My best experience with Americans in Berlin

by Dr. Heinz Doering
Sentastrasse, Berlin-Friedenau

Twenty years ago, Sergeant Spivey was a guest in our house for Christmas. Today, I call him brother and his wife sister.

Our friendship began with six red wine glasses in the winter of 1962. Berlin's Wall of Shame was sixteen months old. Like my wife and I, many Berliners had invited American soldiers for Christmas. Sergeant Paul Spivey had called us and thanked us for the invitation. He was happy to come to us Christmas Eve.

When he came, we had bought him a wonderful smoker's set as a Christmas present and he came with six fine red wine glasses which we still have.

We agreed to meet again. And we met again, first in Berlin, then in Fort Benning, Georgia, where he was transferred. We got to know his wife, his children, his friends.

Sergeant Spivey returned to Bad Hersfeld, Germany. That was not too far from Berlin and so we met again. Then he was in Vietnam and from there he returned to the States.

In Florida in 1970, we enjoyed six wonderful weeks with our American brother, as we started to call him in the meantime, and our sister, his wife. We even took along our three-month-old son. Sergeant Spivey became his godfather.

During Christmas, 1982 we celebrated the 20th anniversary of our friendship. Our relation with an "American in Berlin" has already lasted for two decades.

(Editor's note: The above article, furnished courtesy of the West Berlin newspaper B.Z., is just one the Berlin Observer will publish during the next several weeks. All entries were in response to the B.Z.'s contest "My Best Experience with the Americans in Berlin").

Memorial Day reminds us of respect and honor

Memorial Day began as an occasion for honoring the Civil War dead of both North and South, but as time passed and our nation fought other wars, Memorial Day became the occasion for commemorating the lives lost in all our military conflicts.

Today, in cemeteries throughout the United States and overseas, American service members lie in the comradeship of a common cause — freedom.

We respect and honor our war dead, not only for their patriotism, but because of the cause they defended with their lives. We remember them, not only for their deeds of the past, but because of their relevance to the present and future.

It is the example of the men and women we honor that gives fiber to our national purpose. We deem it our reward that we shall one day be counted worthy of turning over the torch of freedom to the next generation.

Although the service members rest in peaceful silence, they are not mute. They speak in words from a Billy Rose poem. "I am the unknown soldier and maybe I died in vain, but if I were alive and my country called, I'd do it all over again." ## Travel guides Free copies of the 1982 edition for the U.S. Forces European Travel and Vacation Guide are now available at outdoor recreation checkout centers, recreation centers, ITT offices, and libraries.

The guide was published by the Outdoor Recreation Office of the 1st Personnel Command in cooperation with ADAC (Allgemeiner Deutscher Automobil Club).

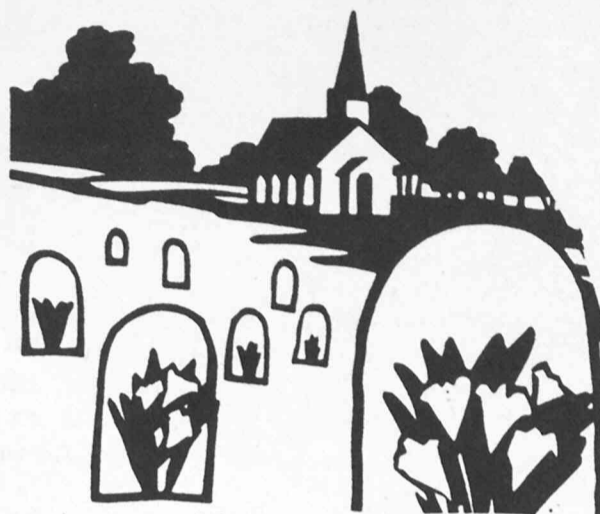

Designed for U.S. Forces members who wish to travel inexpensively in Europe, the 100-page guide features a wealth of helpful travel information — including: information on U.S. Forces installations throughout Europe; a listing of U.S. Forces travel camps, commercial campgrounds offering discounts to military personnel; European border crossing requirements; military gas coupon information; ferry crossing information to Great Britain from the continent; tips on driving with a trailer in the Alps; summer skiing resorts in Europe; data on toll fees; telephone numbers to obtain road assistance; AFN radio frequencies; AFRC facilities; etc.

