Many units pass alcohol challenge

The challenge issued by Brigade Commander Maj. Gen. Jack D. Woodall at last month's Organization Day bore its first fruit for soldiers here as half of the units in the command managed to meet the phase one goal and earn a three day pass.

Woodall's offer was to grant a three day pass for each company sized unit that went from the organization day until July 6 without an alcohol-related incident. Twelve of the command's 24 such units reached that goal, according to SSgt. Doug Manier, executive administrative assistant to Woodall.

"Those units that made the first phase goal can now apply those 32 days toward the second phase goal, which is to go 180 days without an alcohol related incident and earn another three day pass," Manier said. The other 12 units had to start from scratch, he said.

The brigade commander was pleased with the results of his challenge and added: "I hope the units continue their efforts and work toward an environment free of alcohol-related incidents."

Blood drive tops goal by 35 units

Last week's U.S. Army, Europe blood drive netted 635 units of blood against a goal of 600 units, according to USAREUR blood drive officials. That total made it one of the more successful recent blood drives, said officials.

"You've got your good blood drive and your excellent blood drives, but this one was outstanding. We don't normally go over our goals," said 1st Lt. Susan Martin, technical director of the 655th Medical Company, which ran the blood drive.

Martin said the success was due to more than a lot of people willing to donate their blood.

"We'd like to thank the Berlin community for their participation," Martin said.

Volksfest readies for opening

Free calls, international entertainment, added to usual lures

by Joe Ferrare
Editor

The command's 27th annual German-American Volksfest will open its 19-day run Wednesday with an entertainment schedule that runs the gamut from Turkish dancers to country and western music, courtesy of the Bandoleros.

This year's theme is "America Grüss Berlin," (America Salutes Berlin) and was picked to honor the city's 750th anniversary. The theme will center on Berlin's reputation as an entertainment and cultural center.

Featured this year will be a booth from which Volksfest-goers can place free calls to the United States. Volksfest Director Bob Ahrens called it a "headline event."

"Absolutely the most exciting thing is that AT&T has donated a multimedia slide show of pictures and sounds from the Berlins of America. Together with that they've given us 10 free phone lines so visitors to the Volksfest can call the states free," he reported. The lines will be open the same hours as the Volksfest itself: 2 p.m.-midnight each of the 19 days.

Another fest highlight will be a computerized, multi-colored light system that will lead visitors to the largest entertainment stage in Volksfest history.

Top entertainment billing on that stage will be shared this year by a number of groups, including the Brigham Young University International Dancers

Observations on Observations

Summer hires find it's not easy to get a straight answer

by Shellie Lamb and Kelle Smith
Summer hires

See those five little pictures at the bottom of the page, with quotes that range from semi-normal to occasionally outrageous?

Well, as mere "summer hires" at the Berlin Observer, that has become our weekly task. What a task it is!

First comes the ordeal of coming up with the question.

The whole office sits around, discussing all the recent news items, and contemplating their meaning. A couple of hours later we debate whether or not anyone will really want to answer the question, and finally end up just using the first question that came to our minds.

Then our chore is to go out and find the first face that looks kind enough to answer our question. So, we muster up the courage to approach them.

Our opening usually begins like this, "Hi, we're from the Berlin Observer out asking the Observations question for the week, would you mind answering it for us?"

When we become more desperate it goes like this, "We're from the Observer and we need one more person to answer our Observations question, and we can't go home until we get it, please, I'm begging you, won't you answer it?" Really, it's true!

The replies vary.

Actually, they aren't all replies, there are a lot of excuses. You wouldn't believe some of the excuses we've heard.

For instance, we had one woman say, "Sorry, I can't because as soon as I start answering my kids will start crying, then my ice cream will start dripping all over the place..."

One of the more aggravating things is people who give you a perfect answer, and after taking their name and the camera appears they say, "Oh no, not a picture. I look terrible, never mind."

We've found that a woman who has hair slightly out of place is less likely to answer the Observations question than a woman who is coming out of the beauty parlor. Another thing is that pregnant women hardly ever answer the question. It's a known fact.

The worst times are when we ask a politically controversial question that no one wants to answer for fear of getting in trouble with his commander, and the family members don't want to because they aren't sure what to say. They say they don't have an opinion. That's great. Either that, or they just aren't informed on the subject, and don't want to sound stupid. That's common.

Sometimes when people figure out who we are and what we want they actually try running away!

Getting answers is sometimes very hard, getting good answers is even harder. On average we spend about an hour trying to get five people to answer our question. And not just any five people, at least two or three must be military, says our favorite editor, SSgt. Joe Ferrare. When we get those we get to look for others.

You also have to know the peak hours to find approachable people (probably too approachable for their own good) in Truman Plaza. You'll usually see us there in the afternoon, scoping the sidewalks for those kind of people.

If we don't succeed in that hour, in desperation we consider throwing out Observations, but then we realize we can't do that, so we put on our depressed look, pout, and drag our chins to Ferrare and beg for another question. We always succeed.

We've had lots of bad luck with Observations. The times that the pictures didn't develop correctly, or the tape recorder didn't record correctly, or the times we mix peoples names and quotes up, but we do try. We try hard!

At least we try harder than a former staff member, let's call him "Paul." We'll tell you the story as it was told to us--as a warning.

It was a Thursday. Thursdays are when the staff takes off to the plant to put together the paper. Well, on that day, at the plant, Ferrare noticed he hadn't seen Observations yet. He asked where they were and "Paul," well, didn't know what to do. The presses were almost ready to roll.

So he grabbed four photos of people who had answered previous Observations questions, called those people, asked them the question, got quotes, typed them up and out they rolled in the paper the very next day. Pretty cute, huh?

We hear a lot of things doing Observations, weird replies and so on... Sometimes, when preparing the final copy, it's hard to untangle the bad from the good, but nevertheless, each week Observations come out, the way you see them, but not always the way we do.

It's not always easy, it's not always fun, but somebody has to do it!

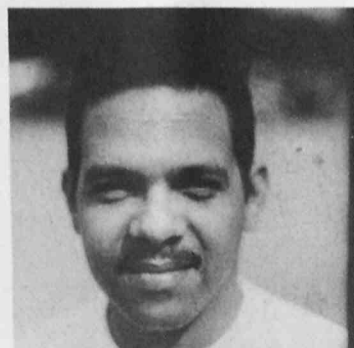

Observations

What do you think of the weekly Observations questions?

