Army aviation learns to fight fire

by Sue Sweeney

The Army Aviation Detachment and the Berlin Fire Department got together on the roof of a 28-story building last week for a training exercise designed to help the Berlin community.

The exercise was planned to give the aviation section and the firemen a better idea of what to expect if a high-rise building ever caught on fire.

The firefighters already have a system to combat fires in tall buildings. Water is pumped from a tanker to an outlet on each floor where they only need hook up their hoses. In some cases, buildings have special elevators for the firemen to use. When the elevators aren't available, the men must use the stairwell.

In case of such a fire, the aviation section would be used primarily to get firefighters to the roof of the building. They would also have a secondary mission of removing occupants.

The Army aviation section, including CW3 Michael Sutherland, pilot, Capt. William Brooks, co-pilot, and Crew Chief Sp4 Kenneth Johnson and the fire fighters got this chance to practice their skills as a team before they need to work together in a real emergency.

The exercise began as the firefighters showed the soldiers the way fires are extinguished. The firefighters climbed the stairs pretending to fight fires on each floor until they reached the top. They then hooked up their hoses and sprayed water. Next it was the Army's turn.

The helicopter lifted off carrying a full load of determined firefighters. The choppers flew them to the top of a building in the Bukow area and hovered on the roof just long enough for the firefighters to get out before flying away to get another group of fire fighters and their equipment.

The weather was windy and the height of the roof compounded the problem. Precision flying was required for the choppers to land and remain long enough to pick up several passengers from the roof-top.

After landing on the roof, the fire fighters proceeded down into the building just as they would in a real emergency.

“The joint exercise was good,” said Brooks, “The training was excellent and the lessons learned could prevent loss of lives in fires.”

Fourth of July celebration planned

This July 4th marks the 206th anniversary of the independence of the United States.

To celebrate this event there will be a review of the Berlin Brigade, including an Air Force contingent, on July 4 at Platz des 4. Juli at 11 a.m. The celebration includes a 50-gun salute, a parade of troops and mechanized equipment, a special performance by the Berlin Brigade Drill Team, and a “fly-over” by the Aviation Detachment.

In the evening a concert by the Berlin Brigade Band will commemorate 206 years of American music. The concert will be held at Dreiphful Park and begins at 9 p.m. Following the music there will be a traditional fireworks display at 11:30 p.m.

Transportation to both events will be provided by the Transportation Division. Buses for the parade will depart at 9:45 a.m. from the Bus Terminal, Dueppel, Andrews, Sundgauer and Park Manor housing areas. At the end of the ceremony, buses will return spectators to the same areas.

Buses for the concert and fireworks will depart at 8:30 p.m. from Andrews and McNair Barracks, and all housing areas with the exception of B.B. Service will not be provided from the Bus Terminal. After the festivities, buses will return passengers to the barracks and housing areas.

First fourth was on the eighth?

A picnic and fireworks on the second of Quintilis?

Maybe — if the Romans had not changed the name of a month and had the suggestion of John Adams for Independence Day observance been followed.

The seventh month in the Julian calendar, Quintilis, was renamed to honor Julius Caesar. The name, July, went into effect in 44 B.C., the year Caesar was killed.

Adams, one of the signers of the Declaration of Independence, felt that

July 2, the day the "Resolution of Independence" was adopted, was destined to become a day of national celebration.

He said, "I am apt to believe that it will be celebrated by succeeding generations as the great anniversary festival. It ought to be solemnized with pomp and parade, with shows, games, sports, guns, bells, bonfires, and illuminations from one end of this continent to the other, from this time forward, forevermore."

The first "celebration" of independence actually occurred in Philadelphia on July 8, 1776, the day the Declaration was first read in public. Bells were rung, bands played, and people thronged the streets.

The following year, on July 4, the people of Philadelphia broke loose with a festive and uproarious celebration and a Philadelphia newspaper editor coined the term, "Glorious Fourth." In succeeding years, the custom spread to other cities and states.

In the early years, the day's activities had a religious tone; by the middle 1800's, patriotic oratory became the dominant note. Then speeches were replaced gradually by the growing popularity of sports and games at picnics.

Fireworks were a major aspect of Fourth of July celebrations over the years, but loss of life and limb gave impetus to a movement around the turn of the century to abandon them. In 1903, the town of Springfield, Mass., forbade the sale of fireworks.

In following decades, other parts of the country shared the sentiment, passing ordinances forbidding the sale of fireworks entirely or restricting them to "sparklers" and "fountains." The big, explosive jobs were transferred from "little" hands to the hands of professional pyrotechnists for public displays.

In 1941, in case everyone didn't already agree when Independence Day was to be celebrated, Congress made it legal, declaring July 4 a public holiday.