A feature of the guide is a 35-page section devoted to West German Armed Forces vacation centers located in choice resort areas in Spain, Italy, Austria, Switzerland, Holland, France (Corsica), and Germany. U.S. Forces personnel and their family members are invited to check out the network of vacation centers.

Special observance

In a special Memorial Day ceremony, the Association of the Retired Members of the Armed Forces (ARMAF) will be visiting the grave of military retirees buried in Berlin on May 31.

The activities begin at 9 a.m. at the Waldfriedhof cemetery on Hüttenweg across from the Berlin Brigade main chapel.

A bugler from the Berlin Brigade will play taps at each grave site, and a local Boy Scout troop will place a wreath of flowers on the first grave. The public is invited to attend.

Rehab failures

Changes in the Army's enlisted separations regulation, AR 635-200, make it easier for commanders to discharge soldiers who fail to rehabilitate themselves for alcohol and other drug abuse, says Berlin's Alcohol and Drug Control Officer (ADCO).

This Interim Change aligns Chapters 1 and 9 with the revised AR 600-85, Alcohol and Drug Abuse Prevention and Control Program, December 1, 1981, and implements the DOD change (effective immediately) authorizing issuance of a General Discharge as warranted by the individual's military record.

Discharge actions for reasons of alcohol and other drug abuse (Chapter 9) will not be initiated until the member has been enrolled in the Alcohol and Drug Abuse Prevention and Control Program (ADAPCP) for a minimum of 30 days, and the commander in consultation with the rehabilitation team, determines that further rehabilitation efforts are not practical.

The letter of notification for a Chapter 9 discharge will now read, "You will receive an honorable discharge certificate or a general discharge certificate as warranted by your military record," concluded Capt. Walter Sutterlin, ADCO.

Cleanup success

Brig. Gen. Leroy N. Suddath Jr., community commander, congratulates the community on a job well done.

This year's spring cleanup was a great success. Suddath feels that the community looks as good as it ever has.

The pride that soldiers and family members feel as they see the results of their efforts in the housing areas and in the Grunewald should spur them on to maintain these standards throughout the year, stated Suddath.

During his visit to each of the housing areas, Suddath noted which areas looked the best. Those areas and their senior occupants are listed below.

SFC William L. Moore, 19/21/23 Flanagan Strasse (BBde area).

Parachute team drops in

Every year during the Allied Forces Day Parade, the free-fall parachute teams draw a great response from the crowd.

The U.S. 509th Airborne Battalion Parachute Demonstration Team made the trip from Vincenza, Italy this year to perform aerial acrobatics, along with the French and British parachute teams.

According to Air Force Maj. Vic Bonfiglio, team leader for 509th's parachute team, the organization's members are all volunteers who buy their own parachutes, boots and other equipment.

In only their third year of existence, the parachute team known as "Geronimo", trained 2½ days a month for three months in preparation for the Berlin demonstration.

Members of the team participating in this year's Allied Forces Day Parade were Bonfiglio, Capt. Guy Menton, MSgt. Bob Felker, SFC Kim Newberry (jump master), Sp5 James Myers, Sp4 Darel Davenport, Sp4 Alan Janke and PFC Eric Easter. Bonfiglio and Felker are the only Air Force members on the team.

On tap next for the parachutists, who do demonstrations by invitation only, will be a free-fall exhibition in Heidelberg July 16-18.

Battalion changes hands Draper assumes command

Carolina University, Greenville, N.C. and master of business administration degree from Syracuse University, Syracuse, N.Y.

Years practice pays off for Berlin sixth grade student

by Sue Sweeney

E..X... ORBI, she took a deep breath and said T.A..N.. T. Exorbitant she repeated with a smile. That word made her a winner and she knew it.