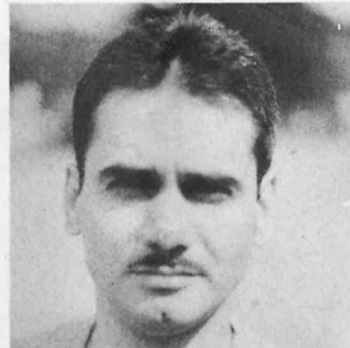

Chatchabool McCarthy, family member: "I don't really have any time during my day to read them. Once in a while I might read them, but my English isn't very good, so I just read what I can."

Sgt. Jose Santiago, Headquarters Company, 5th Battalion: "I read them to see what people say and to see if any of my friends are there and then I like to see what they have to say. That's the way I look at it."

Tzena Egblomasse, family member: "I think they are pretty good. They are interesting and you get to know what people around you feel."

SSgt. Jose A. Ortiz, Combat Support Company, 4th Battalion: "I read it to see what people say. To see what kind of questions and answers there are."

SP4 Calvin Curry, F Company, 40th Armor: "I think that the questions are off the wall sometimes, like this one right here. Other than that, I think they are good."

Europe wins reup award

Berlin lags slightly, but records best quality point average

by Ken Jones
Troop writer

The U.S. Army, Europe earned a Department of the Army reenlistment award for excelling in soldier retention during fiscal year 1986. This is the second consecutive year USAREUR has earned the reenlistment award.

USAREUR, one of 16 major commands eligible to receive the award, reached 138 percent of its reenlistment objectives in the area of initial term reenlistments, and 140 percent of its objectives in the combined areas of mid-career and career soldiers.

The Berlin Brigade contributed to the 1986 fiscal year totals with 350 soldiers reenlisting, 60 more than the objective, giving Berlin a total percentage of 120.7 percent.

So far in the 1987 fiscal year, the Berlin Brigade has done very well, according to the Brigade Senior Retention Non-commissioned Officer, MSgt. Emray Poulson.

"We have a 77.63 quality points average, which is the highest quality point percentage in USAREUR," Poulson said. Quality points are awarded for various things when an initial term soldier reenlists. They are awarded for such factors as pay grades, education, General Technical score, Skill Qualification Test and other test scores.

So far this fiscal year, Berlin has had 152 initial term soldiers reenlist; the goal was 114, giving Berlin a 133 percent reenlistment average.

In the area of mid-term soldiers, which consists of those soldiers who have reenlisted but don't have more than 10 years of service, Berlin has had 85 soldiers reenlist. The objective was 95, making an 89 percent average, which Poulson said he expects to bring up to at least 100 percent in the near future.

Berlin has had 263 career soldiers reenlist, and the objective was only 235, making a percentage of 111.

For more information on reenlistment options, contact the brigade retention offices. The Brigade Senior Retention NCO is Poulson, BM 6286, room 1005, building 1, Clay Headquarters. At Andrews Barracks, contact SFC Haberman, BM 3563. At McNair Barracks, contact SSgt. Alton Clark, BM 9681.

The U.S. Minister to Berlin, John Kornblum, bids a formal farewell to the command July 17 at Clay Headquarters. Harry Gilmore replaces the minister.

Medics top 40 percent for badge

Of the 55 soldiers who tested for the Expert Field Medical Badge, the highest peacetime badge a medic can earn, 25 were able to successfully complete all the requirements needed to earn the award.

Each of the soldiers had to go through 10 stations, each of which consisted of between four and 11 tasks. The medics could get a different number of no-gos at each station and still get the go to earn the badge, depending upon how many tasks were a part of each station.

"It's a very hard course," said Sgt. Willie Reynolds, Headquarters and Service Company, Combat Support Battalion. "Whether you get the badge or not, it's good training."

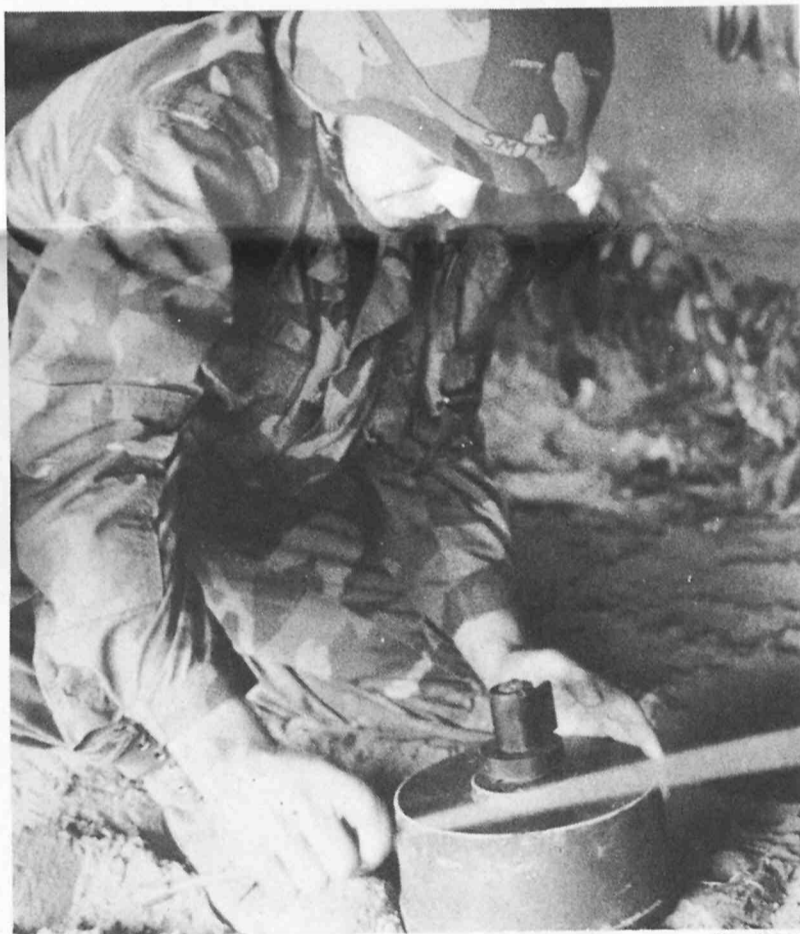

"The hardest tasks were the Emergency Medical Treatment course, (the medics had to treat a variety of injuries after deciding patients should be treated first), and the Litter Obstacle Course."

"The most physically demanding part of the course was the Litter Obstacle Course," said SFC David Armstrong, non-commissioned officer in charge of the radiology clinic at the U.S. Army Hospital, Berlin.

