Perversity a key to Army

If a soldier gripes, he's really bragging, so call him names

by Joe Ferrare
Editor

*We, the unwilling,
Led by the unknowing,
Have done so much
For so long
With so little
That we are now qualified
To do the impossible
With nothing.*

The above anonymous statement and the feeling behind it goes a long way toward explaining people in the Army to those who might have a hard time understanding us.

Soldiers, as the old saying goes, aren't happy until they're complaining. The why of it has never been explained, but I think it's fairly obvious if you think about it: soldiers are perverse devils who revel in adversity.

Simple enough, right?

The Army is a place where the toughest leaders are the most respected and those with the highest standards are the people everyone wants to work for. That doesn't make either category exempt from the wrath of those same soldiers. In fact, it opens them up to even more gripes, moaning and howling at the moon, because in the Army being a tough, unforgiving *(&%$B'ø£! is almost as high praise as being crazy, nuts or not giving a you-know-what about anything.

This is all perfectly clear, isn't it?

The underlying reason for all this is that deep down soldiers know that any achievement is all the better if it's done to the highest standards under the most unreasonable conditions with the most unforgiving leader. And the best way to let people know about how tough it actually was—and by the same logic how tough the soldier was for getting it done anyway—is to complain about every little detail. Bragging would be more straightforward, but nobody likes a bragger.

Some leader somewhere figured this out and came up with the "it's another opportunity to excel" saying. Wrong answer. Soldiers don't want to say they're excelling and they don't want anybody else saying it, either. They want to say they're putting up with this crap until Friday, when they can go downtown and get stinking, roaring, throwing-up drunk.

But they want to say it in such a way that everyone understands they are really excelling. And while they don't want anybody else saying they're excelling, they do want to hear things like "you maggots somehow dragged your pitiful behinds through this thing by the skin of your yellow teeth, but managed to hoodwink the evaluators into thinking you did the best job ever. Who paid those guys off and why didn't I get my cut?"

Soldiers, you see, are basically genteel souls far too shy to accept straightforward praise. It'd embarrass them to death, and ruin their reputations.

Why ruin their reputations? That goes back to the high praise of being crazy for not giving a rodent's posterior about anything. Among soldiers the best kind of leader is the leader who'll put his OER or EER on the line for them if need be. The worst kind is the guy who'll sell his men down the river to keep his rater happy. It's the basic difference between doing it right and doing it wrong, though soldiers will have more colorful terms for it.

So it follows that any leader who can look his boss in the eye and say "I'm sorry sir, but you're wrong and here's why..." will earn a lot of respect—if not a lot of promotions.

There's a line there, however. A little toe-stepping is OK, and so is the strategic ignoring of the occasional dumb order or rule. But you can only go so far and keep their respect.

That's why I love being a sergeant. All sergeants have to do is walk the tightrope between obedience and doing the right thing with the officers who hold careers in their hands, and another tightrope with the soldiers who have counter demands that pull NCOs in the opposite direction. And both have the highest standards they can come up with.

Isn't it a great day to be a soldier?

Observations

How do you rate Lt. Col. Oliver North's performance before Congress?

SP4 Charles Freeman, C Company, 4th Battalion: "I think he's very courageous, doing a good job and I believe he's telling the truth."

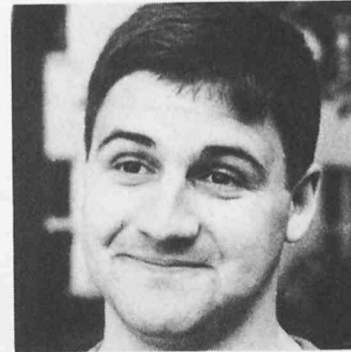

Jeanie Jaynes, family member: "He's doing good, making himself look good. I think he's covering up things, but not anything he should be put in jail for."