Caller's corner

"Why don't they put a stop sign at that dangerous corner?" This is just one of the many questions which the Berlin Community Dial Action Office receives each day. Any member of the community can voice their questions, comments, suggestions, and/or complaints by dialing their office at Berlin Military 7777. Quite often, anonymous calls are made that would be of interest to the community. To facilitate these calls, the "Caller's Corner" of the Berlin Observer will provide a weekly selection of questions and answers. The name of the caller will always be deleted.

Dear Caller's Corner,

I am very annoyed that the AAFES Gas Station is totally self service. I am willing to pay a fee for the services. I do not understand why we do not have the option of service or self service.

Tired of Pumping

Dear Pumping,

In an effort to keep gasoline prices down, AAFES has limited the operation of its service station to self service only. While this may be an inconvenience to a few, AAFES feels that most of the community would rather have the lower gasoline prices.

Dial Action Office

Dear Caller's Corner,

My complaint is that both libraries are not open long enough. It's really hard on the troops at McNair. Due to mandatory training, formations, etc., it is difficult to use the library during their current hours. Can't something be done to extend the closing times?

Running Late

Dear Running,

The heavy use of the McNair Library by Basic Skills Education (BSEP) Classes during the morning hours precludes closing McNair Library late in order to keep it open during hours of low utilization.

McNair Library is open every Sunday and Sunday from 10 a.m. to 6 p.m. for off duty time use. Additional library service is available at Andrews from 5:30 to 9 p.m. seven days per week. Also, the Main Library is available for use from 6 to 8 p.m. seven days per week.

Insurance rate hike

New automobile liability rates have been approved by the German Insurance Commission and went into effect yesterday, July 1. Rates for persons under 25 years of age are expected to rise drastically.

The increases are due to changes in the NATO tariff structure. As a result of tariff structure changes, insurance premiums will no longer be based on a soldier's rank.

Single personnel under 25 will have increases of approximately 60 percent. Married personnel under the age of 25 will have increases of about 27 percent.

E-8/9 and civilians age 25 to 34 will have increases ranging from 35 to 66 percent.

Duty train cancellation

Only one passenger car on the duty train will be available for normal travel from Berlin to Frankfurt July 8, says Maj. Vincent H. Parr, deputy transportation officer. No passenger travel will be available to Bremerhaven on that date. Passengers in a duty status will have priority on the Frankfurt run.

BDU field jacket coming

The camouflage field jacket for the camouflage battle dress uniform (BDU) is expected to be on the scene and in the supply system beginning in March, 1983, according to Department of Army officials.

The BDU field jacket is made of the same material as the present field jacket. However, the new version has some of the same characteristics as the BDU to include the infrared reflective dyes and the camouflage pattern.

All active duty soldiers are currently required to have one BDU field jacket by Oct. 1, 1983.

Sexual harassment

A policy letter concerning sexual harassment has been distributed to company level throughout U.S. Army Europe and 7th Army by Commander in Chief Gen. Frederick J. Kroesen.

The letter defines sexual harassment as unwelcome sexual advances, requests for sexual favors and any other verbal or physical conduct of a sexual nature.

"Individuals who are sexually harassed by superiors, co-workers or peers," the letter states, "are encouraged to make it clear that this behavior is offensive and to report the harassment to the appropriate supervisor."

Managers and supervisors throughout USAREUR are responsible for maintaining a work environment in which sexual harassment is neither condoned nor permitted and in which transgressions will be condemned when possible, punished when detected, states the letter.

VBS closes

Closing ceremonies for the Vacation Bible School were held on Friday, June 25. The two-week program was held for children of the Berlin community at the Thomas A. Roberts Elementary School and was staffed by a group of 70 volunteers.

Ceremonies began as ten children paraded to the American Community Chapel under the theme, "The Lord is My Shepherd." Each class then presented a song or skit telling what the Bible School had taught them.

The vacation school held an offering project in which money was raised to purchase a heifer cow. The cow costs $650 and will be sent to a third world nation.

Some 420 children, ages 4 to 14, participated in the school. Plans are underway to make this program an annual event for the children of the community.

Additional church services

For the convenience of the soldiers participating in the parade and celebrations on Sunday, July 4, there will be two additional church services.

The Protestant Worship Service will be at 4 p.m. at the Main Chapel at the McNair Barracks Chapel.

There will also be a Catholic Mass at the Blessed Sacrament Chapel at 4 p.m. at the McNair Barracks Chapel.

Museum gets check

The Berlin Army Museum is $300 richer this week thanks to a generous contribution from the American Women's Club.

Mrs. Carole Suddath, wife of Brig. Gen. Leroy N. Suddath, Jr., brigade commander, presented the check from the club to Stephan Raybourn, president of the Association and Supporters of the Berlin Army Museum, and Tony Balk, museum curator.

Suddath and Mrs. Joanne Adams said that the funds used for the gift were raised from several different activities throughout the community. Suddath said, "Most of the funds came from the Thrift Shop, bazaars, sales, and shows."

