Brigade finalizes plans for June 5 Organization Day

Brigade officials this week put the finishing touches on plans for the unit's first official organization day in two years. Observation of the June 5 festivities will be split between McNair and Andrews barracks and will feature 20 competitive events as well as the traditional ceremonies, barbecues and camaraderie, according to unit officials.

The day will open with a 7:30 a.m. ceremony in Andrews Barracks' Yankee Stadium and end at 1 p.m. with awards ceremony at 4 Juli Platz. The battalions will take over at that point and continue the organization day with informal gatherings.

The first competitive event of the day will follow the opening ceremony. The Command Sergeant Major's Chariot Race will feature riders from the five competing battalions racing around Yankee Stadium in jeep trailers decorated to look like chariots.

The five competing battalions will be 4th, 5th, and 6th battalions, the Combat Support Battalion and a composite battalion made up of Headquarters Company, the 287th Military Police Company and other non-affiliated units.

Other events will include the return of the bear pit, an Army Physical Readiness Test event, a 200-meter swim and 10 kilometer run biathlon, a single-rope bridge, tent set-up and more.

In most events 20-soldier teams will represent each battalion, with five points awarded for first place, decreasing to one point for the fifth place finisher. A winning battalion will be decided by points and receive a trophy at the awards ceremony. Trophies will also be awarded to the winning teams in each of the 20 events. A trophy will also be awarded for the CSM's Chariot Race.

All normal U.S. Army buses will run as scheduled. One additional special bus will depart all Düppel stops at 12:15 p.m. going directly to McNair Barracks.

Secrets for sale--cheap

You don't need bugs, Soviet women or strange letters, just Visa, Master Card . . .

by Thomas Williams
Command information officer

Two weeks ago the Observer ran an article about soldiers receiving invitations to sell secrets to the bad guys and reap vast rewards for their efforts.

Well, I haven't gotten any such invitation, and frankly, I'm a little upset.

I've tried all the usual things to get someone to give me money in return for what I know, but so far, no takers. I talk about work in gasthauses, make fun of the dumb ideas of my co-workers in boutiques; why, I've even discussed the ramifications of the Constitutional amendments as they relate to Yorktown in the back seat of a taxi.

Nothing, nil, zippo, nichts, nyet, nada.

Come on guys, how am I supposed to pay off my DPP account, club bill and gambling debts? What about Reeboks for my kids?

I don't want to beg, mind you, just offer the services of Walker, Marines and Williams: Loose Lips Ltd., Inc., where we stand behind our motto, "Nothin's too good for the bad guys, so that's what we'll give 'em."

And what we don't know, we'll make up. After all, we're cheap, but creative.

To show that our intentions are below board, we held a secret meeting and voted to release a sample of secrets and suggested retail prices (a 10 percent discount applies if invoices are paid within 30 days):

- the locations of all three Berlin Brigade salt shakers; $10; (this isn't a Lot, but what do you want for $10?);
- which Cadillac Hank Williams is buried in on the Ku'Damm; $25;
- when the next Berlin Brigade run is; $50;
- who'll skip the next Berlin Brigade run; $150;
- how to instruct your guys (from that side of the Wall) to shoplift at the KaDeWe without getting caught all the time; $125;

■ who's at the other end of BM 6002; 75 cents;

■ a copy of Baron von Steuben's "My Last Years as a Shepherd;" $25;

■ why Ollie North didn't launder money at last year's Volksfest; call for special price; SOLD OUT!

■ what the number 25 is; $10;

■ the following facts about Berlin:

480 square kilometers

40 percent is water and woods

34 meters above sea level

554 total; $554; and

■ a translation of the following: "Since the AFD code will dictate the Work Center Code contained in the AMS code, the use of multiple AFD codes within a paragraph should be kept to a minimum. Civilian personnel reports require separate documentation for each AMS code, therefore, the number of different codes should be minimized by selecting AFD codes which generally describe function of all positions contained in a work center;" we'll pay you to make it go away;

■ how to read the new Truman Plaza parking sign without wrecking your car or creating a traffic jam; $100.

Observations

What should be done to service members who sell secrets to other nations?

SP4 Patrick Gainey, Signal Support Company: "Other nations provide maximum detention in prison facilities, whereas we don't have a severe enough penalty. We should look at the other nations in how they penalize their people who commit espionage."

Claudia Jordan, family member: "They should be stood in from of a wall and shot. I definitely feel that something more than just six years in prison should be done."

Oben Chain, civilian employee: "Depending on the nature of the secrets and so on, whether it's a bad enough situation, then it should certainly receive maximum punishment."

Capt. Scott Wilkerson, Headquarters and Service Company, Field Station Berlin: "The current laws should be enforced through the courts."

SFC James Revell, Signal Support Company: "I believe in the death penalty, and if the offense is serious enough, then that should be the punishment they receive."

Counselors field comments

Students with a problem or question about education may be neglecting an important channel of communication, according to command education officials.

Students and prospective students don't have to depend on the school representatives, officials pointed out, because the counselors and education services officers who man the command's education centers can also help express student's concerns or wants about any facet of education in Berlin. It's the counselors' main job to make education accessible to the community, and as part of that job they oversee the schools contracted to teach here.

The most recent addition to the counseling corps, Lopez Tatum, splits his attentions between the Clay Education Center and the U.S. Army Hospital, Berlin. Tatum brings an unusual and versatile background to his job. He was a pre-med student at the University of California, and graduated with a bachelor's degree in biology, then went on to complete a master's degree in educational psychology.

The avid volleyball player and sculptor encourages those he sees to discard any hesitations about pursuing educational goals.

"Don't be afraid to open new doors. The climb up the four flights of stairs at the Clay Ed Center is well worth it. You make the first steps, we can help you from there. Many opportunities are available," he added.

Education officials also announced that the Berlin Brigade Education Services Brochure for the 1987-88 academic year is out and is being distributed to all new soldiers in the city.

"This pamphlet is a very useful aid to those interested in pursuing any aspect of education," reported Joan Gusman, an education specialist here.