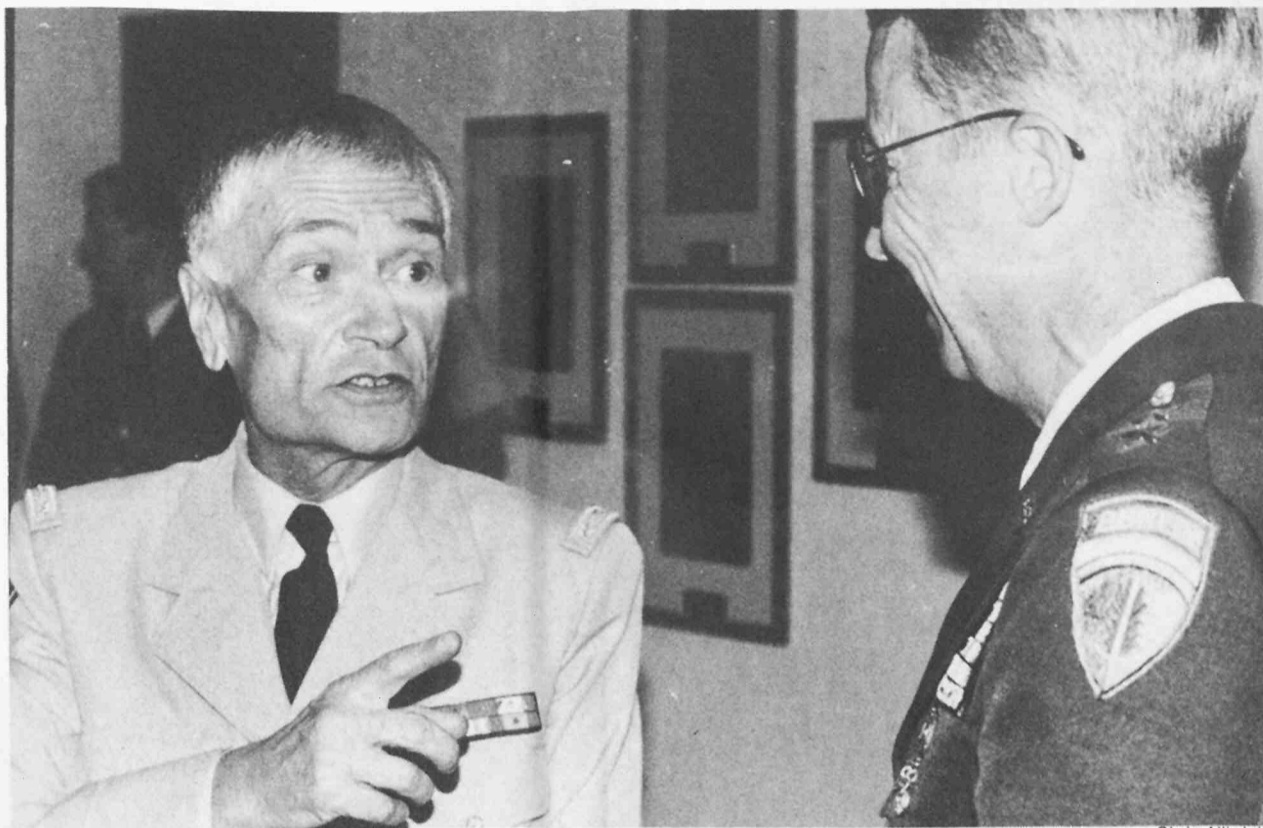

SSgt. Stanley Walters, 287th MP Company: "I like him and I think he was right in what he did. I believe what he is saying."

Lt. Col. Timothy Hobbs, Dental Activity: "I think he's doing a very good job. I think the situation with North is that he's saying as much as he can, without incriminating himself. He was given a job, now the people that gave him the job are not backing him up and he's trying to keep them out of trouble, as well as himself."

SP4 Jacques LaFlamm, Signal Support Company: "I'm all for him, and I think he knows what he's talking about. He has a right to protect our security, if he's protecting anything at all. There are a lot of things people just can't say."

Outgoing French Commander of Berlin, Maj. Gen. Paul Cavarot, is greeted Wednesday by American Commander of Berlin, Maj. Gen. John Mitchell, at Clay Headquarters. Cavarot, who was welcomed by a combined Army-Air Force honor guard, was there to say formal goodbyes to command officials. The new French commander will be Maj. Gen. Francois Cann.

4 bonuses added; 11 series upped

Washington (ARNEWS)—Selective Re-enlistment Bonuses increased in eight of the Army's military occupational specialties while another four specialties were added to the program July 3. No MOS multipliers were decreased, and no specialty was deleted from the program.

The four additional specialties include 11H (Heavy Anti-Armor Weapons Infantryman); 16S (Manpads Crewman); 24C (Improved Hawk Firing Section Mechanic); and 82B (Construction Surveyor).

Specialties with multipliers increasing include 11B (Infantryman); 11C (Indirect Fire Infantryman); 11C with "G" or "V" skill identifiers; 11H with "G" or "V" skill identifiers; 12B (Combat Engineer) with "G" or "V" skill identifiers; 18B (Special Operations Weapons Sergeant); 18C (Special Operations Engineer Sergeant); and 63Y (Track Vehicle Mechanic).

According to Maj. Allen Deutsch, of the Army personnel chief's office at the Pentagon, these changes should remain in effect until the end of September.

Marsh restates sexual harassment policy

Officials: cases few here;
command chain is key

by Chris Allbright
Community writer

For one little favor, a sexual one, the soldier would be guaranteed a 125 Enlisted Evaluation Report, according to the soldier's supervisor.

"If you refuse me, what can I say, you're only a 100 EER soldier," the supervisor says.

This is a blatant example of sexual harassment, according to Equal Opportunity Advisor, MSgt. William D. Jackson.

Berlin's Equal Opportunity Staff Office hasn't received such complaints of sexual harassment, but because of Secretary of the Army, John O. Marsh's directive, they are constantly educating those in the command about how to identify it and what to do about it.

Strong leaders needed

"Recent trends of increased sex discrimination and sexual harassment indicate a need for stronger leadership in eliminating this unacceptable behavior," Marsh said.