Sonya Thomas, a sixth grade student at the Thomas A. Roberts (TAR) Elementary School here, passed a stiff oral test in Aviano, Italy, to become the Parent-Teacher-Student Association regional spelling champion.

It all started last year when Sonya competed in a TAR spelling bee and lost! That loss made her determined to win the spelling bee this year.

Right after dinner, Sonya would get out her spelling books and study the words for three or four hours," said her dad, SFC Eddie Thomas. "I would test her at the end of each month on the words she learned."

Sonya won the PTSA spelling bee at the TAR school this year. She outspelled many 4th, 5th, and 6th grade students. Berlin's PTSA then paid her fare to Aviano, Italy, for the regional spelling bee. Twenty-one students from schools throughout West Germany and Italy were going to be competing against Sonya on April 29 and 30.

"I told her to try her best to win," said her dad. "I took leave to go down there with her to the spelling bee.

A lot of credit goes to her mom, Janice. Mom's advice and support was always there. Sonya told me it was going to be tough because it was an oral test rather than written."

Sonya giggled and said, "I had my dad save me a seat in the audience in case I missed a word. That way I could still watch the other students."

But the tough minded young lady didn't miss a word. The studying paid off as she made it through the first round words, and then the intermediate level words.

BARBECUING—Sonya Thomas and her dad barbecue a celebration dinner after Sonya won the spelling bee in

Finally, her last opponent misspelled the word "conservatory." Sonya spelled that word right and waited for the judges to ask her that final decisive word.

The word was exorbitant and she spelled it right. Sonya was a winner.

Sonya said that winning the spelling bee was a wonderful feeling but that she would always remember Italy for the pizzas and ice cream she ate there.

"I won $100 in the spelling bee," said Sonya, "But I'm saving it until I return to the States at the end of the month. I'm going to buy designer jeans, and fingernail polish, and other worthwhile things."

When Sonya arrived in Berlin her family was extremely proud of her accomplishment. But her dad received a shock. It seemed that all the soldiers in his unit, Combat Support Company, 3rd Battalion, asked how Sonya had done and told him that they had been rooting for her.

Sonya doesn't spend all of her time studying though. Roller skating, bike riding, and dancing are her favorite things to do.

Coaching is name of his game

by David Sullivan

Sp5 Joe DeLaRosa is a SidPer/Personnel Specialist assigned to Company F, 40th Armor, Combat Support Battalion, with duty in the Personnel Action Center at Headquarters and Headquarters Detachment (HHD).

DeLaRosa, 24, is one of the many people in the brigade whose job does not end at the end of the military duty day.

Since April, 1981 he has devoted his off-duty time working with the Dependent Youth Activities (DYA) as a coach. DeLaRosa doesn't coach one sport, he coaches them all! Beginning in the spring of '81 with baseball and moving immediately into football and basketball, not a season goes by that doesn't have Joe DeLaRosa pacing the sidelines.

A native of Laredo, Texas, DeLaRosa played and was interested in all sports as a youngster, and that interest led him into coaching. "My love of sports and enthusiasm for athletics is what attracted me to coaching. It was my hope that some of my enthusiasm would rub off on the kids, and in the end everyone would have a good time," said DeLaRosa.

The coach feels that sports play an important role in a young athlete's mind. "Sports help relax the mind and take them away from their problems. It allows them to meet different people and most importantly, sports is a vehicle for kids to have fun!"

DeLaRosa expanded on the theory of sports helping kids meet different people, "... sometimes the intensity of a game or practice, or just being on a team helps kids get over basic shyness and establishes early in life the ability to communicate without inhibition."

DeLaRosa tags his father as the person who influenced him the most as far as coaching is concerned. "My dad coached athletics and he stressed the fundamentals of sports. He taught aggressiveness and the importance of a clear mind on and off the field. My dad was a firm believer in the athlete staying free of drugs and booze because he saw it end many careers."

Sportsmanship and team play are the most important aspects of athletics in Coach DeLaRosa's mind. He feels even if he has a ballplayer with all the natural ability in the world, but who is not a team ballplayer, then he has failed as a coach.