"It complies in a clear and concise form all the education programs and services available in Berlin and should be a helpful guide," she said.

The brochure is available at all command education centers.

Laundry, dry cleaning limits set

Service meets variety of needs, but cooperation necessary

The Supply and Services Division last week brought four points to light concerning the division's laundry and dry cleaning service. The points are:

- Overuse of the 24-hour laundry and dry cleaning service over the last three months has caused delays in the return of regular service laundry. S&S Division officials reminded customers that the 24-hour special service was designed to meet bonafide urgent cleaning requirements such as emergency leaves, permanent changes of station, temporary duties, short-notice military or social events and other extenuating circumstances. The service is limited to three items per day per family.

- Payroll deduction customers are limited by regulation to one bundle of 26 pieces per week. Those who abuse the service will have their bundles returned unprocessed, according to the division announcement. Customers should accurately reflect the contents of the bundle. Dry cleaning items can not be put in the payroll deduction bundles.

- Those with extra hangers can recycle them by bringing them to a laundry and dry cleaning pick-up point during business hours.

- The division also reminded unit supply sergeants that payroll deduction organizational laundry is usually clean within 72 hours after being dropped off at the plant, and should be picked up as soon as possible after it is cleaned. For information contact Mr. Hennig, BM 3518.

Open house features planes, shows

The U.S. Air Force's Open House will be 10 a.m.-6 p.m. Saturday and Sunday at Tempelhof Central Airport.

On display at the annual event will be old and new airplanes, including a Douglas C-47 on display for the first time at TCA. The main display will be items fitting the theme "From Balloon to Jet" and will include aircraft, models, gliders and hot-air balloons.

Also at TCA will be the German police motorcycle team, trampoline team and customs dogs which will perform.

A special military shuttle bus will also be running for the open house in addition to the regular B bus route. It will leave the Truman Plaza bus terminal every half hour both days 9 a.m.-6 p.m. with a last run at 7 p.m.

A bus will leave Eagle Square bus terminal at TCA every half hour both days 9:55 a.m.-6:25 p.m. with a last run at 7:05 p.m.

Entrance is free.

For security reasons, all hand carried items, such as purses and bags, will be checked by police at the entrance, and all visitors must pass through metal detectors.

A sign was recently installed to remind motorists of the three-hour parking limit in Truman Plaza's main parking lot which has been in effect more than a month. Command officials report few complaints and general compliance to the measure designed to eliminate parking problems.

Tax deadline has slack for soldiers

Overseas tax payers still have until June 15 to file a Federal tax return without incurring a late filing penalty. When taxpayers file their returns, they need only write on the margin that they were outside the United States on April 15.

If unable to file taxes by June 15, taxpayers may still get an extension until Aug. 17 from the Internal Revenue service. Taxpayers obtain this extension by filing a Form 4868 before June 15. Although the extension is automatically granted, any tax owed over the withheld amount must be included with the extension request.

All taxpayers are encouraged by IRS officials to file a new W-4 Withholding Certificate with their employers as soon as possible. Until a new W-4 Form is filed, tax is withheld based upon the old tax law, which contained many deductions and credits no longer available.

If too many allowances are being claimed, the employer may be withholding too little money to cover total tax liability. This may result in the unpleasant surprise of owing more tax next year, along with the addition of an IRS penalty if the withholding did not reach 80 percent of total tax liability.

In a move to reduce potential hardships caused by the new rules, the IRS has announced that the penalty for underwithholding in 1987 will be waived for those employees who have filed a W-4 form by June 1.

Berlin's waterways trace city's beginning

by Tom Blake
Historical columnist

Berlin, a city that grew up around fishing villages on the banks of the River Spree, has depended on waterways to transport goods and sustain its inhabitants for more than 750 years.

The twin settlements of Berlin and Kölln that formed the nucleus of modern Berlin were about 132 miles from the Baltic seaport of Swinemünde and nearly 200 miles, as a boat floats, from the Hanseatic ports of Bremerhaven and Lübeck on the North Sea coast. The original inhabitants of Berlin were unable to move freely between the rivers that lay along the route to the sea and portages made the journey long and difficult, between Spree and Havel, or between Havel and the Oder or the Elbe.

As early as the 15th century, however, the people of the Mark Brandenburg had begun to improve on the natural routes that existed between the major rivers. Canals of a rudimentary sort had been widened and deepened in the marshy channels that glaciers had gouged out of the earth thousands of years in the past, and flat-bottomed river craft were able to navigate considerable distances as a result.

By 1702, the Queen Sophie Charlotte was able to avail her royal self of a twice-daily horse-drawn service on barges along the Spree between the present downtown area of East Berlin and her country home at Lietzenburg (now Charlottenburg). Then in 1816 the burgeoning Prussian capital city inaugurated the first inland steam-powered boat service with the launching of the "Princess Charlotte," and by the year 1845 noted landscape architect Josef Peter Lenne had shortened the distance between the upper and lower reaches of the Spree by designing the route of the Landwehr Canal.

The project that really put Berlin on the map as a city of industrial waterways was the building of the Teltow Canal at the beginning of the 20th century. The rich countryside of the Mark Brandenburg had begun to produce a large variety of goods by the late 1890s and the independent cities of Spandau, Charlottenburg, Schöneberg, Wilmersdorf, Neukölln, Lichtenrade and Köpenick as well as the incorporated areas of Tempelhof and Steglitz all bordered on routes between the Spree and Havel that could benefit from a canal for transshipment of goods.

The canal was in large part to be the realization of the dream of the uncrowned king of the Teltow administrative district, the Landrat, Ernst von Stubenrauch. Ultimately completed at a cost of over 50 million gold marks, the canal included its own electric power system and a shipping company in addition to a harbor and warehouse complex at Tempelhof. The 38 mile long canal provided a direct link along the southern route between the Havel near Potsdam and the Wendish Spree (the Dahme) near Schönow. A system of locks raised and lowered barges almost three meters to compensate for the difference in the levels of the two rivers. The first shovelful of earth was turned by the German crown prince on Dec. 22, 1900 and the festive opening ceremonies took place on June 2, 1906.

