Don't let crime take a bite out of you

More and more personnel are getting out of the billets and seeing what Germany is all about. Before leaving home, you should be concerned about whether or not you'll come back to those precious items that you've worked for so long and hard. Experience has shown that most thefts are crimes of opportunity. Contrary to popular belief, the typical thief is not an expert at this trade and has not sharpened his skill over a long period of time. Chances are he was just confronted with a profitable low risk situation. Opportunity is definable as a favorable set of circumstances and this translates into a low risk situation — easy cash or valuables at minimum effort. You can help the military police reduce crime by applying the following measures:

- Ensure your valuables are provided adequate security.
- Maintain a current record of your valuables.

Security in the billets

Security and adequately safe guarding your valuables in the billets poses a problem since most soldiers share their rooms with other service members. This can be overcome by orienting roommates to watch out for each other, report suspicious activities and — above all else — ensure they lock the room when leaving it empty. There are some precautionary measures for you to take:

- Ensure your wall locker is in good repair. If not, see your supervisor about getting it repaired or replaced.
- Secure your wall locker with a good quality lock. Too often expensive camera equipment or other valuables are secured with a poorly constructed, inexpensive lock.
- When you're going TDY or on leave, make sure your personal and military property is inventoried.
- Mail any presents and souvenirs you pick up on TDY or leave as soon as possible. Avoid accumulation of valuables for which there is no means of safekeeping.

Security in the home

Securing your home can be accomplished by following some simple guidelines.

- Make sure the door and window locking devices are adequate and that all doors and windows are locked when you leave.
- Don't leave extra keys under doormats, in mail boxes or other similar places.
- Leave on an inside light or a radio. It gives the appearance someone is home.
- If you're going to be away for an extended period of time, have a trusted friend open and close your drapes and turn on and off a radio or TV.
- Notify the military police station so they can make periodic checks.

Marking and recording your valuables

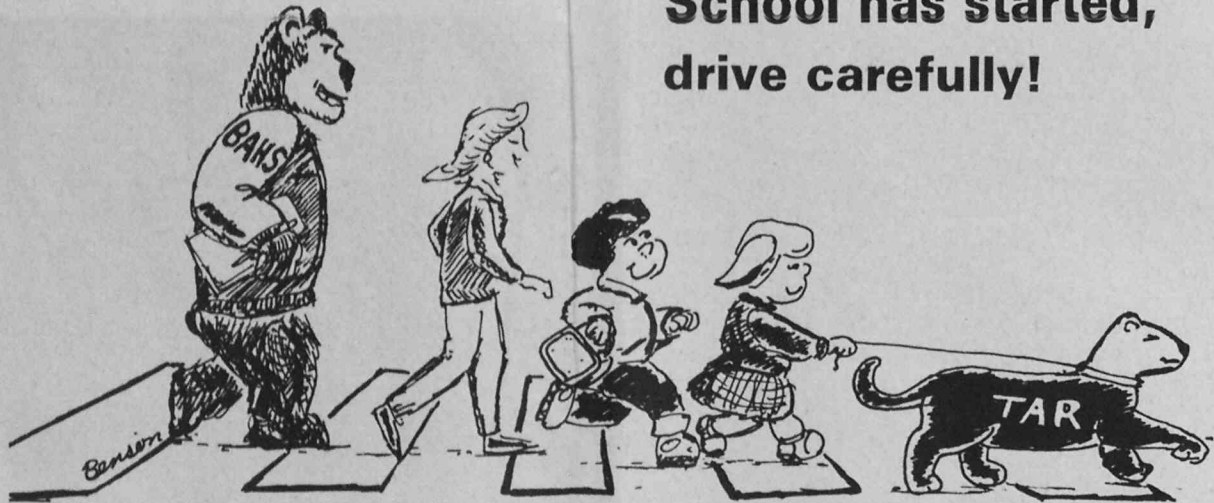

It's important to mark unidentifiable valuables and keep a record of them. Stolen articles lacking some form of positive identification, create a problem for law enforcement personnel. Here are some of the reasons why it's important to you to mark your valuables:

- Property taken cannot be traced and returned to you if it is not identifiable.
- Without positive identifications or proof of ownership, any claim will end in disapproval.
- Marked property aids the military police in neutralizing the thief through surveillance of channels where such property is sold.

Help your local military police and as McGruff says, "Take a bite out of crime." Your awareness and concern will ensure your stay in Europe will be memorable and enjoyable.

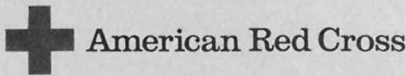

School has started, drive carefully!