One of the reasons the EO here office receives few complaints is that problems are dealt with at the lowest level possible.

"What I think is happening, is that cases are probably handled through the chain of command, and disciplinary action is taken before it gets up here. That's the way it should be handled," Jackson said.

"If the chain of command is able to handle the complaint, then we normally don't hear about it. We don't make it a policy of witch hunting either," Jackson said.

"Forms of sexual harassment include sexual slurs, comments or jokes thrown around the work place," Jackson said.

Primary channel

"The chain of command, whether military or civilian, is the primary channel for correcting discriminatory practices," Jackson said.

Complaints can be filed with the military EO office, Management Relations Branch of Civilian Personnel, Equal Employment Office or the Inspector General.

Those complaints reaching the equal opportunity office are informally looked into with results and recommendations given to command officials.

If a formal investigation is warranted, an investigator is appointed who takes sworn statements and then writes up findings to report back to the community commander. Action is taken based on those findings.

"On a day-to-day basis, male soldiers are going to come into contact with female soldiers, civilian employees or family members. But it's not just on duty, it's anytime.

"The important thing here is that the one being offended not let it go on. If the one being offended sits there and says nothing, nobody thinks any differently. Everyone thinks it's OK. But when the point is brought up that it is offensive to someone, that's when something has to be done about it," Jackson said.

"And that's a big problem for some females, because they are reticent to confront the individual making the sexual joke or sexual remark to say, 'Hey, look, I don't appreciate what you're saying and I consider it offensive, so knock it off,'" SFC Richard Watts, an EO advisor, said.

Affects the mission

Besides affecting people on a personal level, harassment also hurts the Army mission, according to Marsh.

"Sexual harassment is a violation of the high standards of honesty, integrity and organizational values necessary for carrying out the Army mission," Marsh said.

Army regulation 600-21 defines sexual harassment as: "behavior of a sexual nature attempting to control, influence or affect the career, pay or job of a soldier or civilian employee . . . deliberate or repeated verbal gestures of a nature that are offensive to the person to whom addressed . . . abusive physical contact as of a sexual nature."

EO roles

Getting the word out about sexual discrimination and harassment is one of the roles that the EO office plays.

"Every soldier who comes in gets an orientation about sexual harassment and fraternization policies through the School of Standards," Jackson said.

"Commanders throughout the command set down their policies and guidelines and it is a requirement for every soldier to be briefed by the commander or chain of command on what the policies are."

The EO advisors also present briefings to units which request it throughout the year, and are located in room 1071, building 1, Clay Headquarters for inquiries.

Wives get battle sight on hubby's roles

by Jesus Cuaresma
4th Bn. stringer

The 4th Battalion sponsored a Family Day at Doughboy City Tuesday so the families of 4th Bn. soldiers could see what their husbands and fathers do.

At 9:30 a.m., the families met at McNair's Coliseum Theatre to be briefed on what was to happen at Parks Range. When the briefing was over, they loaded up the buses and headed out to Doughboy City.

Once there, they were divided into three groups and escorted by a non-commissioned officer guide who explained the jobs of every soldier and his firing position.

The family members got a chance to see the Battalion Tactical Operations Center, the Administration and Logistics Operation Center and the Communication Center.

Following the tour, they were treated to a soldier favorite—the Meal, Ready-to-Eat lunch. After lunch, they were given a briefing on Doughboy City. During the briefing, a squad from Combat Support Company, 4th Bn. demonstrated air assault from a helicopter onto the top of a building, and another group rappelled down the side of a five story building.

When the family members had gathered inside of the Rathaus, the battle began. Two platoons from A Company, 4th Bn. moved into Doughboy II to assault and clear the buildings held by the "enemy," another platoon of A Co.

During the battle, Battalion Commander Lt. Col. Lawrence White explained what was happening in the city around them. The battle included the use of flares, grenade simulators, smoke grenades and machine/M-16 fire.

The family members were given the opportunity to

Graduates add high school to personal honors

by Wendy Grossman
Education stringer

"How many of you here in the audience can clearly remember your high school graduation," asked Acting Vice President of Big Bend Community College, John Selman, in his closing remarks at last Wednesday's high school graduation ceremony at Clay Headquarters.

"My memories are quite vague," he acknowledged. "Not because they belong to a course in ancient history, but because I, like many American high school students, took my graduation for granted. Because of the extra effort and commitment you've made to return to school, while carrying additional military and family responsibilities, you should remember this day with a great deal of pride and sense of accomplishment."

"The fact that you achieved this in Berlin is quite significant, as well," Selman said. This is not likely to be forgotten when the graduates think back on this day, he added.

These sentiments were underscored by every aspect of the graduation ceremony, from the standing-room-only audience including supportive friends, family, teachers, counselors and commanders, to the encouraging words of guest speaker, U.S. Commander, Berlin Maj. Gen. John H. Mitchell who addressed the 29 graduating Americans.