The royal yacht "Alexandria" became the first ship to enter the new canal and the steamers "Wannsee" and "Steglitz" carried about 250 honored guests through the Griebnitzsee into the first lock at Machnow and then back again for a festive meal with the emperor's party. In 1921 the canal became a "Reichswasserstrasse" and by 1924 the Teltow Canal Corporation was formed to administer the business affairs. In 1939 the locks at Machnow, Schönow and Teltow were widened to accommodate three ships abreast.

Many of the bridges that spanned the canal were destroyed during WW II and the post-war agreements that divided Berlin into occupation sectors placed the Machnow Lock in the Soviet sector. These two factors complicated the logistics that would have put the canal back into service. The Berlin Blockade of 1948-1949 emphasized the importance of the canal by denying its use to the western sectors, but the 1971 Quadripartite Agreements have long since guaranteed free passage to all ships along its course.

Today all of the locks of the Teltow and the other canals in Berlin are administered by an agency of the East German government and traffic flows smoothly through the west. The Landwehr, Neuköllner, Teltow and Hohenzollern canals form a 126 kilometer network of waterways that serve 13 harbors and more than 90 private docks at site all over the western part of the city. Nearly one-third of the 13 million tons of goods that flow into Berlin every year are carried here by barges and the fraternity of inland sailors seems to provide a welcome model for good relations between east and west.

The green banks are restful to the eyes and the multitude of power plants, water treatment facilities and storage areas amid the industrial landscape are a sure sign of the continuing prosperity of this island of freedom.

After the Landwehr Canal was built in the mid-1800s the upper and lower reaches of the Spree were connected and both freight and passenger travel was eased.

Straight out of basic training—reading the SMART books. Reviewing the study guides given to them April 1, these 6th Battalion soldiers prepare for another of the 32 tasks.

Shooting for the expert badge

Training for the Expert Infantryman Badge has begun in Berlin, and for about 300 Berlin soldiers, it is the opportunity to show what they are made of.

In order to earn the coveted badge, they must volunteer, shoot expert with their M-16, and then be recommended by their commanders.

Planning began in March for the training, and the actual training began May 16 at three McNair Barracks locations. It will continue at McNair until June 10, when it will be moved to Keerans Range. On June 30, training for the EIB at Keerans will end, and from July 17-24, the testing will be held there.

"Each battalion has a training site, but the entire brigade is using each of the three sites. The three modules make up the entire test," according to SGM Robert Horton, G-3 Training.

"We're trying to get all the men through with all gos before the actual test. We want them as proficient as possible."

Horton explained that a soldier can get a no-go on two of the tasks and still earn the badge, as long as he passes a retest for both of them and gets no other no-gos.

"We gave all the men a study guide around the first of April, and in it, it explains exactly what all the standards are and what they have to do to get the EIB."