"We had to carry a patient who weighed between 160-180 pounds into a building, over a low and a high wall, through waist deep water, up and down stairs, and under a barbed wire obstacle, all while under fire and other battle conditions," Armstrong said. "We were all physically exhausted."

The 4th Battalion had four soldiers earn the badge, matched by four soldiers from the 5th Battalion. The 6th Battalion had five soldiers who were awarded the badge, CSB two soldiers, and Headquarters Company, Berlin Brigade had one. There were four soldiers from West German and stateside units who earned the badge here as well.

Expert Infantryman Badge testing continued in Berlin last week, with members of the 4th Battalion spending the week at Keeran's Range trying to earn a few more of the badges which are to be pinned on Aug. 3.

During last week's testing, the 5th Battalion had 20 men earn the badge, in addition to the three who earned it the week before while testing with the 6th Battalion. During the first week of testing, the 6th Battalion soldiers took home 20 badges, and one Headquarters and Headquarters Company soldier earned a badge. The results from the 4th Battalion testing weren't available when the Observer went to press.

Planning for the testing began as early as March, and then men have been training since mid-May. Testing has been held at Keeran's Range since July 7, and ended today.

"It's hard training," said SP4 Brian Smith, A Company, 4th Battalion. "You spend all day out here, and then you go home and just look at the harder tasks for a little while or you'd go brain dead. While you are out here you have to really train so you can relax when you get home."

Mills play vital role in German prosperity

by Tom Blake
Historical columnist

It's an established fact that watermills were already a familiar sight on the Berlin landscape as early as the 13th century—and by the end of the 14th century wind-powered grist mills were in operation at Buckow and Rudow (independent towns that are now in the district of Neukölln).

Various members of the landed gentry owned or operated grain polishing and saw mills in addition to mills that helped run breweries and slaughterhouses.

The miller and his helpers had become an important part of the business community by the time the Hohenzollern Electors became rulers of Brandenburg and Prussia in the early 1400s and the grinders profession increased in importance as taxes on products from the mills became a greater source of royal income.

The bookkeeping and administrative functions of mill personnel brought them into a close relationship with the rulers of the land and ultimately gave the profession a high degree of influence in government matters. Millers became not only administrators and bankers, but members of the royal economic planning and production committees.

Grain, wood, water and gunpowder were all vital commodities that were produced by millers under exclusive royal contract by the early 1700s. Without the products that millers controlled, not only civil commerce, but military supplies were unavailable. Ground saltpeter and coal were, of course, the sine qua non of gunpowder production.

Royal permission to operate a mill nearly guaranteed the miller a substantial income and a position of some importance in the local community. Areas like Rixdorf, Prenzlauer Berg, Schöneberg, Britz and Buckow grew up rapidly as mills there were established. Villages at Dahlem, Zehlendorf and Wilmersdorf sought and found new prosperity upon being granted a charter to operate their own mill.

Among those mills that are still standing today is one of the six that were built in Britz through the years.

As early as 1765, a 12-sided "Dutch" windmill sat on the plot of land which is now Buckower Damm. Then a century later, in September 1865, the mill and land around it were bought by a master miller named Doerfer, who built a second mill and expanded the overall capacity by quite a bit.

In October 1874, Doerfer in turn sold the operation to Karl August Stechan who continued to operate the business there until his death in 1928. The mill and its inventory then passed into the hands of Stechan's heirs, after which it was leased to a man called Franz Bensdorf until 1936.

During that period the machinery had been converted from true wind power to a diesel motor. When old man Bensdorf died, his son took over the converted machine-mill and continued to run it even after 1940 when the firm Friedrich Hauch & Company bought the plant from the Stechans family. Bensdorf Junior was still the miller when the machinery was knocked out by bombs toward the latter half of 1943.

One of the surviving windmills, now a national monument.

The mill remained out of commission from that time until repairs and technical improvements were performed that allowed Bensdorf to once more operate the plant in 1947 but financial considerations made commercial operation impractical after a short while.

The mill finally received a new lease on life in 1959 when it was granted "monument" status when the Berlin acquired full title from the estate of Franz Hauck. Funds were made available for restoration of the exterior shingles and the "sails" but the interior mechanisms nonetheless continued to deteriorate. Complete restoration of the mill was finally made possible in conjunction with the "Bundesgartenschau" in 1986.

Today the old windmill sits on a manicured plot of land behind a garden restaurant in Britz and makes a lovely destination for a summer day's outing.

Kreuzberg to Tegel regatta readies to sail

by Helga Haftendorn
Cultural events editor

Wasserkorso

An Internationaler Wasserkorso will be held along 27 kilometers of West Berlin's waterways Saturday. This sailing regatta of more than 100 historical and festively decorated ships, boats, gondolas, elegant motor yachts of the 1920s, rafts and boat curiosities, coming from all over West Germany and Europe can be seen in a festive cruise from 10 a.m.

There will be bands and orchestras playing music from all eras, and you will see theater presentations and swimming scenes telling all about Berlin history.

This spectacle, held in connection with Berlin's 750th anniversary, starts at Lohmühlenbrücke in Kreuzberg district, and can be followed on its way to Tegel, passing on Berlin's canals, the Spree and Havel rivers.

Take the U-Bahn to Kottbusser Damm, if you don't want to miss the start of the regatta, which will be leaving from Lohmühlen Bridge at 10 a.m.

The welcoming of the boats takes place at Urbanhafen at 10:15 a.m. You can get there by U-Bahn to either Kottbusser Damm or Kottbusser Tor. Urban Harbor is located between the two stations.

After the welcoming ceremony, the Wasserkorso will continue to Tiergartenschleuse for a "Schleusenfest," from 11:30 a.m. until 3:30 p.m. The fest at the Tiergarten lock will be held between Zoological Gardens and Strasse des 17. Juni. You can get to the site by U-Bahn to Hansaplatz.

A Schiffstaufe, a naming ceremony, will open the Westhafenfest 5 p.m. Saturday. You can get there by U-Bahn Putlitzstrasse.

The highpoint of the Wasserkorso will be 9:30 p.m. at Tegeler See for a siren concert, an illuminated boats regatta, and at 10:30 p.m. fireworks can be enjoyed from Greenwich Promenade and along lake Tegel.