In recounting his own extensive experience with education, Mitchell stressed the importance of listening as an essential learning tool to complement what the students learn from reading books. "What I have found personally useful in my own life, is the absorption of other people's knowledge through listening—not only with the ear but with the eye."

“Our country's commitment to the individual is also a commitment to education.”

Mitchell went on to stress that the acquisition of knowledge and wisdom is valuable to our country.

"Our country's commitment to the individual is also a commitment to education, because our system will not work without it," he said.

The Regional Director of Education, Barbara Kadlec, congratulated the graduates on their achievement and spoke of the Army's commitment to providing quality continuing education to all members of the military community.

"I charge you as graduates to remember that our organization is called the Army Continuing Educational System," Kadlec said.

"Education for everyone should be a life-long continuing process. You have made the first step. . . Don't let this step be the end of your progression, but rather the beginning. Continue to take advantage of the unique benefits and educational opportunities offered to you here in Berlin," she said.

Anita Kolb, Reginal Coordinator of Big Bend Community College, was particularly proud of the 1987 graduating class.

"We had 22 soldiers and seven family members receiving their diplomas," she said.

"This is one of the largest graduating classes ever in Berlin. It reflects the extremely high level of determination on the part of both the students and their counselors, as well as the active support of the battalion NCOs in allowing the soldiers to participate in the classes."

The three graduate representatives speaking for the 4th, 5th, and 6th battalions all spoke enthusiastically about their experiences with the Army's educational opportunities and encouraged their fellow graduates to continue with their education.

"I would like to say I'm proud to be part of this graduating class," said Sgt. Paul Maggitt from 4th Bn. "We all strived so hard and accomplished so much." Maggitt noted that "education is clearly the way to success in the world. I strongly believe that it is a terrible thing for a human being to allow his mind to go to waste."

The second student speaker, PFC William P. Cutshall from the 5th Bn., spoke about his progression from involvement in the Basic Skills Education Program to his participation in the High School Completion Program and about the crucial command support which allowed him to obtain his diploma. Cutshall concluded his comments saying, "I would like to thank the Army for allowing us the time to study on duty during blue block, and I would like to give special thanks to Lt. Col. Suave for holding to his promise and seeing that we, the 5th Battalion soldiers, got the chance to go to school and obtain a high school education."

Not all soldiers get such educational opportunities as the next speaker pointed out.

"At my previous duty station, I did not have the opportunity to further my education," said the final class representative, PFC Robert C. Majors from 6th Bn. "When I arrived in Berlin, many soldiers informed me of the excellent programs available and highly recommended I take advantage of this opportunity. Now, six months after I began the High School Completion Program, I have my high school diploma."

"I would like to thank the Army for allowing us to study and the teachers for their dedication and inspiration," he said.

Many of the students who converged upon the impressive breakfast buffet table following the ceremony echoed the statements of their class speakers. Job and family responsibilities were admittedly an added burden for most of the graduates, but they added the advantages of Army education clearly outweigh the obstacles.

City, kite festivals are weekend highlights

by Helga Haftendorn

Sinfonie der Grossstadt

"Large Town Symphony" is the name of a silent movie running tonight at the open-air stage Waldbühne. The movie is a film about old Berlin.

The movie takes viewers through a day of activities in Berlin showing all walks of life. It begins with a spring day in 1927, when the city is waking up, gas lanterns are going out, and people are starting their day. Viewers are taken on an S-Bahn ride with documentary pictures, and on a stroll through a park. The movie is accompanied by music presented by the RIAS-Jugendorchester, which will present a broad sound panorama, including jazz episodes and parts played on wind instruments. The orchestra will also provide all the background noises for a busy town. Curtain time for this trip to Berlin of '27 is 9:30 p.m., and admission DM 15.

Tickets are available at any downtown ticket agency, or one hour before movie time at the Waldbühne.

Take the U-Bahn to Olympiastadion or Bus 94. There will also be a bus shuttle from the U-Bahn station to the stadium.

Tastes of jazz

Filmbühne am Steinplatz will offer a live music revue today, Saturday and Sunday. The show is entitled "Black and Blue" and begins 9 p.m. on all three days.

This music revue about five black musicians and dancers of the 1930s and 1940s and brings the vibrating atmosphere of this great era back to life with the music by Bert Williams, Bill (Bojangles) Robinson, Fats Waller, Duke Ellington and Cab Calloway. Alton Lathrop, Julia Stoller and Connie Uhe will dance. Music will be presented by Reggie Moore at the piano, Gerard Batrya, bass, and Reiner Robben, drums.

"Black and Blue" runs under the direction and choreography of Alton Lathrop, while Reggie Moore has the musical direction. Admission to this live show is DM 13/15.

As a framework for "Black and Blue," a film program will be introduced by Berlin jazz collector Klaus Scholz. The program will show many entertainers and composers of the time.

There will be the movie "Jazz in the 30s," showing tonight and on Sunday at 7 p.m. Listen to the music by Louis Armstrong, Duke Ellington, Cab Calloway and Jimmy Lunceford.