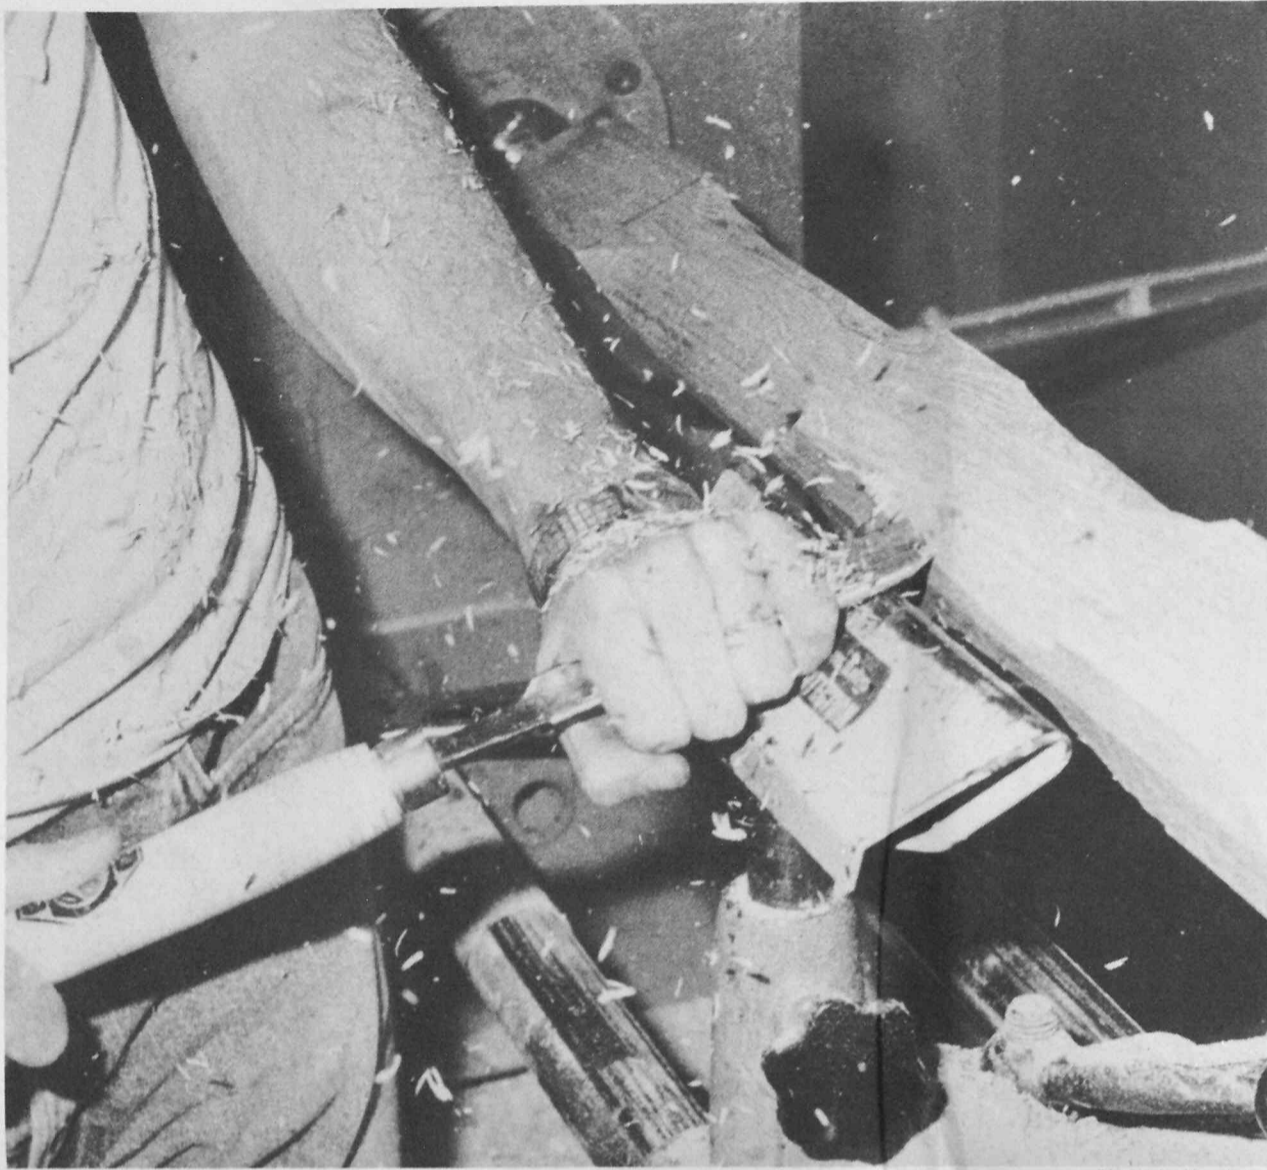

Horton said that some of the toughest parts of the EIB testing include the land navigation portion, the 12-mile road march and "anything where you have to follow a specific sequence of events, such as CPR."

Chipping away at creativity

by Ken Jones
Troop writer

So you have some time to kill. Don't feel like exercising, there's nothing on the tube, and Harry next door is still on leave.

You want to do something. Something creative for a change. Remember those shelves you made in your high school wood shop? Yeah, those were nice. Dad hung them up in the living room and Mom put some of her little knick-knacks on them. Still have the touch? One way to find out is to check out the Andrews Wood Shop.

Established in the early 1970s, Andrews Wood Shop offers classes on everything from guitar making to stained glass courses. You can go in and build a spice rack or a mammoth oak dining room table. Or, if doing the measuring, cutting and sanding doesn't appeal to you, but you would still like something made, go in and talk to them, chances are they can make it for you.

For the handyman who would like to do the work himself, there is a mandatory $10 safety course held Fridays from 4-6 p.m. After that, the only expenses are $1 each day in the shop and the cost of wood and other materials.

The wood shop is part of the Community Recreation Division and is run with both appropriated and non-appropriated funds. According to Wood Shop Manager Gary Hall, it could be a very prosperous place.

"We could make thousands of dollars, but that would negate our purpose. We'd have to throw out our patrons."

The Wood Shop exists for its patrons, so it would make no sense to do that. "A good bunch of people work in here. Sort of the upper strata (of people)," Hall said. Approximately 30 different people work in the shop in the course of a week, and many of them go in more than once.

"We have people who come in here every day we're open — our repeat offenders," Hall said. "It slows down when it's cold, because people don't want to come in."

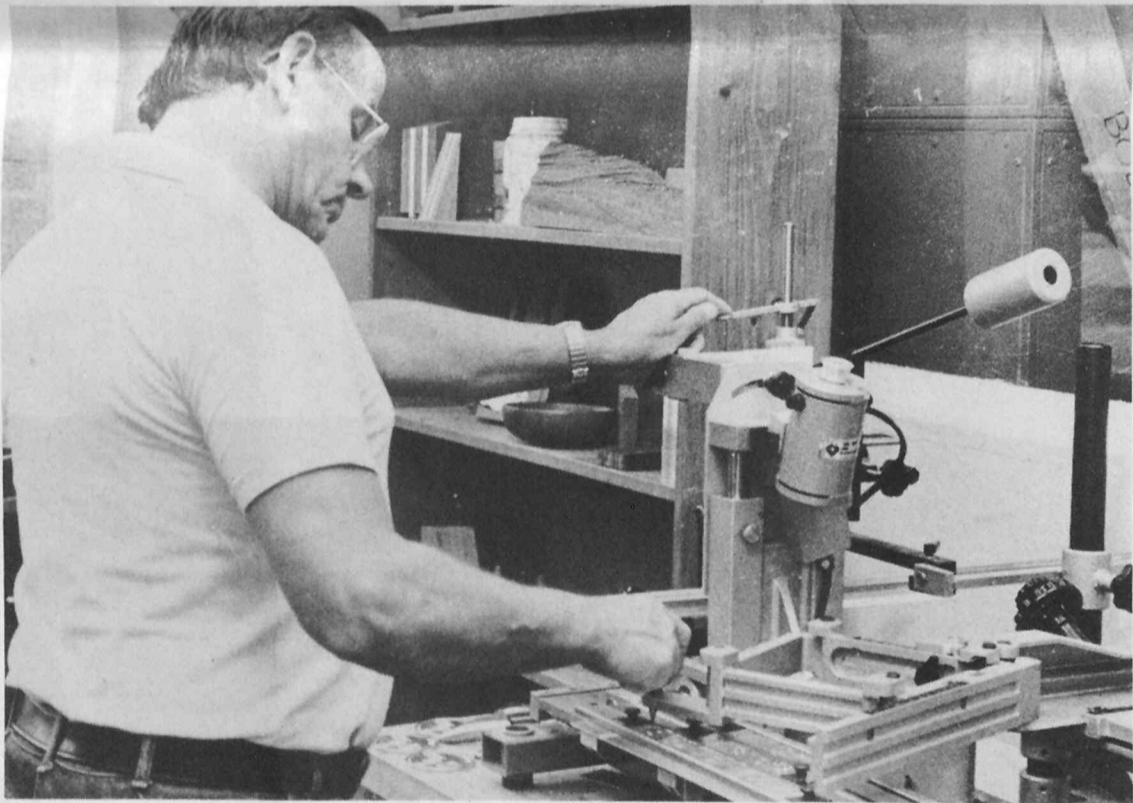

For the average project, the cost of wood and other materials will probably run around $60-$70. "Our average sale is $25, and you usually have to buy three times for a project," Hall said.