A million thanks!

When the Red Cross needed help...you were there. Supporting the emergency disaster appeal. With money. And encouraging words. Thanks to you we can go on helping disaster victims.

briefly

Oil changes

Changed the oil in your car lately? If you did it in a parking lot at your quarters or at Andrews or McNair, you were wrong.

You can be cited by the Military Police under USAREUR Regulation 632-10.

If you spill any, it can cost you up to and including an Article 15, also you can also wind up having to pay for the clean up.

Oil changes should be done at the Andrews Auto Craft Shop. So take care of your car and your wallet and do it in the right place.

APO move

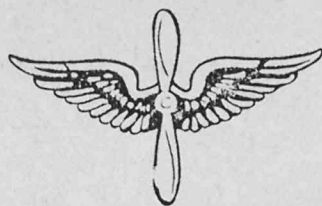

The Army Post Office is moving. The main APO on Saargemünder Strasse will move to Roosevelt Barracks tomorrow and Sunday, because of this move the APO in Truman Plaza will be closed the same days and reopen on Tuesday.

A new bus stop has been established on Gardeschützenweg, one block from Roosevelt Barracks to enable the community to utilize the relocated APO facilities.

Chapel change

The Andrews Chapel has changed its starting time for the General Protestant Service to 10:30 a.m. starting Sunday.

This latter starting time will allow those who are involved with the Sunday School program at the TAR school, time to reach Andrews Chapel and participate with the Sunday Worship program.

Officer Insignia

Enlisted Insignia

Aviation Branch

Insignia for Aviation, the Army's newest branch, have been approved by Gen. John A. Wickham Jr., Chief of Staff.

Aviation, approved as a branch on April 13, 1983, by Army Secretary John O. Marsh Jr., is the first branch to be formed in more than two decades.

The new branch insignia should be available in post exchanges in about a year and in the Army supply system about six months later, a DA official said.

The officer insignia will consist of a silver-colored propeller and gold-colored wings. The enlisted insignia, including the propeller, will be gold.

Those colors are the same as on the insignia worn by members of the Army Air Corps and Army Air Forces, the Army's air arms before the Air Force became a separate service in 1947.

The new insignia are "very, very similar" to the old AAF insignia, according to an Institute of Heraldry official. The contour of the wings is the main difference between the old AAF insignia and that recently approved for members of the Aviation branch, she said.

The official colors of the new branch are ultramarine blue and golden orange and already are used for flags and guidons of aviation units. Aviation branch members will wear branch colors on their dress blue and mess blue uniforms just as members of other branches do.

Emergency leave

On Jan. 3, a new change in emergency leave policy became effective.

If the American Red Cross has verified a critical illness or death in the service member's or spouses immediate family (spouse, children, parents, brother, sister or person who has acted in loco-parentis), the service member and command sponsored family members are entitled to travel on emergency leave Berlin-New York-Berlin at military expense or elect to fly Military Airlift Command (MAC).

When the emergency exists in a U.S. possession, Hawaii, Alaska or foreign country, transportation will be to the nearest U.S. Possession.

The family is responsible for the cost of travel from port of entry to their destination and back to port of entry.

If the service member's family requires financial assistance, the following guidelines apply:

ARC may provide financial assistance to cover travel expenses from port of entry to destination and back to port of entry for the person whose family is involved.

For example, if the spouse's father in Mississippi has died then ARC may assist for travel expenses for the spouse from New York to Mississippi to New York.

AER may provide financial assistance to cover travel expenses from port of entry to destination and back to port of entry for the other members of the service member's family travelling on emergency leave.

Normally, it is not encouraged that the entire family travel on emergency leave due to the great expense the family may incur to and while in the United States. It is usually more prudent for the affected person to travel alone, especially when the family has children.

Each application for financial assistance is reviewed on an individual basis. When an emergency concerns the immediate family of the service member or spouse, assistance should first be sought from the ARC. If the ARC cannot provide sufficient financial assistance, AER should be contacted.

Both offices are located on the second floor of Bldg. 4, Clay Compound.