"Jazz in the 40s" will be presented in a movie showing 7 p.m. Saturday. Fats Waller and his swing group, Count Basie, Duke Ellington, Louis Armstrong and Dizzy Gillespie will be the stars of the program.

Tickets to the movie showings are DM 9. They can be reserved by calling 312-9012 today from 11 a.m.

To get to the Filmbühne am Steinplatz, located on 12 Hardenbergstrasse, take the U-Bahn to Zoologischer Garten, and walk up on Hardenbergstrasse.

Kite festival

Kite flying is on tap this weekend at the big "Sommerdrachenfestival" in front of the Reichstag building. This kite summer festival begins 2 p.m. Saturday at the Platz der Republik, and climaxes in a fantastic night kite flying with illuminated kites until midnight. The night flying spectacle begins at 10 p.m.

There will be about 300-400 kites flying at this festival, with international participation, as well as kites of West Germany and Berlin.

Enjoy flying castles, palaces, race cars, pajamas and other peculiar shapes on both days. There will be a restricted area for presentations only, but visitors may fly their kites in the open fields around Reichstag building. Last year, about 10,000 kites were flying at the Sommerdrachenfestival, and a similar number is expected at this year's event.

Kite flying begins 10 a.m. Sunday and ends at about 6 p.m., also at Platz der Republik. There will be no admission charge.

A specialty for children will be a "Bonbonregen," when candy will be falling from the sky around 3 p.m. on both days. Children will also get the chance to learn how to build a kite in a tent especially set up for the instruction on both days, from noon until 6 p.m. Admission to the tent will be DM 1.

To get to Platz der Republik, use the S-Bahn to Lehrter Stadtbahnhof, or buses 48, 69 or 83. Don't come by car, as there will be no parking space available.

Historische Autobusse

In connection with the "Stadtfest," the city festival, historical buses will run daily until Aug. 30. A ride on a "Zille-Express," as these historical buses are called, can be had every hour between 12:30 and 6:30 p.m. from Hardenbergplatz to Grosser Stern's Historischer Jahrmarkt. Going back to Hardenbergplatz, the historical buses will leave from Grosser Stern also every hour from 12:50 until 6:50 p.m.

A ride on these buses is DM 4 for adults and DM 2 for children. Tickets for a ride can only be purchased at the conductors of the historical buses. These tickets, however, cannot be used on any other bus lines.

To get to Hardenbergplatz, take the U-Bahn to Zoologischer Garten, or use buses 9, 19, 29, 54, 60, 69, 73, 90 or 94.

Sternschnuppen

Until Aug. 30, daily performances entitled "Sternschnuppen," shooting stars, will be presented at the downtown Historischer Jahrmarkt.

Curtain time for these special shows at this historical annual fair is 1 p.m. daily, and entertainment will be offered between Victory Column and Grosser Stern.

On the program will be a mixture of theater, cabaret, music, fashion, entertainment, dance and sports, and you can also listen to brass- or big-bands playing. Many performances are free of charge, but there are a few costing DM 5 admission.

There is also an admission charge of DM 1 for adults to get on to the historical annual fair grounds. You will have to pay the fee at the sentry boxes set up at the entrances, east and west of the fair on Strasse des 17. Juni. Children 14 years and under will be admitted free.

There will be no charge on Wednesdays, which have been declared family days.

The historical "Zille-Express" from Hardenbergplatz, running every hour from 12:30-6:30 p.m. is one way to get there, or take the U-Bahn to Hansaplatz, the S-Bahn to Tiergarten and Bellevue, or buses 16, 24, 48, 69 or 83.

Circus extended

Circus Roncalli has once more extended its stay here in Berlin until Aug. 2. On the program are top shows of previous years plus new, attractive and unusual numbers. There will be Pic, the Pantomime, René Strickler with the biggest wild animal group in the world, consisting of tigers, lions, pumas, panthers and polar bears, all in one show. Enjoy the classical clown trio with Cervante, Angelo and Director Paul as Zippo. See the "Suns" with their Chinese acrobatics, or "Alvarez," the juggler of old Spanish circus tradition. Don't miss Susanna Lind, the ballerina on horseback, or the "Svensons" with their "Pas de Deux" and many other attractions like Angelo Ballan with his unicycle.

Roncalli's performances are 3 and 8 p.m. daily except Monday and Tuesday, when there will be only the 8 p.m. show. Reserve tickets by calling the "Circuskasse" daily from 9 a.m. at 261-9211. Ticket price range from DM 9.50 to DM 44.

The circus is in the Tiergarten area, in the area between the National Gallery and Philharmonic Concert Hall. Take Bus 24, 29, 48 or 83 to get there.

"The Wall"

"The Wall" by Pink Floyd will be the movie presentation next Friday. The place is the open-air stage Waldbühne and film time is 10 p.m. Although the movie is in German, there will be much music from Pink Floyd's album "The Wall."