"This is one of the finest wood shops I've ever seen," SFC Ron Solmonson, C Company, Field Station Berlin said. "It's as well equipped and run as any I've ever been to. The staff is very helpful, and cheery, as well," Solmonson said.

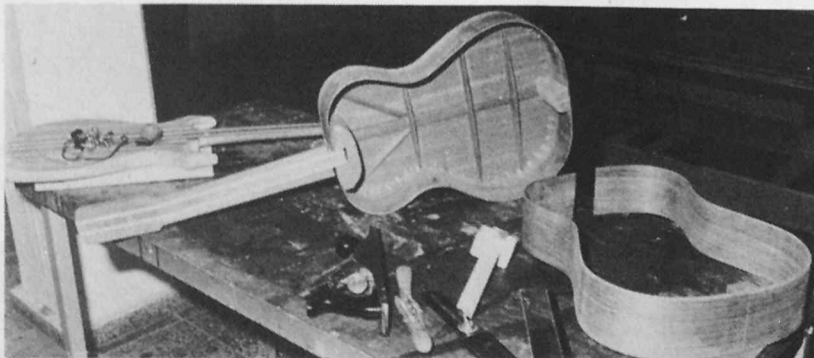

The wood shop stocks many different types of wood in their store room, and they have access to many other types as well. They have all of the standard woods such as pine, oak and maple, and can get such exotic woods as Samba from India, Teak from Malaysia, Utile Mahogany from Indonesia, Shedua from Africa and Lime Wood from South America. They also carry hardwood plywoods, particle woods, and exotic veneers such as Black Cherry, Pear, Teak and Rosewood.

The wood shop offers built-to-order shelves, cabinets and furniture, as well as a complete engraving service. The Athletic and Sports Training Branch uses the engraver for all of the sports awards, and expects to save DM 18,000 a year on the engraving of lettering alone.

The wood shop is open 1-10 p.m. on Mondays and Thursdays, and from 10 a.m. to 7 p.m. on Fridays, Saturdays and Sundays. It's located just below the library in building 906 on Andrews Barracks.

Dieter Werner, supply clerk from the Athletic and Sports Training Branch, engraves events on medals for the upcoming track meet.

Of the many classes the wood shop offers, guitar making is one of the newest.

'Turnfest' draws 120,000 to starting gun

by Helga Haftendorn
Cultural events editor

The biggest sports happening during Berlin's 750th anniversary is the "Deutsche Turnfest." It begins on Sunday and lasts until June 7. Almost 120,000 athletes, male and female, from the Federal Republic and many international athletic clubs will meet in Berlin for their 27th German Athlete Fest.

Athletes not only come to Berlin to participate in Berlin's 750th anniversary celebrations, but to engage in all the sports activities. On Sunday, the Turnfest will officially be opened at the Olympic Stadium by the President of the FRG Richard von Weizsäcker. After this opening ceremony, athletes will be presenting their tournaments daily until June 7 in all halls of the Funkturm Exhibition Grounds, at the ICC Berlin, at the Deutschlandhalle, Eissporthalle, Waldbühne, on the sports fields of Mommsen Stadium at Eichkamp, and Maifeld at the Olympic Stadium. The final day of these sports activities will be June 7, when all guests will meet again and join in a festive parade going on between Theodor-Heuss-Platz, Ernst-Reuter-Platz and the Olympic Stadium.

A booklet with detailed information on the athlete fest will be available from 1 p.m. Saturday. It costs DM 5 and can be purchased daily at Messehalle 1 of the Funkturm Exhibition Grounds, at the organization committee stand of the Deutschen Turnfest.

The daily tournaments begin at about 10 a.m. and run all day. They can be watched free of charge at all the "Messehallen," except for a few presentations, for which tickets will be needed.

To get to the Messehallen, take the U-Bahn to Theodor-Heuss-Platz, or Kaiserdamm. You can also use buses 4, 10, 65, 69 or 94.

Turkish Fest

In addition to all the district fests going on, the Turkish community in Berlin will also join in the 750th anniversary celebrations as they offer a program entitled "Mozaik — Turkish Culture in Berlin," and begin with a jazz concert, held June 5 at the Studio of the Akademie der Künste. Curtain time for the jazz performance is 8 p.m. The program is entitled "Oriental Dreams" and will be presented by jazz singer Özay and her band.

Tickets are DM 12 and can be purchased at the door, or in advance at any downtown ticket agency.

A real speciality of "Mozaik's" program will be the "Dancing of the Dervishes," a cultural rarity not shown very often. Four performances are on the program, two at the Philharmonie, 11 a.m. June 7 and 3 p.m. June 8. Tickets to these two performances cost DM 25 and DM 40. The Tempodrom will be the site of the last two performances of the Dervishes, presented June 16 and 19. Curtain time on both nights is 7:30 p.m. and tickets are DM 25 on all seats. You can buy them at the door, or in advance at any downtown ticket agency.

If you want to learn about Turkish people in Berlin and scenes from their lives with paintings and sculpture there will be two exhibitions at the Akademie der Künste opening their doors at Saal 2 and Saal 3. Both exhibitions begin June 10 and run until July 26. The daily hours are from 10 a.m. until 7 p.m., Monday from 2 p.m. There is no admission charge. To get to the Akademie, use the U-Bahn to Hansaplatz, or bus 16 or 23.