"I'll try and make that player more of a team oriented player by putting him into a situation where he has to assist others rather than rely strictly on his individual skills," said DeLaRosa.

His theory on discipline is that it is important for a young athlete to learn, especially the aspect of self-discipline, that helps an athlete drive on in the face of diversity and not quit.

He prefers working with athletes in the 6 to 8 year-old range because, he says, "Kids that age aren't yet molded into set patterns of behavior and coaches can aid in the development of children by giving them fundamentals of athletics, team play, and a healthy aggressiveness that can help them all their life."

DeLaRosa's goal is to someday coach on the high school level. He has had success as a coach already. His combined three sport record is 24-10 which isn't too shabby. As if his time wasn't already filled by coaching in the DYA, DeLaRosa also coaches the HHD unit softball team.

Brigade grapplers bring home crowns

by R. Gibson

A team of four Berlin Brigade wrestlers have been earning names for themselves in various military competitions around the world.

Al Hrnrcir, Headquarters and Headquarters Company (HHC), Berlin Brigade; Geno Clemons, HHC, Berlin Brigade; Ed Minor, 287th Military Police Company; and Scott Sumpter, Battery C, 94th Field Artillery, Combat Support Battalion, were all selected for the All-Army team that met teams from the Air Force, Navy, and Marine Corps in the inter-service meet held at Quantico, Va., March 22 through 26.

Being selected for the All-Army team is quiet a boost for any wrestler, but in the field of military inter-service wrestling there's nothing as effective in deflating egos than meeting world champion, Greg Gibson of the Marine Corps.

Hrnrcir met Gibson for the championship in Greco-Roman in the 220-pound weight class. Gibson was the only man to beat Hrnrcir giving him a well earned second place finish. Hrnrcir also took third in freestyle.

Clemons did very well in the 180-pound weight class, taking second in the Greco-Roman and bringing home a championship crown in the freestyle event. Minor suffered a shoulder injury early in his opening match and was dropped from the competition.

On April 3, Hrnrcir, Sumpter, and Clemons attended the National Sambo Wrestling Tournament held in Fairfax, Md. Sambo wrestling is a cross between Judo and Greco-Roman wrestling. The competitors wear ghies instead of the traditional stretch uniform. And the Berlin team did very well in the tournament.

Clemons was again the man to beat, taking his second crown as the National Sambo Champion, while in team standings, the Berlin men were named the top military team of the competition, a title formerly held by the Marine Corps for the past two years.

The only other competition entered by a Berlin wrestler, was Clemons entry into the U.S. Wrestling Federation's National Championship in which he placed a hearty fourth.

Racquetball team selected, Langlois USAB champ

by R. Gibson

The 1982 U.S. Army Berlin (USAB) Racquetball Championship was held at the Berlin Brigade Sports Center gym May 10 to 12.

Clem Langlois, Company B, Field Station Berlin, literally marched over everyone he met on his way to the finals. In the finals he went up against Steve Simpson, Company B, 4th Battalion, for the Berlin crown.

Simpson was the only other undefeated player in the field of 29, but he remained undefeated only until he met Langlois. Langlois made short work of Simpson, taking him in straight games, 15-12, 15-13.

The two top finishers from the senior's division, Matthew Young, Headquarters and Headquarters Company (HHC), Berlin Brigade, and Robert Cox, MEDDAC, took the first and second places, respectively.

From the USAB tournament, Thomas Rembert, U.S. Army Communications Command (USACC), who finished third, and Eddie Tata, HHC, Berlin Brigade, the fourth place finisher along with Langlois, Simpson, Young, and Cox will represent Berlin in the 1982 U.S. Army Europe championships. The tournament is scheduled for June 26 and 27 in Wiesbaden.

The only other member of the brigade team scheduled to go to the USAREUR tourney is Kathy Gall, Company A, Field Station Berlin. Gall recently won the USAREUR Regionals held at Rhein Main Air Force Base Frankfurt, West Germany. She is currently rated number five in the U.S., and will be in Buffalo, N.Y., next week for the Nationals tournament there.

