. In the Wuerzburg game, Tracey Turner was Berlin's high scorer with 14 points, while Trisha Lindsey led the Bear scorers with 12 points in their second contest.

In the boys first game (March 11) it looked like it may be their last, as they fell behind the opposing team from Wuerzburg by 17 points at halftime.

But when the Bears took the court after the half, there was little doubt who was going to win it. With the outside shooting of Don Dehaney and Russell Walton, Jr., the Bears rallied for 29 points in the third quarter.

In the final period, a Wuerzburg comeback attempt failed as Berlin senior guard Kevin Buckles found the mark and hit for nine points. Berlin won 74-70. The top scorer for the Bears was Dehaney with 27 while Buckles ended with 17.

In Berlin's second game against the tournament's top seed, Patch from Stuttgart, Berlin was faced with a height problem. The Patch Panthers had Rodney Berry, the 6-foot-8-inch, Southern AA All-Conference center, matched against Berlin's Ron Watt at 6-foot-4-inches.

Watt however, didn't let the height difference stand in his way. Using his terrific floor speed to get around Berry, Watt chalked up 19 points and put Berry on the bench with fouls.

With Berry out of action, Berlin had the opportunity for a second and third shot at the bucket and pulled out a 59-53 victory. Also scoring high for the Bears was Dehaney with 14 points and Starr Wright with nine.

Saturday afternoon the Sports Center gym filled with Bear fans, all anxious to see the championship match-up between the hometown Bears and the Zweibrucken Trojans.

The Trojans had their star forward, Greg Harris and All-Europe Rod Parker. After the game, the combined point total of these two players would make up all but 12 of Zweibrucken's 56 points.

But 56 just wasn't enough to match the Bears fast court action and accurate shooting as BAHS scored 60 points enroute to the European Championship. Top scorers for Berlin were Watt with 17, and Buckles who brought in 15 points.

After it was all over, Lindsey and Turner of the Berlin girl's team were awarded all-conference awards.

For the Berlin Boys, Watt took all-conference and all-tournament awards, while Buckles earned an all-tournament award.

THE SPIRIT OF VICTORY — Berlin American High School basketball fans got to see the thing they enjoy most as the Bears went all the way last Saturday to take top honors in the AA/A Championship tournament. The Bears won the tournament by beating Zweibrucken 60-56 at the Berlin Brigade Sport Center Gym.

there and 'kill'. They've got to wear MILES equipment, too."

"We're psyched up to the max," said PFC Roger Green, as he lay in the bushes waiting for the attack signal.

Meanwhile back at Doughboy City, Company A, 4th Battalion, the aggressors for the entire 3rd Battalion ARTEP, was preparing defenses. One soldier confidently said "It should take them at least two hours to get through the city."

Then the attack began. After some fierce fighting building to building, 3rd Battalion soldiers successfully pushed back the aggressors.

While 3rd Battalion was setting up hasty defenses and early detection positions for the expected counterattack, 4th Battalion was regrouping and reissuing operation orders.

According to SFC Jesse Harris, a G-3 evaluator, 3rd Battalion looked good and both team and individual efforts were coordinated. Another evaluator, SFC Leroy Lopez added that once they started the attack, 3rd Battalion soldiers interacted well together and communicated with each other effectively.

A 3rd Battalion platoon sergeant, SFC Elmer Foreman, said that this was the best training they had done in a long time. He also said that it's easier for him to assess casualties because of the MILES system.

READY AND WAITING — 3rd Battalion soldiers lay ready and waiting for the operations order to attack and take Doughboy City. The soldiers from 3rd Battalion first took the city and then had to defend it from a counterattack by the aggressor's force.

WHERE ARE THEY? — An aggressor's tank from Company F, 40th Armor rumbles through Doughboy City searching for 3rd Battalion soldiers during the MOUT ARTEP training this past week. The 40th Armor supplied tanks for the 4th Battalion aggressors and the 3rd Battalion defenders while 42nd Engineers supplied engineer support for both teams.