Bantu Music and Dances

A Festival of Traditional Music '87 — Bantu, will begin here on Tuesday, running until June 17. During this period, dancers, singers and instrumentalists will be presenting their music and dances at the Studio of the Akademie der Künste.

"Mask Dances" are on the program on Tuesday and Wednesday. These dances will be presented by the Bateke and Bapuno Ensemble, Libreville, and curtain time is 8 p.m. on both nights.

June 6 and 7, "Traditional Dances and Drum Music" will be on the program, presented by the Lusaka and Livingstone Ensembles at 8 p.m. on both days, with an additional matinee for children on 3 p.m. June 7.

June 9 and 10 will bring "Wedding Dances" with Amadinda and Budongo Music to the Akademie. Performances begin at 8 p.m.

On June 13 and 14 you can listen to Ngoma and Mheme Music and watch the Wagogo Ensemble, Nzali, performing at 8 p.m. There will be an additional performance 3 p.m. June 13 for children.

The last two performances of the festival will be presented 8 p.m. June 15 and 17, when the big Xylophone Ensemble, Maputo will play.

Admission is DM 12 for adults, children pay DM 5. You can buy your tickets in advance at the Akademie's ticket booth daily from 4 to 7 p.m., or purchase them at any downtown ticket agency.

To get to the Akademie, take bus 16 or 23. You can also use the U-Bahn to Hansaplatz.

Circus is coming

Circus Roncalli will be here from Thursday until June 28, presenting a gala premiere on the first night of their performance. The circus will set up its tent in the Tiergarten area, on the site between the National Gallery and Philharmonic Concert Hall.

Because of the circus successful guest performances in Cologne, Düsseldorf, Frankfurt and before the spoiled Moscow audience in 1986, Circus Director Bernhard Paul decided to present this program also to his Berlin public.

On the circus program are top shows of previous years plus new, attractive and unusual numbers. There will be Pic, the Pantomime, René Strickler with the biggest wild animal group in the world, consisting of tigers, lions, pumas, panthers and polar bears, all in one show. Enjoy the classical clown trio with Cervantes, Angelo and Director Paul as Zippo, so well liked by the public. See the "Suns" with their Chinese acrobatics, or "Alvarez," the juggler of old Spanish circus tradition. Don't miss Susanna Lind, the ballerina on horseback, or the "Svensons" with their "Pas de Deux" and many other attractions like Angelo Ballan with his unicycle.

Roncalli's performances are daily at 3 and 8 p.m., except Monday and Tuesday, when there will be only the 8 p.m. show. From Tuesday, you can reserve your ticket by calling the "Circuskasse" daily from 9 a.m. at 261-9211. The ticket price ranges from DM 9.50 to DM 44.

To get to the circus, take bus 24, 29, 48 or 83.

Late shopping

Good news for all who cannot shop during the week's regular shopping hours: a year-round late Friday night shopping is under discussion.

Chairman of the "Arbeitsgemeinschaft City," Hans-Ulrich Bannert demanded that not only during the season shops should remain open until 9 p.m. on Fridays. Last year, this special arrangement was valid for 12 so-called "long" Fridays during the summer.

Today will be the first Friday this season when downtown shops will remain open for late shopping until 9 p.m. This arrangement will continue until September.

Upcoming concerts

There are still tickets available for David Bowie's "Concert for Berlin." This is a three-day concert, held on Platz der Republik, Juni 6, 7, 8 at 4 p.m. Admission to all three concerts is DM 50.

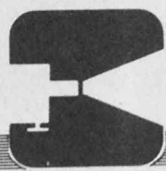

June 9—Paco De Lucia and John McLaughlin will be performing at the Philharmonie. Curtain rises at 8 p.m. and tickets are DM 20-38.

June 25—Chris De Burgh/Joe Cocker will be presented by RIAS 2 at the Waldbühne at 5 p.m. Your ticket costs DM 39 on all seats.

July 3—Konstantin Wecker and Band is coming to the Tempodrom at 8 p.m. Tickets are DM 26 on all seats.

July 4—Music From USA with George Benson and Miles Davis can be enjoyed at the Waldbühne from 6:30 p.m. Tickets are DM 20.

You can buy your ticket to above performances at any downtown ticket agency, also check with ITT.

Three sailors wrap up the sail of a rental sailboat after a day of working the breezes on the Wannsee.

Sail on

Outdoor center prepares for rush on waves

The U.S. Army Outdoor Recreation Center on the Wannsee Harbor has much to offer and is already experiencing busy weekend traffic now that the warmer weather has arrived in Berlin.

For those people with free time on their hands, a variety of equipment is available for rent at the ORC.

Paddleboats, boats powered by foot pedaling power, are a fun way to cover the harbor. Two people are needed for this type of boat. Rowboats and motorboats are also available.

For the experienced sailor who wants to try his hand at Berlin's breezes, small sailboats can be rented.

The ORC also has a small assortment of fishing tackle for the angler who is looking for a little local fishing, from the dock or one of the boats.

There is an outdoor sunning area with a swimming pool, a picnic area complete with several barbecue grills and thick green grass for laying out a towel and tanning.

Water skiing is allowed in the harbor Tuesday through Friday and the season typically begins in June and ends in August.

A new party tour boat has arrived and can be rented, complete with captain, by the hour and will carry 42 people around the harbor. Reservations are needed for this boat.

Because of the busy weekends, ORC officials suggest for visitors to use public transportation, the buses or S-Bahn or to even ride a bicycle to the harbor.

Health care meeting

The Health Care Consumer meeting will be held 3 p.m. June 4 in the U.S. Army, Berlin commander's conference room.

Those with suggestions or comments about the hospital medical care may submit their comments through unit representatives or present them directly to the committee at the meeting.

Summer preschool program

The Children's Center still has openings for the eight-week summer part day preschool session. Dates are June 15 thru Aug. 7. Bus transportation will be provided. Eligible age is 2 years, 9 months by June 15 through children entering kindergarten in the fall.