Tickets are DM 6 on all seats and can be purchased in advance at any downtown ticket agency. To get to the Waldbühne, located on Passenheimer-/Glockenturmstrasse, use the U-Bahn to Olympiastadion or Bus 94. There will also be a bus shuttle from the U-Bahn station to the stadium.

Space shuttle Columbia, a Martin Lester kite, will be flying over Berlin this weekend at the kite summer festival, held in front of the Reichstag building. A night kite flying with illuminated kites will be the highlight of tomorrow's special program, beginning at 10 p.m. ending around midnight.

24 Berlin soldiers earn the coveted expert badge

Expert Infantryman Badge testing kicked off last week at Keerans Range for about 300 Berlin soldiers. The testing will continue through July 25.

Planning for the EIB testing began in March, and the actual training began in May. The soldiers were given a study guide April 1 which listed all of the tasks and the standards the soldiers would be tested for.

The 6th Battalion went through the 32 tasks last week, and of 145 soldiers who tried for the coveted badge, 20 men from the 6th earned it, including Battalion Commander Lt. Col. John Hutcheson. Three men from 5th Battalion earned it last week, as well as one soldier from Headquarters Company, Berlin Brigade.

The 5th Battalion ran through the course this week, (results weren't available when the Observer went to press), and the 4th Battalion begins its testing next week.

Claymore, Claymore, Claymore . . . Setting up anti-personnel mines is just one of 32 tasks that have to be passed to earn the EIB.

55 Berlin medics go for highest badge

by Ken Jones
 Troop Writer

Expert Field Medical Badge testing was held this week at Parks Range's Doughboy City for brigade medics. Actual testing began Tuesday and ended today with a written test and a 12-mile forced road march.

They had 10 stations for testing, each of which consisted of between four and 11 tasks. Depending upon how many tasks were a part of each station, the medics could get a different number of no-gos and still get a go for the task to earn the badge.

"We have 55 people going through the course this year. This is really the only time in the whole year that the medics get to show their stuff," said 1st Lt. Robert Reeder, Brigade Medical Operations Officer.

The EFMB is the highest peacetime badge a medic can earn, but it isn't earned under peaceful conditions.

"We've tried to instill a combat environment so they know that they can do the tasks under fire," Reeder said. "We used blanks, grenade simulators, and smoke grenades to make it seem like battle."

Berlin sweeps invitational

Local squad invites teams from the West, but keeps the title

The men's Berlin community softball team invited teams from throughout West Germany to compete in a softball tournament Saturday and Sunday but kept the prize for themselves as they exterminated all of the visitors.

The Berlin men dominated the winners bracket completely and finished off losers bracket hopefuls Frankfurt 14-5 in the final game played Sunday at the Andrews Barracks softball field.

Frankfurt lost its first game to Hielbronn 15-7 to send them to the losers bracket. Heilbronn was knocked down to the losers bracket by Berlin in the finals of the winners bracket. Frankfurt replayed Heilbronn beating them 6-5 to take the losers bracket.

Berlin trashed Ansbach 9-0 and beat Heilbronn 14-5.

The championship game was tied at five runs each at the end of the seventh inning. Frankfurt's home run king Perry Redmond, Jr. had slammed one out in the fifth inning for three runs. Berlin's powerhouse hitter Kevin Giles popped a homer for two RBIs in the seventh inning.

In the top of the eighth inning, Berlin's Paul Maggit slammed a bouncing shot to the right field going past the fielder and bringing in two RBIs.

Berlin held the rising team to one final run in Frankfurt's last chance at bat, the score coming from another Redmond over the fence shot. The final score had Berlin taking the game, and the tourney, 10-6.

Teams playing in the tournament were Berlin, Frankfurt, Heilbronn, Ansbach, Bayreuth and Dexheim.

Local players net tennis tourney

Kevin Watson used a combination of strong serving and powerful forehand ground strokes to overcome Steve Smith 6-2, 6-3 to win the men's open division of the U.S. Army Berlin tennis championships Friday at the Harnack House tennis courts.

With the win, Watson will be among the top seeded players in Garmish for the U.S. Army Europe tennis championships Aug. 13-16.

In men's open doubles action, Steve Smith of G-4 teamed up with Neil Boyle, Medical Activity to defeat Kevin Watson and Tom Simms, both of E-320th Battery. The match went three sets before Smith and Boyle finally prevailed 2-6, 6-3, 6-2.

In the women's final, Jackie Yzaguirre of Headquarters and Service Company, Combat Support Battalion, used a steady baseline game to dispatch Virginia Kiernan, 287th Military Police Company, 6-2, 6-1.

The junior veteran division saw Mike Harz of Physical Security Support Element rally from a 1-4 first set deficit against Steve Smith to take the championship 7-5, 6-4. Harz held off Smith with a strategy of consistent groundstoking and effective net play.

Edwin Askew and Raymond Webster also qualified for the U.S. Army Europe championships by virtue of their reaching the semi-final round of the men's open division. The top four men's open, two junior veteran's and two women's open will represent Berlin at the USAREUR finals.