Signal Company goes tactical

by Al Arrowwood

The U.S. Army Signal Support Company went to the field for a common task field training exercise the first week of May. That sounds like a simple statement, but for those in the know that is a strange, (excuse me) unique statement.

Berlin's Signal Support Company is a fixed signal company with several large duty sections which are manned 24 hours a day, 365 days a year providing communications support for the Army, Air Force, and State Department in Berlin. These duty sections fall under the control of the Assistant Chief of Staff for Communications and Electronics.

In the tradition of Berlin, Signal Support Company is unique. It is the only fixed communications company in the Army which does not belong to the Army Communications Command. It is assigned to the Berlin Brigade.

So how do you take a fixed station signal company to the field? In the almost 60 years combined military experience of the first sergeant and three platoon sergeants, they have seen tactical and mobile signal companies in the field, but never a fixed company.

In spite of this fact 1st Sgt. Larry Kitrell and Company Commander Capt. Donna Souder, using the combined talents of the company and the assets of Berlin Brigade, executed the common task FTX. They left behind enough people to man the sections at minimum manning with provisions to pull people in from the FTX for any section which might have an emergency, and the rest prepared to move out.

After a company level readiness exercise on May 3, the company moved out to bivouac at Anzio site. The first day was taken up in setting up a bivouac, complete with defensive positions with lessons on fields of fire provided by the first sergeant and platoon sergeants. Lessons on field sanitation, NBC and field wire laying by the company overhead and NBC teams, and map training by the platoon sergeants were also conducted. According to Sp4 Lynn Garrett, Pictorial Branch, "I think a lot was learned by all of us. I really enjoyed this."

The second day was spent in navigating a map course. There were

NBC and other hazards throughout the course. Sp5 Jeff Basker of Troop Section stated, "The map course was excellent. Because of our 24-hour mission, all of my map training has been in the classroom."

The third day was started by gas chamber exercises. After that, the company laid field wire in Doughboy City and finished the day running the confidence course.

Sp5 Donald Kreis commented on this day's training, "The gas chamber was nothing new to any of us, but both the wire laying in Doughboy and the confidence course were really physical. I really feel sorry for anybody who tried it without being in really top shape. It really makes you appreciate the guys who do this kind of training all the time."

The training was climaxed by assault and defensive training the fourth day at Doughboy City. Sp4 Dennis Foster of the NBC team praised the men of Company C, 3rd Battalion, for their professionalism in the conduct of the training that day. "They made the training realistic with the MILES equipment. I don't think there was anyone out here who didn't enjoy this part of the FTX."

REACHING FOR THE ROPE—Sp4s Robert Ward, John Kocsis and Wesley Sherwood assist Sp4 Audrey Carter in the rope-climb on the confidence

NOT THE EASIEST ENTRY—Sp5 Richard Beaver and Pvt. 1 Todd Scott cover the window so that Sp5 Jeff Basker can make a successful entry into a building at Doughboy City. This was just some of the training and action that took place during the Signal Company Field Training Exercise. (Photo by Lynn Garrett)

Drama Club wins awards

The Berlin Drama Club showed that they were not only good in one category, but very good in three categories in competition at the Bitburg Drama festival on May 3 to 5.

Berlin began by placing second over six other American high schools in West Germany. The one act play in which they acted out "Look Who's Playing God," enabled Berlin to take the outstanding "One Act Play Award." Vince Lingner, who has been in the Drama Club for three years, gave Berlin a fourth place finish out of a field of 21 in individual acts (solo's).

And just to put the icing on the cake, Lisa Ahrens, who is in her first year in the Drama Club, surprised everyone by also placing fourth in Pantomime. The cast that went down to the Bitburg festival was Connie Beach, Mike Beech, Alan Robinson, and Debbie Stowell.

Other members of the Drama Club that deserve recognition for their hard work all year long are Tim Beech, Andrea Dedman, Scott Koon, Becky Becker, and Tonya Woodroff.