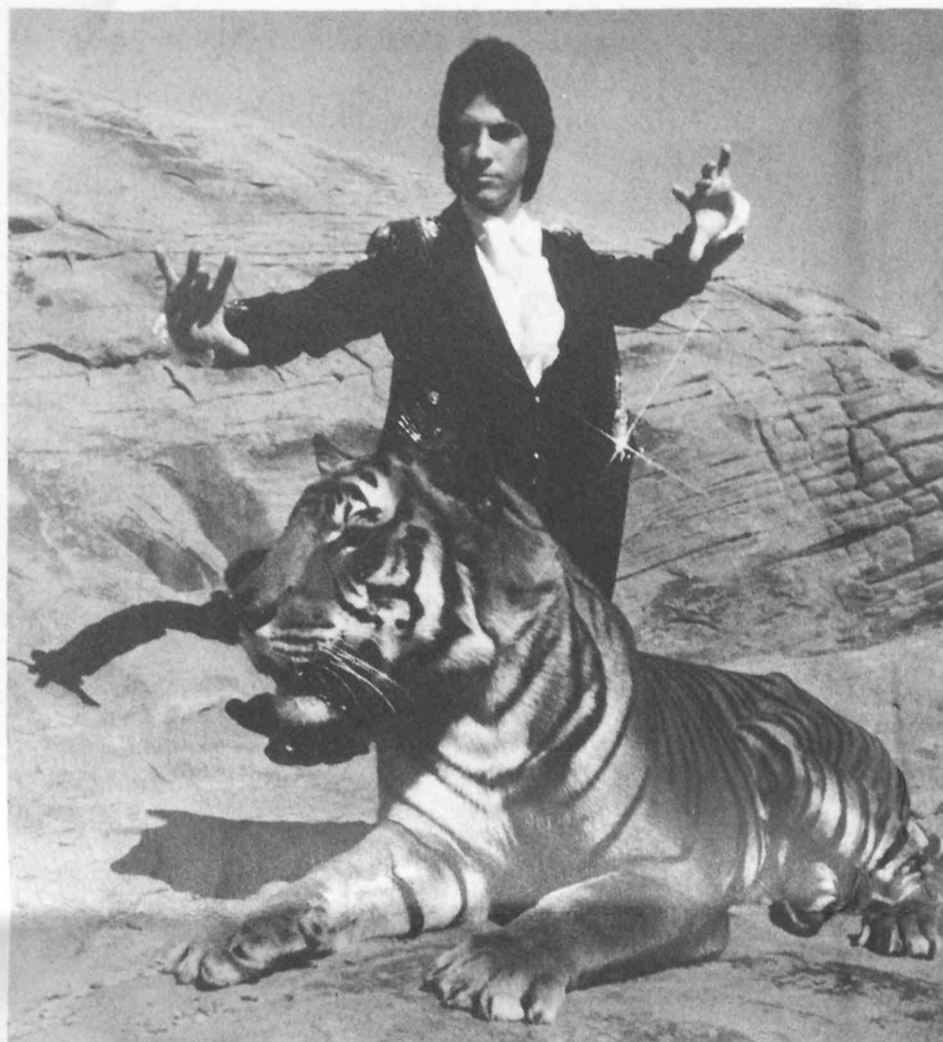

To join this finale, take the U-Bahn to Tegel station and follow the crowd to Greenwich Promenade.

In case of inclement weather, a small-scale Wasserkorso will be repeated on Sunday, beginning from two sides: from Tiergartenschleuse, the lock, at 2 p.m. and from Lohmühlen Bridge at 2:45 p.m. The repeated regatta will stop at Urbanhafen, where boats will arrive at 3 p.m., to continue to Westhafen, arriving at about 10 p.m.

Westhafenfest

In connection with the Internationaler Wasserkorso, a harbor fest will be held at Westhafen.

Westhafen is one of Germany's biggest inland harbors, and beginning Saturday it Showstar Mark Stevens from Las Vegas makes tigers disappear and lions appear in the show "Zauber Zauber" coming to Theater des Westens, Aug. 8—23. Daily performances of "Magic, Magic" are at 8 p.m., Saturday and Sunday at 4 p.m., and Fridays also at midnight. Tickets range from DM 18—38 at any downtown ticket agency, also check with ITT, or telephone ticket service by calling 852-9056.

celebrates its harbor fest daily until Aug. 1. No admission will be charged to join all the fun and entertainment. The opening of the fest will be at 5 p.m., when 20 to 30 boats of the International Wasserkorso will be present for the ceremony.

Twenty to 50 of the Wasserkorso boats will be anchoring at the harbor during the entire period of the Westhafenfest. They will be open to be viewed by the visitors.

Party time begins daily at 3 p.m.; Sunday and Aug. 1 at 10 a.m., and runs until midnight. There will be much music and dancing, and movie showings aboard the "Ursi," showing four films on shipping, daily. Admission is DM 7 for either the 5:30, 7:30 or 11 p.m. performance. A children's movie program begins aboard daily at 3:30 p.m. Admission for the little ones is DM 5.

At 9:30 p.m. Saturday you can rock around the harbor with Unlimited Systems and Rubbermind Revenge. There will be different groups, orchestras, theaters, and cabarets playing every night at 9:30 p.m.

You can reach the Westhafen by U-Bahn Putlitzstrasse, or by one of two special tour boat routes, set up for the duration of the fest. One tour boat is leaving from Congress Hall daily at 2, 5 and 8 p.m., while the other takes off from Corneliusbrücke, the bridge on Budapester Strasse, daily at 3 and 8 p.m., and both on Sunday and Aug. 1 also at 11:30 a.m. for the Westhafenfest.

Sommerkonzerte

This weekend and the following weekends until the end of August, classical concerts will be presented at Charlottenburg Castle's Eosander Chapel.

Saturday and Sunday, old Italian music will be presented by Friedemann Gottschick at the organ, Ulrike Gottschick, soprano, and Jörg Gottschick, violoncello. On the program will be works by Scarlatti, Grandi, Frescobaldi and Cavazzoni.

The Saturday concerts begin at 8 p.m., and Sunday's at 6 p.m.

For reservations call "Concertino" at 817-3364, Monday to Friday from 9 a.m.—3 p.m., and Saturday from 10 a.m. to 1 p.m. On the day of performance, you can pick up your ticket at the door of the Eosander Chapel, one hour before concert time. Tickets range from DM 8 to DM 16.

To get to Schloss Charlottenburg, take buses 9, 21, 54, 62 or 74.