Runners who want to take part in this year's Berlin Marathon should lose no time in getting their entries in. The elimination of this year's Spandau Marathon and the coming vacation season have teamed up to put a squeeze on the available spaces for this year's marathon. More than 6,500 entries have already been taken. Last year the cut-off point was 13,300, and sign-ups are expected to be heavy until vacation season hits. The command will refund the $35 entry fee for the first time this year because the Americans will be running in a Berlin American community marathon at the same time as the Berlin marathon. Stop by the sports office, room 3032, bldg. 2, Clay Headquarters or call BM 6247 to sign up . . . Entry blanks for the Aug. 23 1987 Spandau Triathlon are available in room 3080, bldg. 2, Clay Headquarters or call BM 7844 . . . The Roadrunners need volunteers to man the planned water stop during the Berlin Marathon. Mountain hiking trips all summer

The Armed Forces Recreation Center has scheduled several hiking treks for the summer. The trips end on an unspecified date in September.

One tour is to the top of the Zugspitze, Germany's highest mountain, via the Reintal Valley: The trip includes a two-day hike with a guide, overnight stay in a mountain hut, gorge and trail fee, cable car, one dinner, one breakfast, medal and awards, all for $47.

A group hike with the Hoellental Gorge Adventure package includes the same details as above and costs $41.

The Zugspitze northeast face trip features hiking and climbing the trail with an overnight stay in a mountain hut at the Hoellental Angerhuetten. The tour offers the same deal as the other treks for $129.

The Traverse the Wetterstein Mountains program is a more physically demanding trek. Advanced reservations are required for this tour which includes a three-day hike with a guide, gorge and trail fee, cable car, two nights in a mountain hut, two dinners, two breakfasts, medals and awards for $75.

One of AFRC's greatest challenges is the King Ludwig Trek through the Ammerwald Mountains. This scenic tour begins in the alpine village of Oberammergau near Garmisch and ends at the Neuschwanstein Castle. The program includes a five-day hike with a guide, gorge and trail fees, cable car, four overnights in a mountain hut, four dinners, four breakfasts and a medal. The cost is $135.

Seasonal clothing is needed for these treks, money for lunches and passport or border crossing documents for each tour. Clothing, backpacks and boots are available for rent.

Call AFRC hiking treks for information, the AFRC Mountaineering School, ETS 440-2591; civilian 08821-750-591.

Mountain climbing programs offered

The Armed Forces Recreation Center is offering a variety of mountaineering programs for the summer.

The basic rock climbing course teaches belay techniques, rappelling, climbing steep rock faces, rope work and safety. The package includes five days of instruction, all guide fees, equipment, transportation, certification, medal, two nights in an AFRC hotel, four nights in a mountain hut, four breakfasts, five lunches and four dinners, all for $265.

The advanced rock climbing course is designed for graduates of the basic course. The package includes the same as the basic course for $365.

The elementary mountaineering course offers instruction in the basics of rock and snow climbing, high altitude mountaineering, high alpine hiking, glacier travel, crampon walking and rope techniques, orienteering in mountain terrain with glacier crevasse and emergency rescue techniques. The package includes the same features as the other courses and costs $265.

For information, reservation and locations of courses, call the AFRC Mountaineering School, ETS 440-2591; civilian 08821-52066.

Berlin Adler quarterback Gene Kennedy slips out of an Essen Cardinal defender's grasp.

Larry Lane

Adlers soar into playoffs

The German-American football team, the Berlin Adlers, put away the Essen Cardinals 44-14 before a crowd of 2,500 football fans Sunday at the Mommsen Stadium here to secure the top spot in the league's September play off action.

The Cardinals, considered to be one of the German-American football league's top teams, were unable to breach the Adler front line to shut down the passing of quarterback Gene Kennedy.

Kennedy tossed one noteworthy touchdown pass to David Spencer to push the team's offensive production over 500 points, the first German team to do so.

The Adler's biggest scorer was running back Clarence

Rambo of Headquarters and Service Company, Field Station Berlin. Rambo ran for three touchdowns, a total of 18 points. Other successful scorers were Thomas Schwambach with 8 points and Frank Stahnke and Lightbrown both with 6 points.

The runaway win marks a break in the action for the Berlin gridiron team.

"Now, my boys have deserved their 14 days of leave. But beginning of August, there will be hard training, so we will be in top shape for the quarterfinals," Head Coach Billy Brooks said.

This victory makes the 10th win in as many games for the Adlers. The semi-finals will be played Sept. 13.

All levels of sailing courses offered

Basic and intermediate sailing courses are being offered by the Armed Forces Recreation Centers in West Germany and will run until Sept. 18.

One course offers five days aboard a 22-foot sailboat learning the basics of seamanship. The package includes instruction, equipment, certification, group photograph, an awards cookout plus six nights in an AFRC hotel with five dinners and six breakfasts. Price for the entire package is $237; $225 for E-5 and below.

An intermediate sailing course is available with a prerequisite of the basic course. Advanced skills in catamarans and sloop-rigged craft up to 36 feet long will be taught. The intermediate sailing package also offers the same features as the basic sailing course for the same price.