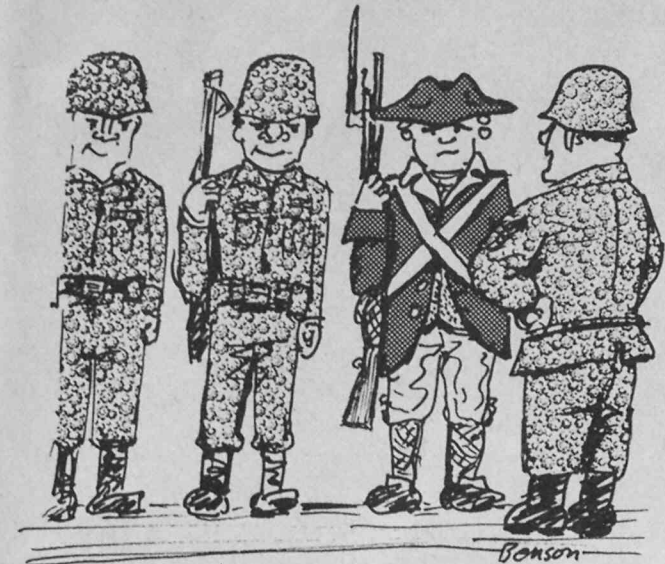

Use of buses

Transportation asks all parents to remind their children that they should not use the route buses and work specials for regular transportation to or from school.

School buses are furnished daily for this service and use of other buses results in unnecessary crowding.

Those children having a valid reason for early reporting, e.g., band practice or a hospital appointment, may use the route buses on an exception basis. All others should ride their assigned school bus.

The cooperation of parents is solicited in this matter so that better service can be provided for all.

Selling to locals

Selling an unwanted item to someone outside the military usually takes extra steps to avoid problems, according to the 42nd MP Customs people.

The item may be a stereo which was purchased at the audio shop or an automobile imported or purchased tax-free in Germany.

Before selling a tax-free automobile, stereo or bicycle to a non-member, including Germans or tourists, the seller must first complete a Permit to Transfer Request (AE Form 2074) in five copies, sign each copy and submit the completed forms to the customer service office, Headquarters, 42nd Military Police Group (Customs) APO 09086.

Forms will then be stamped and four copies will be returned to the seller. The next step will be a trip to the appropriate German Customs Office with the approved AE Form 2074 in hand and accompanied by the buyer of the merchandise. This will conclude the transaction unless one is selling a motor vehicle or a firearm.

In such cases, go to the MP vehicle/firearms registration section on Andrews Barracks, after visiting German Customs and complete the transaction by signing it over on the registration form.

To obtain an AE Form 2074 or if you need more information concerning it contact the 42nd MP Customs at 819-3522.

ARTEP part of CSB training

by Doris Flack

The ability to move, shoot and communicate were the main tasks two units of Combat Support Battalion were being evaluated on during their recent ARTEPs held in Bergen Hohne, West Germany. The two-day evaluation occurred Aug. 25-26.

ARTEP stands for Army Readiness Training Evaluation Program and is not a test but rather a tool for commanders that indicates areas where more training emphasis should be focused, according to Capt. Gregory Stone, CSB operations officer.

The units involved in their individual ARTEPs were Battery C, 94th Field Artillery and 42nd Engineer Company. Having just completed the tank firing tables to decide the top tank crew, Company F, 40th Armot provided support for the ARTEPs.

According to Capt. Roger Amende, commander of 42nd Engineers, the main focus of their ARTEP was demolitions. "We are using rough carpentry/construction, using every tool we have, to construct obstacles that will eventually be destroyed. We're making different shaped obstacles using concrete," said Amende. "Everyone is involved — wreckers, CEVs (Combat Engineer Vehicles)."

One engineer wasn't too happy about the demolitions part of the ARTEP. "It took three days to construct this obstacle," he complained prior to the call, "Fire in the hole, fire in the hole" and the obstacle's destruction. Other soldiers, however, weren't upset about seeing their handiwork get blown up. "I've definitely learned something, especially about different types of charges," stated Sp4 Erwin Roberts.

Citing their construction skills gained during the preceeding FTX and the ARTEP, Sgt. Skip Anderson said, "Rome wasn't built in a day, but first platoon wasn't tasked for that."

Other tasks the engineers were evaluated on included reconnaissance patrols and water purification. "They'll have to pick or identify potential water points based on the site's access, natural cover and concealment and the degree of purity the water has in its natural state," said Amende.

Meanwhile the redlegs began their ARTEP with live-fire missions, according to Capt. Dave Chepauskas, commander of C/94. "This is designed to test the proficiency of the firing battery, the fire direction center and the forward observers, remarked Chepauskas. After completing the live-fires, the battery broken down into teams, executed a hasty departure.

The M109s, self-propelled 155mm howitzers, leaving a trail of dust were headed for Barbaradorf, a mock village in the Bergen Hohne training area, when the call for a hip shoot came in.

Explained Chepauskas, "A hip shoot occurs when the infantry we are supporting report incoming artillery fire. The guns would then pull over at the first opportunity and prepare to return fire.