If a child has had no preschool experience this is an opportunity to adjust to a group situation before starting kindergarten.

"For those who have been in the preschool program, the summer session will continue to foster the child's social, emotional, physical and cognitive development. Many trips, walking excursions, and special summer activities are planned," according to Child Development Services Coordinator Tedi Siminowsky.

Cost is approximately $43/month for a three-day session.

Vehicle registration closes

The Vehicle Registration Office will be closed June 8 and 17 because of German holidays.

A batter strikes out in the women's 1987 preseason softball tournament held Saturday and Sunday at the McNair sports fields. The Field Station Berlin team walked away with the championship by dominating the winners bracket and burning the losers bracket champions Lady Luck 11-3 in the final game.

Yzaguirre captures All-Army

Berlin Brigade racquetball champion Jackie Yzaguirre returned from the United States with two more titles to add on to the long list of racquetball wins she has accumulated in her career.

Yzaguirre is the winner of the women's open division of the All-Army racquetball trials held in April at Fort Benjamin Harrison, Ind. and picked up a second place in the Inner Service championships held in May in Norfolk, Va.

More than 100 racquetballers competed in the All-Army trials for eight days of a double-elimination tournament. Players involved were the best U.S. Army, Europe and U.S. commands had to offer, competitors earning their ways through local tourneys.

It was Yzaguirre's fourth trip to the All-Army trials and she was top seeded into the event. She played against familiar people and some new players.

"I went undefeated. There was some tough competition but they made me look good. They gave it to me," Yzaguirre said of the trials.

After the trials, 12 top players were chosen from the various age and sex divisions to train and compete for the Inner Service championship.

The players trained five hours a day for four days then travelled to Norfolk where they were able to train for only three days before competing against the best wall slammers in the military.

Yzaguirre has competed in the Inner Service since 1984 and Barbara Faulkenberry of the Air Force has given her stiff competition for the top title. Faulkenberry was this year's winner.

Faulkenberry wasn't able to play because of injuries in 1984 and Yzaguirre took the gold that year. Faulkenberry was knocked out early in the 1985 contest and Yzaguirre won that title.

Faulkenberry took first place in the 1986 championships leaving Yzaguirre the second place and this year was a repeat of the 1986 finish, though Yzaguirre started off with a big win.

Yzaguirre sent Faulkenberry to the losers bracket in the first match.

"She was playing good but not up to her standard. I won the match 15-3 and 15-4 but the rallies were so long that the first game lasted one hour and 10 minutes," Yzaguirre said.

"Everyone in the winners bracket was a hard and good player," she added. Yzaguirre finished up the winners bracket and found she had to play Faulkenberry again who had worked her way out of the losers series.

Yzaguirre won the first game of the match 15-13. Faulkenberry took the second game 15-14 to set up the tie breaking game. Faulkenberry won that game 11-9. The final match went 15-13, 15-12 for Faulkenberry.

"I played really well with her. I never dive, but in these games I dove. She was great.

"She said she needs to work on her serve and that she wanted a lower serve. She didn't ace me in any of the games," Yzaguirre added.

Yzaguirre also played in a double racquetball event with Army partner Patricia Saunders. The two went all the way through the winners bracket and lost in an 11-8 tie breaker to the Air Force.

The Navy hosted the Inner Service championships this year and next year the Army will host the contest at Fort Benjamin Harrison.

"I was really happy about how I played this year and want to thank all of the people in Berlin for supporting me.

"I was proud to represent Berlin and the Army in the event," Yzaguirre added.

Bavarian golf tours offer travel

AFRC—Golf enthusiasts with an itch for testing their versatility on four of the courses in the Alps will find their challenge this summer through the Armed Forces Recreation Center's "Golf Bavaria" program.

Golf Bavaria is a tour program designed for intermediate through advanced golfers to play 18 holes at Bavarian courses near Beuerberg, Feldafing and Garmisch, as well as the rugged Alpine course at Seefeld, Austria.

The four-day program costs $125 and includes an AFRC instructor/guide, green fees and transportation without structured golf instruction. After a clinic on the first morning, an AFRC pro will guide the day's tour and rotate among the participants. Minimum age is 14 years and participants must have an established handicap of 30 or less. Tour action has already begun and ends Sept. 24.

Novices or experienced golfers who need more exposure to the sport before tackling a four-day tour like Golf Bavaria, AFRC also offers a golf week. The five-day program is revised to give it special appeal for intermediate-advanced golfers.

Golf weeks start at $149 and include instruction, use of driving range and nine-hole course, welcome cookout, swim party, awards cookout and mementos. A special golf week package is also available for $250. This package includes all golf week activities plus six nights in an AFRC hotel, six breakfasts and four dinners.

Golf weeks begin May 3 and end Sept. 25. In addition to weekly activities, AFRC also offers private, semi-private and group lesson with a minimum age 16 years or 12 years if accompanied by an adult sponsor. Special clinics are available on request. Golf carts, clubs and other rental equipment are available on a daily basis.

For details or reservations for AFRC Golf Week or Golf Bavaria, contact the AFRC Central Reservations Office at ETS 440-2575; local charge 0130-27772; or civilian 08821-75710. APO 09053.

Mackerel fishing programs slated

Dates for the 1987 U.S. Forces mackerel fishing program in Holland and the shrimp fishing program in Greetsiel have been announced by officials of the U.S. Army Europe community and family support directorate in Schwetzingen.

Scheduled dates for the mackerel fishing are June 20, 21; July 3, 4; July 4, 5; Aug. 1-3 and Sept. 6-8. The shrimp fishing trip is planned for Oct. 17 and 18.

Cost for the mackerel fishing trips is $99 per person, which includes transportation, one overnight stay in hotel, breakfast, lunch sack and one dinner as well as use of fishing gear and all the fish one can catch, according to Sigi Adams, who organizes the trips for the Association of American Rod and Gun Clubs, Europe.

The shrimp fishing trip costs $99 per person and includes transportation, one overnight at a hotel, buffet supper on arrival, breakfast, one dinner and all the shrimp one can catch.