A less technical course designed to teach beginners in smaller boats is the introduction to sailing course running until Sept. 19. The course begins on Mondays, Thursdays and Fridays and gives two days of instruction, equipment use and certification for $49. There is also a package tour including two nights in an AFRC hotel, two dinners and two breakfasts for $83; $79 for E-5 and below.

A catamaran sailing course is offered until Sept. 19 on Mondays, Thursdays and Saturdays. Sailors must receive a Red Cross sailing certification before taking the course.

Cost for the program is $49 and includes instruction, equipment and certification. The package includes two nights in an AFRC hotel, two dinners and two breakfasts for $83; $79 for E-5 and below.

A windsurfing program including instruction, equipment and certification for $49 is scheduled until Sept. 19. Cost for the package, including two nights in an AFRC hotel, two dinners and two breakfasts is $83; $79 for E-5 and below. Courses are offered Mondays, Thursdays and Saturdays.

For more information, reservations and locations of courses, contact the AFRC Central Reservations Office, ETS 440-2575; local charge 0130-2772; or civilian 08821-75710.

Scouts 'rough it'

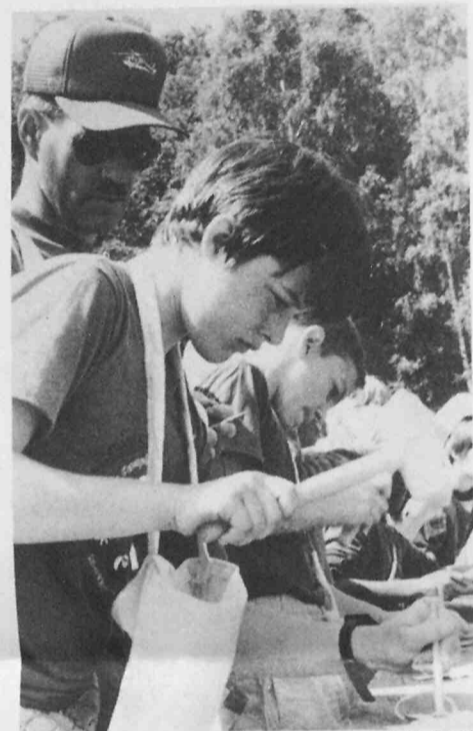

American youths put in week-long range stay

by Kelle Smith

Summer hires

Songs, activities, and skills were all part of the two scout camps held at Rose Range. Girl Scout Camp ran from July 6-10, and Boy Scout Camp began Monday and ended today.

The Scouts practiced ceremony by opening and closing each day with the traditional flag ceremony.

Much preparation and planning went into the camp activities, which were led by volunteers. Many of the volunteers had taken time off from work and activities to be with the scouts.

Both camps were divided into age groups. Each of the groups participated in games, activities and crafts.

"These groups are made up by ages, in the hopes that the boys will make new friends," said Larry Hammack for the Boy Scouts. "They do everything together as a den."

Part of the week's activities included each Scout coming up with a nickname. Many were funny, and even the leaders got into the spirit. The nicknames ranged from "Square Knot," to "White Wave."

The camps also allowed Scouts to earn badges. Boy Scouts learned how to shoot BB guns safely and aim their shots well at changing targets. Archery skills were also taught.

Learning about nature through walks, and making simple crafts were also part of the activities.

"I think they enjoy making things for themselves, and enjoy making things for someone else," said Debbie Burgard.

Both camps gave Scouts a chance to stay out overnight.

The Girl Scouts fixed their own dinner and breakfast during the camp out. The Boy Scouts brought their own lunches during the day, but they did have a "Trading Post" with only nutritional food.

The weather held up pretty well for both camps, but tents were set up just in case. However, as Larry Hammack said, "It never rains at camp, it's only liquid sunshine."

Author touts fitness plan

New exercise regimen begun in two locations here

by Kelle Smith
and Shellie Lamb
Summer hires

Callan Pickney, author of the best seller "Calanetics," has been in Berlin promoting her Calanetic techniques in the military fitness centers for both the Army and Air Force.

"Calanetics are useful in helping those with back and knee troubles," said Phyllis Lajuene, "as well as young children and teenagers with scoliosis."

Pickney developed Calanetics on her own from her own experience. For 11 years she travelled throughout Europe, weighing just 87 pounds and with an oversized backpack on her shoulders. The backpack caused permanent indentions on her shoulders, and nearly crippled her.

She had been told by her doctors that she needed surgery and would most likely become so crippled she would need a wheelchair. Then, one morning she woke to find her body slumped over so terribly she couldn't stand. She crawled onto the floor and began exercising as well as her body would allow.

Those small exercise techniques now make up Calanetics and can be done by most people.

Calanetic classes are regularly taught at the Tempelhof Central Airport Gym Monday-Friday at 7:30 a.m., and Monday-Thursday at 4:45 p.m. for one hour by Phyllis Lajuene and Capt. Huffman. For more information call BM 5308.