Volksfest begins

The grand opening of this year's German-American Volksfest is on Wednesday, running under the theme "Amerika Grüss Berlin." Much entertainment, music, fun, all kinds of rides and culinary specialties will be awaiting the visitors.

Volksfest will be celebrated until Aug. 16, daily from 2 p.m. to midnight. Admission for adults is DM 1.50, children 14 years and under, get in for free. On Wednesdays it's half-price on all rides for the whole family.

Take the U-Bahn to Oskar-Helene-Heim, any of the American buses or use buses 10, 11, 18 or 60 to get to the grounds on Hüttenweg. (See story, page 1.)

Stadtfest program

Following is a schedule of the upcoming events you can enjoy at the Stadtfest, currently celebrated on Strasse des 17. Juni:

Today, the Grosse Bühne, large stage, offers a program which will be presented by the Lifttheater Köln at 5 p.m. Same program can be seen Saturday and on Sunday at 3 p.m.

At the Spiegelzelt today, Saturday and Sunday, Reineke Fuchs "Atta Troll" rock opera will be presented at 8 and 10 p.m. The Spiegelzelt will also be the site of "Nimm 4 - Rock'n'Roll" beginning today and Saturday at 11:45 p.m., and Aug. 1 at 11:30 p.m.

Listen to Gloria Syncopators, Berlin Salonjazz of the 1920s and 1930s today and Saturday and on Sunday at 9 and 11 p.m. at the Nostalgiezelt.

On Sunday at 6 p.m., Ondeko-Za, the Japanese devil of a drummer, will be presenting his show at the Grosse Bühne. The Reggie More Trio's jazz program begins at 11:45 p.m. at the Spiegelzelt, Aug. 9 and 23 at 11:30 p.m.

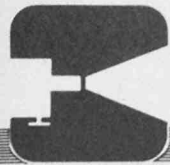

On Wednesday, at 6 p.m., the University of South Florida/Busy Signal/Phone Booth Theater Group will be performing at the Grosse Bühne. The show, "Elvis—the King of Rock'n'Roll" presented by Rock'n'Roll Group 66 begins at 8 p.m. at the big stage.

Thursday has Philipp Sonntag on the Spiegelzelt program, offering highlights of a comedian program from 10 p.m. Same program will be repeated at the Nostalgiezelt 9 p.m. July 31.

Admission to the Stadtfest's Historischer Jahrmarkt is DM 1, and admission to performances at the Spiegel- and Nostalgiezelt is DM 5.

Tickets can be purchased at the door, two hours before the program begins. No admission will be charged for shows at the Grosse Bühne, except for the weekend's big shows.

To get to see the Stadtfest's entertainment, take the U-Bahn to Hansaplatz or use Bus 16, 24, 48, 69 or 83.

Meet decides city's best

Top soldier-athletes battle it out; double winners set pace

by Joe Ferrare
Editor

Berlin chose its new champions last week as soldiers from throughout the command gathered for two days to compete in 19 events in three categories and decide who will represent Americans here in the U.S. Army, Europe competition, scheduled for late August.

Combat Support Battalion ran away with the major unit competition with a 170 point total, 41 points better than second-place 6th Battalion. Third place was decided in the pole vault and javelin, two of the last three events, as 5th Bn. earned three points more than Field Station Berlin to record a 67-64 edge. Last among the major units was 4th Bn., scoring only eight points in three events.

Individual unit honors went to the Medical Activity on the power of Daniel Patton's legs. Patton came in first in both the Men's Masters 1,500 meter and 5,000 meter runs, earning MEDDAC 12 of their 16 points.

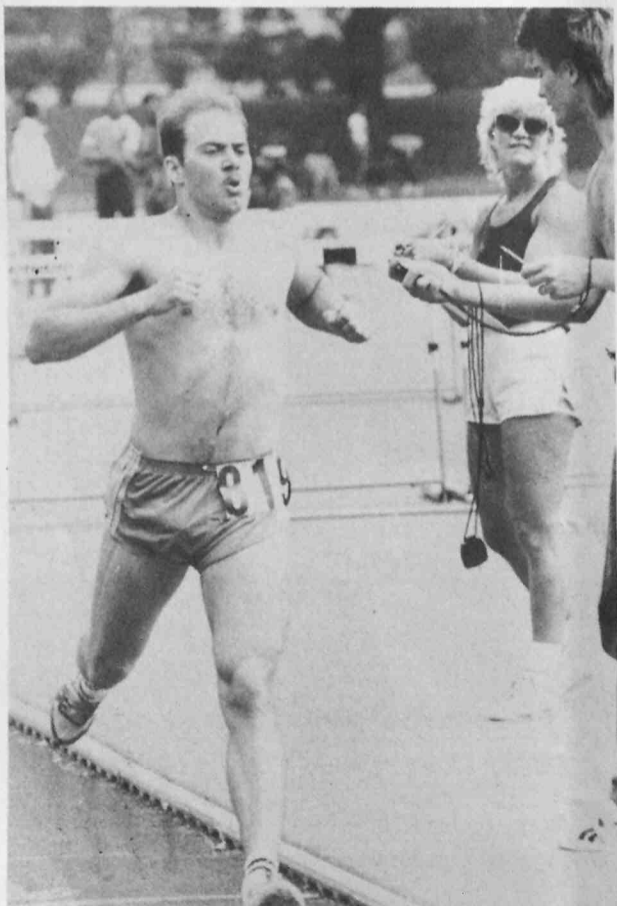

Just behind MEDDAC was Headquarters Company, Berlin Brigade, with 13 points, and the 287th Military Police Company, with six points, all coming on a Barry Perkins record-setting discus toss.

Deadly duo

In the women's competition the 287th Military Police Company took team honors with a 51 point showing, most of that coming from the team of Virginia Kiernan, the competition's only triple winner, and Amy Williams, the women's division's only double winner. Second place went to Headquarters and Service Company, CSB with 33 points, while third went to H&S Co., FSB with 19, fourth to MEDDAC with 13 and last was B Co., FSB with eight.

Kiernan clocked a 2:49.31 in the 800 meter run, a 23:00.48 in the 5,000 meter run and won the shot put with an 8.86 meter heave to nail down her three events.

Double winners set the pace in the competition, with eight soldiers capturing two golds apiece. Douglas Jones, FSB, led the way in the men's open division with a 10.93 second win in the 100 meters, followed by a record setting 21.25 clocking in the 200 meters.

In the men's masters division Raymond Baker, FSB, duplicated Jones' feat by taking the 100 meters in 13.14, and the 200 in 26.53.