"It's a good test of mobility without prior notice," remarked Chepauskas.

After the hip shoot, the howitzers moved on to Barbaradorf where they were joined with 42nd Engineers in their secondary roles as infantrymen. At the mock village, the guns provided suppressive fire while the engineers/infantrymen cleared the buildings. According to Amende, this was the first time the engineers had performed their secondary mission.

PFC Russell Steward, of C/94th, said he learned a lot both technically and tactically during the ARTEP. "You have to work as a team," said Sp5 Jesse Murray. "During the year, we concentrate on individual training never really getting a chance to work together as a team. But down here we work together as a unit. Teamwork — that's what it's all about."

Evaluators for the ARTEPs and 40th Armor's tank qualifications were provided by 1st Armored Division, Nürnberg, West Germany. Other units supporting CSB were scouts and elements of Company C from the Berlin Brigade's 2nd Battalion and tactical elements of the 2nd Armored Division (Forward), Garlstadt, West Germany.

Many soldiers voiced their desire for a warm shower and a soft bed when the ARTEP concluded Aug. 26.

SHARP TURN—An M109 makes a sharp turn in Barbaradorf looking for cover. The ARTEPs of the engineers and redlegs merged in the mock village as the engineers shed their primary mission to assume the role of infantrymen, a secondary mission they rarely get the chance to practice, and the artillerymen showed up with their "pigs" to provide suppressive fire. The exercises were evaluated by members of the 1st Armored Division, who noted their ability to move, shoot and communicate. (Photos by Doris Flack)

er support. The engineers constructed three different kinds of obstacles, all of which they destroyed.

UNDER CONSTRUCTION—Members of the 42nd Engineer Company constructed a tunnel for the first time during last week's ARTEP. After the concrete set, it was covered with dirt to form a tank obstacle. (Photo by Brian Farman)

ure from the live-fire range to the mock village Barbaradorf.

HAMMERING AWAY—Sp4 Mike Andrews holds nailed together 2x4s as SSgt. Lawrence Marks tries to pry them apart. The engineers used whatever scrap wood that could be found to construct obstacles they later destroyed.

Field laundry keeps soldiers' BDUs clean

by Brain Farman
CSB Correspondent

One the first things that commanders worry about in the field is personal hygiene. It's a fact that when a unit goes to the field to train they are going to get dirty. Not just their bodies, but their clothes as well.

What do you do about this? You could find a laundromat, but then again if you're in the woods there usually aren't any around.

In Bergen Hohne, West Germany, this is not a problem for the soldiers of Combat Support Battalion. CSB has a 23-man laundry section attached to worry about how their clothes are going to be cleaned.

The laundry section, from the 574th Service and Supply Company of Mannheim, West Germany, is under the command of SFC Juan Cruz. The military occupational specialty is 57E, Laundry Impregnation, and consists of washing and drying clothes. That doesn't sound hard, but then have you ever had 500 people bring you their clothes to wash?

In addition, they expect to get their own clothes back, not someone else's, and on the same day, the next day at the latest. Doesn't sound so easy any more, does it?

To make the laundry point run smoothly, you have to have a system and some dedicated personnel. The supply personnel from each field unit bring their unit's laundry to the inprocessing station, run by Sgt Leonard Barbour and Sp4 Letois Square.

They check to make sure each bundle contains no more than 20 pieces of clothing, that the laundry slip accurately reflects the clothing in the bag and then mark each piece so that it can be identified after coming out of the dryer.

The clothes are then sorted and put into one of three 60-pound-capacity washers. The next step, naturally, is into one of three 30-pound-capacity dryers. Once through the wash and dry cycle, the clothing goes to the outprocessing station.

Sgt. Barbour and Sp4 Hector Rivera resort the clothes matching up laundry markers, fold them and wrap them in brown paper secured with tape or string. The soiled garments that were delivered to the laundry point earlier in the day are now clean and ready to be picked up by the unit.

To completely wash and dry 60 pounds of clothing takes around 30 minutes, according to Cruz. He says his unit can support up to 500 soldiers a day with one day service, in the process using more than 2,000 gallons of water.

"This MOS has its drawbacks," said Cruz. "Working seven days a week, starting early in the morning and getting off late at night. They (his soldiers) get tired, especially late at night. They know its a job that has to be done, but sometimes they wonder if all their hard work is worth it, if it's appreciated."

At least one CSB soldier appreciated the service. "Overall, the support provided by the laundry section has been invaluable," he said.