"The museum is wholly supported by donations of military artifacts and contributions. This donation will be used to improve some of the existing displays and to possibly purchase some new items for the museum," said Balk.

The museum is located on the Platz des 4. Juli at McNair Barracks and houses displays depicting military uniforms, equipment, weapons, and scenes dating from the Revolutionary War through Vietnam.

Most of the items have been donated by soldiers who have served in the 6th Infantry or other units. The museum also has a film showing the history of Berlin since the war and how Berlin has been rebuilt into the modern metropolis we see today.

The museum is open from 1 to 5 p.m. Wednesday through Saturday.

Black braid approved

Officers who bought the women's classic uniform before the black braid was approved must have the braid attached by Aug. 1, Department of the Army officials advise.

The officials point out that while the black braid is required on the Army green classic uniform slacks, it is not to be worn on the Army green pantsuit slacks. Classic uniform slacks have a zipper in the front; the pantsuit slacks have the zipper on the side.

Friday, June 25, was officially proclaimed Berlin Brigade Recognition Day by Brig. Gen. Leroy N. Suddath, Jr., brigade commander.

It was observed with a parade followed by a day of no scheduled activities, which for most soldiers and their families meant unit parties.

The parade began at 11 a.m. at Platz des 4. Juli. It involved an inspection of troops by the brigade commander, a reading of the Recognition Day Speech, a pass-in-review of the troops and vehicles, and a flawless performance by the Berlin Brigade Drill Team.

Unit parties which lasted as long as the refreshments did were held immediately following the parade.

FLY OVER—The Aviation Detachment provided helicopters for a fly-over during the Recognition Day Parade. The helicopters trailed red, white and blue smoke.

TASC open house

On Tuesday an Open House ceremony was held at the Berlin Training and Audiovisual Support Center (TASC) to inaugurate the completed renovations and expansion of the complex. It also marked the fifth anniversary of the founding of TASC under the Division G3.

TASC has grown into an important source for sophisticated high-technology training support in Berlin.

The Multiple Integrated Laser System (MILES) and the Infantry Remote Target System (IRETS) were displayed at the open house. Both of these devices have been an instant success with the military personnel who have used them for realistic training since their arrival in 1981.

This past year the TASC has acquired video color cameras, recording equipment and post production editing and dubbing material, plus a mini-studio which was also displayed for the command. Another new feature of the Berlin TASC is the greatly expanded use of video for training.

The TASC also provides facilities, planning, presentation and procurement support for the Berlin Command. TASC is staffed with one enlisted and seven civilian personnel under the direction of Mr. Tom Strauss, the Training and Audiovisual Support officer.

MOUT is for tanks, too

by Sue Sweeney

Company F, 40th Armor not only has the distinction of being the U.S. Army's largest tank company but also being the first and only company to use Military Operations in Urban Terrain (MOUT) tactics on a day-to-day basis in conjunction with training.

Over this past year, the tankers and infantrymen have learned to work together at Doughboy City in various types of MOUT training, to include MOUT ARTEP's and field training exercises.

According to Lt. Mike Prevou, 2nd Platoon leader, there are various problems the tankers have overcome which are typical only to a MOUT environment. Maneuvering tanks in the small spaces at the training city is just one of the difficulties. The tank commanders also had to gain knowledge of infantry procedures.

SSgt. Raymond Daniels, a 2nd Platoon tank commander, said most of the tankers have had the opportunity of working with the infantry units at Doughboy City.

"I have worked out there myself," said Daniels. "Training out there is completely different from anything we've done before. We wear the multiple integrated laser system (MILES) and keep in close radio contact with the units we're assigned to." MILES allows units to train realistically without the use of live ammunition.

The primary mission of the tanks is to provide fire support for the infantry units and to supply cover for them.

"If the soldiers need an objective knocked out they call us," said Sp4 Sean Smith, a tank driver and gunner. "We try to maneuver to a position without getting hit and then destroy the target. It's very realistic and we work closely with the foot soldiers."

Company commanders from the different infantry units have spent considerable time planning training that involves tanks in MOUT. The training is designed to prepare the unit and the tankers to fight together as a combined arms team.

About the training Capt. Gregory Stone, Company F's commander, says, "We've always had to learn to fight in the city after it was too late . . . We need to be able to use the knowledge gained from past MOUT battles and incorporate it into a workable doctrine which will help us avoid the costly losses suffered by the United States in past battles."

"A tanker has to have a working knowledge of infantry tactics so that he can work with infantry soldiers in a coordinated and successful effort," said Sp4 Mike Dudley, a tank gunner. "We don't fire live rounds at Doughboy City, of course, but since everyone wears the MILES system, we can still tell if we hit our target."