George McGill, 6th Bn., took the men's masters 400 meter run in 59.02, then led the victorious 6th Bn. 4x100 meter relay team to a new record with a 52.93 clocking.

Anthony Davis, 6th Bn., continued his stranglehold on 800 and 1,500 meter runs by beating out FSB's Rick Marciano in both events. Davis set a new high in the men's open 800 meters with a 1.51 time, then conquered the 1,500 in 4:06.

Davis' counterpart in the men's masters division was MEDDAC's Patton, who clocked a 4:59 in his 1,500 meter win and a 18:00.22 timing in the 5,000.

The only double winner in the field events was Gregory Baskin, FSB, who dominated the men's masters discus and shot put events. Baskin set a new shot put record, 11.43 meters, and a 34.68 meter discus toss.

James King showed his talent on both portions of the event, taking the triple jump with a 13.42 meter leap for a new USAB record, then leading the 6th Bn. 4x100 meter relay team to victory.

Williams was the lone double winner on the women's side, capturing the long jump competition with a 3.3 meter leap, and the 200 meter race in 30.86.

Many records

Other record breakers in the men's open division were: Jerome Smith, 6th Bn., who set a record with his 50.35 time in the men's open 400 meters; Edward Buttler, CSB, set a record in the 400 meter hurdles with a 56.97 clocking; Andre Jordan added another USAB record in the 110 meter high hurdles with a 15.17 time; and Perkins added his 41.22 meter record discus toss.

Ruben Wallace, 5th Bn., bettered the record he set in last year's high jump by clearing 2.15 meters.

Other men's open division winners were Kenneth Collins, CSB, with a 6.17 meter long jump, Rick Marciano, FSB, with a 16.48 5,000 meter win and Mark Hollis, CSB, who took the 10,000 meter run with a 36:38 time.

The team of Mose Ingram, William Petron, King and Greg Carr led the 6th Bn. to a new USAB record in the 4x100 meter relay.

The 6th Bn. also captured the 4x400 meter relay with the team of Richard Martin, Patrick Currie, Kerry Hargrove and Ricardo Griffith coming in at 3:34.15.

Richard Armour, 6th Bn., put the shot 13.12 meters to take that event. James Klobucher, CSB, tossed the hammer 29.38 meters to win that event. Adrian Frickenback, also of CSB, managed a 55.27 meter javelin throw to best his closest competitor by nine meters. Jack Cooper's 3.4 meter pole vault win added to the 6th Bn. total.