Those interested in signing up for one of the trips should contact Adams in room 313, building 4242, Tompkins Barracks, Schwetzingen, or call 379-6293 or 7737.

A B Co. player tries to beat the H and S tag at second base in the one-pitch slowpitch softball tournament Monday.

FSB crew wins one-pitch title

B Co. FSB wins Memorial Day one pitch softball tournament

The B Company, Field Station Berlin squad made away with the company level one pitch softball tournament by beating the Headquarters and Service Company, Combat Support Battalion team 5-2 Monday at the McNair sports field.

Twenty-nine teams played in the single elimination tournament which had action going on at both the Andrews and McNair sports fields beginning 8 a.m. and ending about 5 p.m. Monday.

The rules and regulations of the one pitch tourney are what kept the games going at such a high pace and enabled many games—29 in all—to be played in one day.

When a batter stepped up to the plate, that player already had a call of three balls and two strikes against him. The one pitch decided the batter's fate.

Most players in the tournament agreed there is a better chance getting on base by swinging at the ball than by letting it go. Some players were given a walk but others were struck out with one pitch by not swinging.

"Even if it looks close, you have to swing at it. You never know what the ump is going to call," one player said.

All games were limited to 45 minutes unless there was a tie. Also a 10 run rule went into effect after five innings, so if one team was up 10 runs after five innings that team won.

The 42nd Engineers team was deprived a chance for their fourth straight company level sports win by losing 3-2 to B Co. FSB. The H and S, CSB team put down the Medical Activity team 11-2 in their game. These two games decided the teams to meet in the championship game.

No commanders cup points were awarded in the tournament.

New sports award offered

Washington (ARNEWS)—"Sport is clearly one of the happier inventions of the human mind: one can think of few activities that yield so much pleasure and so many benefits."

So begins President Ronald Reagan's message about the Presidential Sports Award Program, which is sponsored by his council on physical fitness and sports.

Open to all Americans aged 15 years and older, the program gets its impetus from the premise that, "a strong, vital America depends on physically fit Americans." It consists of 43 qualifying sports, ranging from archery and back-packing to figure skating and weight training. Participants select one or more sports and keep a personal fitness log to meet the qualifying standards for each selection, thus earning the award. For example, to earn the award for running, the runner must—

- run a minimum of 200 miles;

- run continuously for at least three miles during each outing. No more than five miles in any one day may be credited to the total (longer runs are not discouraged, but miles counted toward 200-mile total must be spread over at least 40 outings); and

- have an average time of nine minutes or less per mile (27 minutes for three miles, 45 minutes for five miles, etc.).

This award itself consists of a personalized presidential certificate, a congratulatory letter from Council Chairman George Allen, and an embroidered emblem signifying the sport in which the award was earned.

"May, being National Fitness and Sports Month," said Maj. Dick Hayford in the Army's office of the deputy chief of staff for operations and plans, "presents an opportune time for Army people to join in the program."

Hayford, who coordinates physical fitness training with the center, the Army staff and the major army commands, views the presidential awards program as, "especially valuable to soldiers in the reserve components—because it offers them a formal means for achieving the same kind of fitness regularity that's available to their active component counterparts."

For more information on the program—such as a full listing of the 43 sports, application forms and log sheets—write to the Presidential Sports Award, AAU House, PO Box 68207, Indianapolis, Ind 46268.

British host gala royal couple visit

Queen Elizabeth II and the Duke of Edinburgh completed their third visit to Berlin Wednesday after a precedent-setting overnight stay at the British commandant's residence, Villa Lemm. Their arrival Tuesday afternoon at Gatow Airport started a series of colorful displays of protocol and pageantry that included gala receptions, parades, banquets and public appearances to celebrate the sovereign's birthday and the 750th anniversary of Berlin.

The royal couple was, of course, the center of attention at the Queen's Birthday Parade on the Maifeld at the Olympic Stadium. Elements of the "Glorious Glosters," the King's Own Scottish Borderers, the Black Watch and the 14th/20th King's Hussars represented the British garrison in Berlin as well as a number of other units and visiting bands who took part in the traditional trooping of the colors.

The Queen's Birthday Parade is held every year in every location around the world where British soldiers are stationed, but Her Majesty's personal presence is an especially high honor. The U.S. Commander, Berlin, Maj. Gen. John H. Mitchell and his wife were among the dignitaries who participated in most of the festivities during the royal visit.

Returning status decides vacation suitcase contents

USEUCOM Executive Agency—Those planning on taking stateside leave this summer will be faced with the decision of what status to claim when clearing customs: returning resident or a nonresident. The difference between these two forms of residency status lies in the exemptions granted to each.

■ Returning resident exemption — returning residents are required to pay import duties or internal revenue taxes on all foreign made articles brought into the U.S.

People receive an exemption from duty and internal revenue tax on the first $400 worth of all personal effects and household goods of foreign manufacture obtained abroad and brought back to the U.S. to include 100 cigars (none of which may be Cuban) and 200 cigarettes in this exemption. All of these items may be given as bona fide gifts. Remember, U.S. manufactured items are not subject to the payment of duty.

Those 21 or older may include 1 liter of alcohol if it is for personal use or as a gift.

Those exceeding the above exemptions, will be subject to duty and internal revenue tax.

■ Nonresident exemption — all personal effects carried back to the U.S. are exempt from the payment of duty as long as these items are for personal use in the U.S. and will be exported when leaving. Adults may bring in 1 liter of alcohol for their own personal use while staying in the U.S. (age requirements are determined by the state.)

Up to $100 in gifts may be brought into the U.S. by nonresidents duty free.

Also included in the exemptions are 200 cigarettes, or 50 cigars or 2 kilograms of smoking tobacco for personal consumption.

Which exception is best?

First look at what exceptions are available, and what is going back to the U.S. If a person is planning to take several foreign manufactured $300 suits to wear in the U.S., the nonresident may be best, as personal effects are duty free.