According to Prevou, the Department of the Army and the Armor Center at Fort Knox, Ky., have been doing a lot of work recently in the area of MOUT training. "We're just lucky enough to have Doughboy City here to use as a training ground. We're proud to be the 'best tankers east of the Elbe.'"

4th Battalion learns about demolitions

by Michael Mathis

"Fire in the hold! Fire in the hold! Fire in the hold!" was the cry Monday and Tuesday as members of the 4th Battalion learned to use demolitions.

1st Lt. Edward Bodling, Combat Support Company, officer in charge of the range, said, "It's of critical importance that all soldiers are able to use demolitions to destroy friendly equipment to prevent it from falling into enemy hands and secondly to create obstacles in the path of an oncoming enemy."

The classes started off with a seven-mile road march to Rose Range early Monday morning. As each company arrived they were given classes on grenades and the 12-gauge shotgun. Members of the companies then performed the tasks of grenade throwing and firing the shotgun.

The following morning started with another road march before the companies received classes on setting off an explosive charge electrically and non-electrically. The soldiers then carefully placed their charges.

Sp4 Alan Dunbar, Headquarters and Headquarters Company, said, "The classes were great but the march out here was a killer."

The classes are very important to the Infantry soldier here in Berlin because in this type of environment the proper use of demolitions could mean the difference between life and death, according to Sgt. James McGinniss, Headquarters Company training NCO.

Suggestion award earns money

Dieter Fritsch, supervisory mechanical engineer for the Directorate of Engineering and Housing (DEH), received a suggestion award and a check for DM 3,340 from Maj. Gen. J. G. Boatner, U.S. commander, Berlin, in a ceremony Tuesday morning at Clay Headquarters.

Fritsch's award-winning suggestion was to modernize the heating boilers in Pueckler Housing. The heaters in use at that time were more than 20 years old and were responsible for oil losses of up to 20 percent a year.

His suggestion was implemented on a one-year trial basis. At the end of this period, DEH confirmed that 27,750 gallons of oil or DM 60,000 were in fact saved.

Fritsch, a native of Wetzlar, West Germany, studied energy and heat engineering in Giessen, West Germany, and qualified as an engineer in 1973.

On May 2, 1973, he began working for the U.S. Forces in Berlin as a mechanical engineer. He was promoted to his present position in July, 1979.

CONGRATULATIONS—Maj. Gen. J.G. Boatner, U.S. commander, Berlin, congratulates Dieter Fritsch. Fritsch received a suggestion award and a check for DM 3,340 in a Tuesday morning ceremony.

Hole-in-one

GARMISCH (AFRC) — Blind luck or a sign of things to come? Only time will tell, but right now Bobby Krasnican is a star at the Armed Forces Recreation Center in Garmisch.

Bobby, an 18-year-old beginner in an AFRC Golf Week, hit a hole-in-one his first time on the golf course.

Bobby and his brother Joe, sons of Andrew J. Krasnican, chief of manpower, G-1, Berlin Briagde, and a friend, Jim Schuler, all came here from Berlin last week to take part in AFRC Golf Week.

Last week, Bill Stringer, an AFRC golf instructor, took his class out on the course so they could use the techniques they had learned in the last two days in an actual game of golf. On the second hole, Bobby performed his stunning feat with a four-wood — a 162-yard hole-in-one.

"I was surprised," said Bobby. "I'm going to keep playing, but I don't know if I'll ever hit another hole-in-one."

"It was terrific," said Stringer. "This is the first time a beginner has hit a hole-in-one here."

If Bobby keeps playing as he has started, the next time he's heard from will be on the pro circuit.

Club holds tennis day

The Berlin American Tennis Club held a "Tennis Day" Saturday at the Harnack House Courts. The event was designed as a membership drive and to allow some stiff competition between the players.

About 50 players participated in the event. The weather cooperated as the players participated in singles, doubles, and mixed doubles play.

Anyone interested in joining the Berlin American Tennis Club should contact Lucretia McClenny at 819-4197 or Dave Ungerer at 309-4534 for information about the club.

Two-man best ball

The Berlin American Golf and Country Club held a two-man best ball tournament here Sunday.

There were 112 entries in the tournament that was designed to test each golfer's skill. In the net flight (those playing with handicaps) there were ties for both first and second place.

The ties were broken by the score on the "back nine," as it's commonly called. This means that scorecards were checked and the team with the lowest total for the last nine holes of the course were the winners of the tie.

In the net flight, Willie Harris and his teammate Wolfgang Ditzler were the top winners with a 55 under par. Second place was taken by Ralph and Mark Tully, a father and son team.

Karl Hammon and Robert Moore tied Andy Lawson and Herbert Braun for third place. But Hammon and Moore's 25 on the back nine won out over the other team's 26.

In the gross flight Dieter Zochner and Goetz Trenel were the prize winners with 67 strokes.