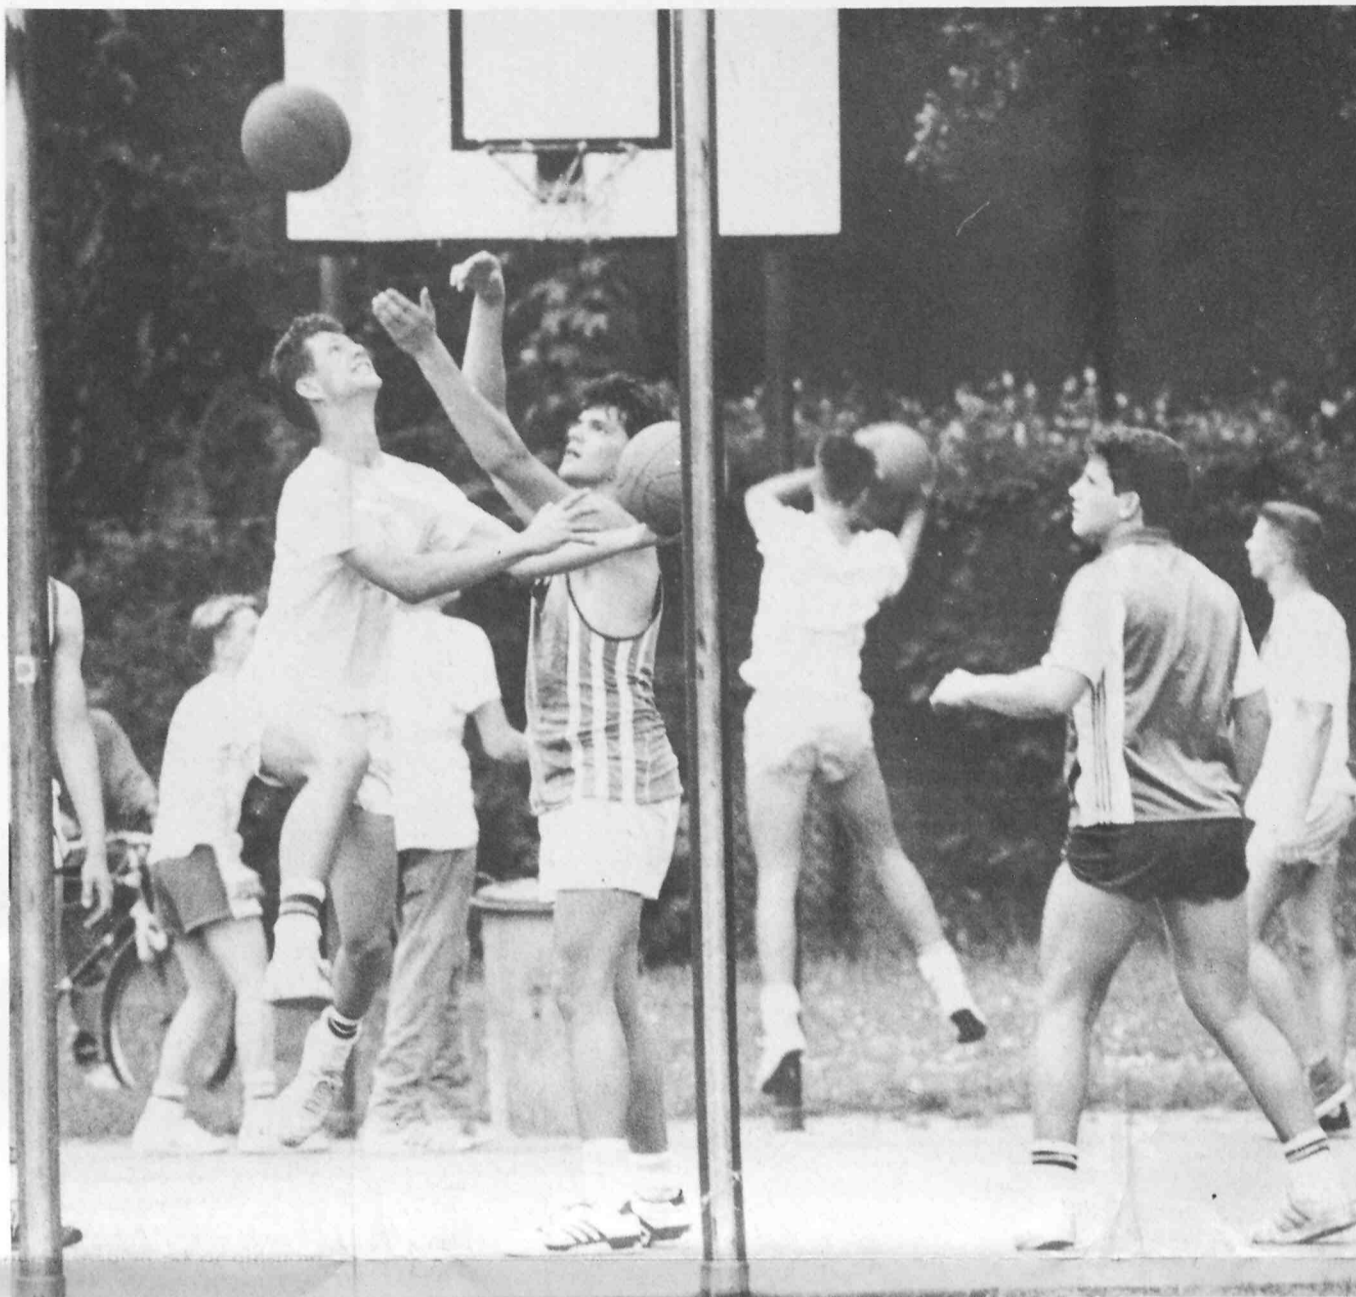

In the men's masters division Peter McBride, 6th Bn., set a USAB record with his 5.36 meter long jump. Bruce Busbea, 6th Bn., won the 800 meter race. John Marcello, CSB commander, won by more than a minute in the 10,000 meter run.

In the women's open division Stacy Michael, FSB, took the 100 meter run with a 13.68 clocking. Onita Baldwin, CSB, set a new Berlin record with her 1:12.40 meter time. Lisa Jamison, MEDDAC, won the 1,500 meter event with a 7:20 finish. Joanne Edwards, CSB, put a new javelin record on the books with a 28 meter toss, and Patricia Blackwell won the discus with a 29.49 throw.

Unchained melody

Where good times outweigh wins and sweat is sweeter than schedules

by Larry Lane
 Sports writer

Most sports are confined to well-defined seasons: football in the fall, hockey in the winter and for the boys of summer, baseball. But one sport can't be confined to a single season no matter what the pros, the command sports schedulers or the calendar might say. Pick-up basketball has a hard core of followers here whose loyalty is matched only by their diversity.

By definition it's an unorganized sport, and that's one of its main attractions, say the players who travel to various courts around the community to shoot a little hoop, then find themselves in unplanned, highly competitive games.

No barriers

The games take on lives of their own and can pit the "magical" players with all the moves, against the average hoopsters whose only goal is a workout. Nor are players confined in any way by age, occupation, or especially rank. Each brings his own reason for hitting the hardwood or asphalt courts, but they all share a desire for a good workout and a love of the game.

"My main reason is to stay physically fit, but I enjoy the sport of basketball," Carlos Byrd said. Byrd is a 21 year old specialist four assigned to Deputy Chief of Staff, Intelligence. His office works on a rotation basis, but he still manages to get to the Cole Sports Center with friends for a few games during his part-lunch, part-PT hour.

Challenging diversity

The challenge is also a key for Byrd.

"I like the competition. you never know who you're going to play against, it's not preplanned. It's whoever shows up. That makes it more interesting," he said.

"Sometimes I play against opponents I see during the company basketball season. It keeps morale up, playing with friends, shooting the breeze and talking old times," Byrd said. Byrd likes to play against taller players to give himself something to overcome, he said.

"I just started back playing regularly. I haven't played for a while. I play for an hour and a half, every lunchtime, five days a week," Rickey Frierson said. Frierson is a staff sergeant also assigned to DCSI.

"It's pretty much the same crowd. Sometimes there are different players. There's a mix of upper half and lower half players," Frierson said. Frierson said teams play games of 15 points, one point for each basket. Players will wait on the side to play the winning team of the previous game or the game will finish and a new game, with new players, will begin. Byrd and Frierson play ball together with other members of their office.

"I do more running in an hour than if I took off from Cole Sports Center and ran for the same time. You're working your whole body. You're using mind and body," said Wayne Bertram, another DCSI staff sergeant. Bertram also played Amateur Athletic Union basketball in Indianapolis.

The Cole Sports Center is perhaps the most popular area for players to pick up a game, with some of the best shooters in Berlin, including players of all ages and from all leagues. The Andrews and McNair Barracks gymnasiums are equally popular, while the Düppel housing area courts area known as a good place for a game in the sun. Several courts at the duck pond offer Americans a chance to meet German youths with the same love for the sport though the rules may be a little different.

Fitness a goal

The game may bring out German youths, but bringing back youth to Americans is more important to some players.

"I jog every morning but basketball has nothing to do with that," Main Exchange Manager Bob Morris said.

"In basketball inside of two minutes you're sucking wind. Guys in shape can play for an hour without breathing hard. Players are serious about their games," Morris added. Morris said he trains at the Cole Sports Center four times a week and plays basketball "when the young men let me."

"I ran into a good game the other day. My friends and I wanted to play a two-on-two game but the court was taken by some younger guys from the company teams. We played them and waxed them," Morris said. Morris said he grew up playing schoolyard ball and still plays with Four Seasons Manager John Buffaloe and occasionally other Main Exchange workers.

Too many Dr. Js

Without referees and completely unorganized, pick-up basketball can get out of hand at times and is not without detractors.

"There're too many individual, Dr. J and Isiah Thomas type of ball players instead of guys playing a five man ball game," Sgt. Marcellus Tory complained. The 6'5" ball player works with DCSI and plays on a local semi-professional German team.

"Even at this level, they need to learn the basics and fundamentals, instead of hotdogging. They need to go to the open man or the easiest shot," he said.

Volksfest

"It's an exciting show. The people are absolutely professional in every sense of the word and we're excited about it. I'm also real excited about the fact we're going to have a Dixieland band this year," Ahrens said.