DEH soccer champs

Team nabs crown

by Tom Jackson

The Directorate of Engineering and Housing Soccer Team powered through seven matches in two grueling days of competition to clench the national championships at the old Hardtstadion in Sandhausen, West Germany, August 27-28.

Altogether 20 teams from American communities throughout West Germany competed in the double elimination-type tournament.

The DEH team placed second in the preliminary round beating Neu-Ulm 1-2, tying Vilseck 1-1, and tying with the Kaiserslautern 66th 0-0.

In the interim round the DEH team edged by Mannheim 1-0 before shutting out Pirmasens 3-0.

Advancing to the semi-finals, the Berlin engineers grappled with Grafenwöhr and eventually wrung a 3-2 victory in overtime.

In the final match against Fulda/Bad Hersfeld, strong defenses on both sides again threw the game into overtime. Before a crowd of about 1,000 cheering spectators the well-planned attacks by Klaus Trölsch and Klaus Kuschel together with relentless solo work by Werner Henschel and Michael Wilfert kept the game wide open.

Defensively, fullback Wolfgang Bude and center halfback Helmut Rotzek effectively stopped the opponent's best moves.

Going into overtime the score was 0-0. For the 11-meter overtime shot Trölsch, Wilfert, Henschel and Kuschel booted in one goal each and goalkeeper Dieter Kraschewski knocked down all but two of the opponents goals giving the DEH team a resounding 4-2 victory.

The tournament was sponsored by the 1981 champions from Heidelberg and their community. The next tournament, in 1985, will be hosted by the Berlin community as defending champions.

Berlin runners place in Fulda

by Tom Jackson

Three Berlin Brigade runners placed in the United States Army Europe marathon in Fulda, West Germany, Sunday.

Jill Foster, with a time of 3:42.15, was the second woman to cross the finish line. Richard Thurston placed 15th in the men's category with a time of 3:07 and Jess Hernandez also placed in the 26.2 mile run.

Despite her second place showing Foster said she was not entirely pleased with her time. The numerous hills along the Fulda course made the marathon particularly difficult for the Berlin contingent, she said.

"It was a rough run for me especially coming from Berlin because we don't have any hills to train on," she said.

A 10 a.m. starting time, "wasn't as bad as it could have been," said Foster, "but in August the heat by that time of the day affects everybody's performance."

Foster, who tries to run about 70 miles a week in addition to working a rotating shift for the Army, says she hopes to improve on her times in the upcoming Berlin marathon.

The Berlin marathon which will be held Sept. 25 is West Germany's biggest and most famous race. Last year more than 4,000 runners participated.

USAB run set

The 1983 United States Army Berlin Cross Country Championships will be held Oct. 3, at 2 p.m., in the field behind the Sports Center.

The competition is open to U.S. military members only. Individuals as well as 10-man teams from each battalion will be competing. There will be three age categories; open, senior and junior vets.

Medals will be given to the first and second place winners in each age category and first and second place teams will receive trophies.

The top runners in the event will be selected to run in the 1983 United States Army Europe Cross Country Championship in Chiemsee on Oct. 30.

Interested persons should contact Don Dehaney at 819-6768.

Yacht club

The American Yacht Club Berlin is putting on the ritz — sponsoring a special windsurfing race Sept. 10, that is.

What makes this race stand out above the rest is not just the fact that it's the first windsurfing race ever held at the American Wannsee Harbor or that it includes not only American windsurfers but French, British and German as well, but it's probably the first semi-formal windsurfing race ever to be held.

At noon on the day of the race, one of Germany's top stunt windsurfers will perform his ballet on water and the tie and sail regatta will kick off at 1 p.m.

Secretary of the Army visits Berlin

While on a short visit to the city, Secretary of the Army, John O. Marsh, Jr., took time to inspect and talk with the 1st Platoon, Company A, 4th Battalion and part of the Scout Platoon, Combat Support Company, 2nd Battalion.

Marsh, escorted by Brigade Commander, Brig. Gen. Leroy N. Suddath, Jr., spoke with each soldier waiting to see him, asking them about their jobs, training, homes and family.

SFC Earl Williams, Scout Platoon Sergeant, later commented on his conversation with Marsh, "He asked about my soldiers and really wanted to know how they were doing. That's great when someone that high knows and cares about the soldiers, then the soldiers will care more about their duty.

"Marsh is super. It's not everyday you get to meet the boss and he's the kind that makes you want to do a good job," William added.

Before leaving Marsh talked with the 4th Battalion Platoon, explaining that the people at home do know what they are doing here and that the platoon and the 2nd Battalion scouts show a high degree of training and are about the sharpest looking soldiers he has seen.