Joining those groups will be Eb Davis and the Eb Davis Blues Band, featuring its namesake, who is a Berlin soldier. The group has played extensively in West Germany and other parts of Europe. Other groups will include belly dancers, male dancers, the Berlin Brigade Drill Team, as well as the Turkish folk dancers and country, pop and other styles of music.

The annual Volksfest Revue was still under wraps just a week before the opening, though rehearsals have been going on all month.

This year will be the first for a new layout on the German side of the Volksfest. The move was prompted by a desire to cut down on the late-night noise for those who live near the Volksfest.

"It's going to be totally different on the German side this time. Many of people's favorite rides will be there, but we moved the beer tent away from the houses, and because of that the whole German side was reorganized," Ahrens said.

The American side of the fest, designed for the seventh straight year by Danish architect Svend Bjorn, will be highlighted by the entertainment stage and food and concession booths. Admission will be DM 1.50 for those 14 and older, free for those younger than 14. There will also be two raffles. Rides will be half price every Wednesday.

Tempelhof Central Airport's Open House and the French-German Volksfest reported record crowds this year, but Ahrens was unwilling to hazard a guess about attendance. The city fest being held downtown doesn't worry Ahrens because he sees the German-American relations angle as the key to having the fest.

"I don't want to predict how many people will come, but if I get a few thousand happy Berliners and Americans in here, that's all I care about."

Toward that end German-American, as well as inter-allied relations have been built into the fest from the early planning stages. There will be six district nights, one for each of the American sector's districts, during which German couples and about 100 children from each of the districts will be taken to the fest as guests of the command. The first of the nights is in honor of Tempelhof and will be held July 30 (see related story, this page).

There will also be an Allied Friendship Day beginning 7 p.m. Aug. 8. On that day American soliders will host their French and British counterparts. The American sector's senior citizens will be hosted by the command Aug. 13.

These visitors will be treated to new foods this year, always an item of interest during Volksfest season. Ahrens said the biggest news on the culinary front this year will be the introduction of fried shrimp and burritos. Those new items will be joined by a new lineup of pizzas, corn chips with chili, fresh-baked "super cookies" and new ice cream flavors. New drinks include Stroh's "signature" beer, "Fassbrause" at the beer tent, a bourbon drink that can be bought with mug and a Georgia Peach wine cooler.

The entertainment schedule for the fest's first two nights is still tentative, but has been released. Schedules for the rest of the fest will appear in the Observer each Friday until the end of the festival.

The first two days entertainment will include:

City roundup

PAN AM ANNOUNCED IN BERLIN that Pan Am Express, a subsidiary of Pan Am Corporation, will introduce regional flights between Berlin and Dortmund, Friedrichshafen, Basel, Stockholm, Innsbruck, and Zürich in November. The two turbo-prop "ATR-42" aircraft to be used seat 44 passengers and will be based in Berlin. Pan Am still needs approval from the Allied Air Attaches and the governments of Austria, Switzerland, and Sweden. Difficulties are expected approval for some of the destinations which are already served by Tempelhof Airways and Berlin Regional UK. (Tagesspiegel)

THE NUMBER OF AIR PASSENGERS during the first half of 1987 increased to a total of 2,467,566 up 11.8 percent over the same period last year. The biggest increase, 12.3 percent, was on scheduled flights. Tempelhof Airport reported an increase of 107.7 percent to 19,983 passengers. (Tagesspiegel et al)

THE FEEDER HIGHWAY to the Heiligensee/S-tolpe border crossing point in the north of Berlin will be opened for public on Dec. 22. Beginning Jan. 1, all vehicles in transit to Hamburg will have to use that crossing point instead of Staaken. (most papers)

A COMPUTER WORTH DM 50,000 was donated by the Siemens electrical company to an FU scholarship program for young Americans, called "Berlin Program for Advanced German and European Studies." (Morgenpost)

RUTH NIENDORF, one of the Trümmerfrauen ("rubble women" — helping to rebuild Berlin after WW II) who shook hands with President Reagan on his June 12 visit to Berlin, committed suicide after the rent for her apartment was raised, so high she could no longer afford it. Social Affairs Senator Ulf Fink (CDU) said that Niendorf, like many other thousands, was too proud to collect social assistance. (Bildzeitung, Welt)

LAST WEEK SOME 50 POLITICIANS and engineers from Denver had a test ride on Berlin's magnetic transrapid train. The guests, who were thrilled by the train and its low costs, said they would favor buying the Berlin train for the city of Denver. (Bildzeitung)

SOME 3,840 PEOPLE OF GERMAN DESCENT were allowed to emigrate from the Soviet Union and arrived at the Friedland, FRG, receiving camp during the first half of 1987. That is 10 times as many as during the same period last year. New emigrations laws went into effect in the USSR in January. (Tagesspiegel)

BEGINNING AUG. 1, A NEW CABLE TV STATION, "Music Television (MTV) Europe," will be broadcast in Berlin for the time being. Berlin will be the only German city to receive the American 24-hour program via satellite. Commercials will be limited to 50 minutes a day. (most papers)

THIS YEAR'S 25TH GERMAN-FRENCH-VOLKSFEST scored a record number of 535,000 visitors, up 80,000. The event lasted 27 days. (Tagesspiegel)

District Days help give back to community

While Americans and Germans are partying up and down the Volksfest grounds in a feast of entertainment and fun, a quieter effort will be working in their midst.

About 240 senior citizens from Berlin will be escorted around the fest by brigade soldiers, supporting the Volksfest and will receive free food, drinks, and honored guest status.

Each district will have a special "District Day" escorted by their partner battalion. During the day 100 needy children from those districts will be present. In the evenings invited couples will have dinner and see the Volksfest with American couples.

These District Days will be held on the July 30, Aug. 3, 4, 6, 10 and 11.

The Mosaik, a group of handicapped children, will be present Aug. 10 instead of the Schöneberg district. The German-American Women's Club will be their escorts.

5th Battalion, the Sacred Heart Guild and the Protestant Women of the Chapel will be part of the escorting crew for the senior citizens Aug. 13.

"This is something we appreciate very much, because it increases the relations between German and Americans," Frank Siebold, Community Relations.

The groups will get Army transportation to the fest in the buses of the brigade's Transportation Department. Private organizations who want to invite other groups are asked to contact Community Relations for any further arrangements, BM 6831 or BM 6842.

Tickets and other costs are paid out of Volksfest profits to give something back to the community, according to officials.
