Dining facilities to prepare holiday feast

Randy Dykstra
ARNEWS

In keeping with the tradition of Thanksgiving Day, Army dining facilities will prepare more than 88 tons of turkey with all the fixings for soldiers and their family members.

Dietitians and home economists at the U.S. Army Troop Support Agency have released the 1988 Holiday Master Menu which is used by all dining halls.

The Thanksgiving Day banquet is the largest meal served in more than 1,000 Army dining facilities worldwide, and is quite a feast.

In addition to the 177,461 pounds of turkey, the banquet will include 22,182 pounds of shrimp for shrimp cocktail, 48,668 pounds of cranberry sauce and 18,885 pumpkin pies. Mincemeat pies are on the menu, as well as 11,091 pounds of fruitcake, 13,309 pounds of mixed nuts, 70,984 pounds of assorted fresh fruit and 17,746 pounds of assorted candies.

As has been the case in the past, most diners are exempt from paying extra for their meals.

Because sharing holiday meals with family members is viewed as a cornerstone of building unit morale and esprit de corps, enlisted personnel, family members of active-duty personnel and dining facility employees will not be required to pay the surcharge. Costs for the meal per category are as follows:

- Enlisted personnel with meal cards
- Enlisted personnel receiving basic allowance for subsistence $2.25
- Officers not on duty $5.40
- Officers on official duty $2.25
- Family members under 12 $1.10
- Family members 12 and older $2.25
- Non-family members guests under 12 $2.65

■ Non-family members guests 12 and older $5.40

■ Retired military personnel $5.40

■ Retired military family members and guests under 12 $2.65

■ Retired military family members and guests 12 and older $5.40

Last year, 221,826 soldiers, their families and guests enjoyed the Army's Thanksgiving dinner, while 86,775 people consumed the yuletide meal.

The menus are planned about two years in advance and distributed to dining halls about six months before the holidays so the specialty foods can be ordered.

Observer publication dates change for holidays

Ron Gardiner
Editor

Halloween is over and it's time to start some serious holiday planning.

Letters to Santa Claus have to be written, Christmas shopping lists need to be made. Better get to the PX quick before everything sells out. Don't forget about those catalog orders either. It takes time for little Suzy's bike and Johnny's train set to get here from the states. What about Uncle Jake and Aunt Martha; mustn't forget them either.

Planning, planning, planning. Getting organized is a tough job, but somebody's got to do it.

At the Observer, we've been doing a little planning too, trying to get things set up and scheduled for the upcoming holiday season.

The first thing you'll need to know is we're changing a couple of publication dates. Even though Veterans' Day is an American holiday, we're going to publish Nov. 11. There will be no Observer in your mailbox (Yes, I know some of you don't get home delivery) or favorite pick-up point Nov. 18, but there will be Nov. 23 (the day before Thanksgiving).

Things go back to normal (as normal as things get around here) the first two weeks of December. But lookout, here comes a big one. There will be no Observer Dec. 16, rather we will publish the following Wednesday. That will be our last issue of the year. We will resume our regular Friday schedule Jan. 6.

I'll bet by now you're wondering, "why is he telling me this?" Well, if you are one of those people or are in one of those groups that like to have things published, and want them published prior to the event, you have to plan also. Yes, plan to have your notice or announcement to the Observer well before the event.

People who want to have a want ad appear, again, have to plan to have it in before the PCS, basement or yard sale.

Deadlines for submission, by the way, will remain the same; close of business on the fourth duty day before publication.

Nobody hates to plan more than I do, but it's a necessary evil in order to get things done.

With the rain forests shrinking
And the ozone dead
Ya better get it through your head
We can't keep using everything in sight
Save resources and energy with all your might
Please listen, people, don't ya understand?
We have to protect our skies and land
Roger Rabbit, Bambi and Rocky Raccoon
Aren't the only ones that'll be gone soon
We need air, water and trees
To save for tomorrow our energy

Kristallnacht horror swept Jewish public

Tom Blake
Correspondent

When an English correspondent questioned Joseph Goebbels about the wave of violence that swept through Germany Nov. 9—19, 1938 he was told "... it is basically none of England's business how we in Germany solve our Jewish problem."

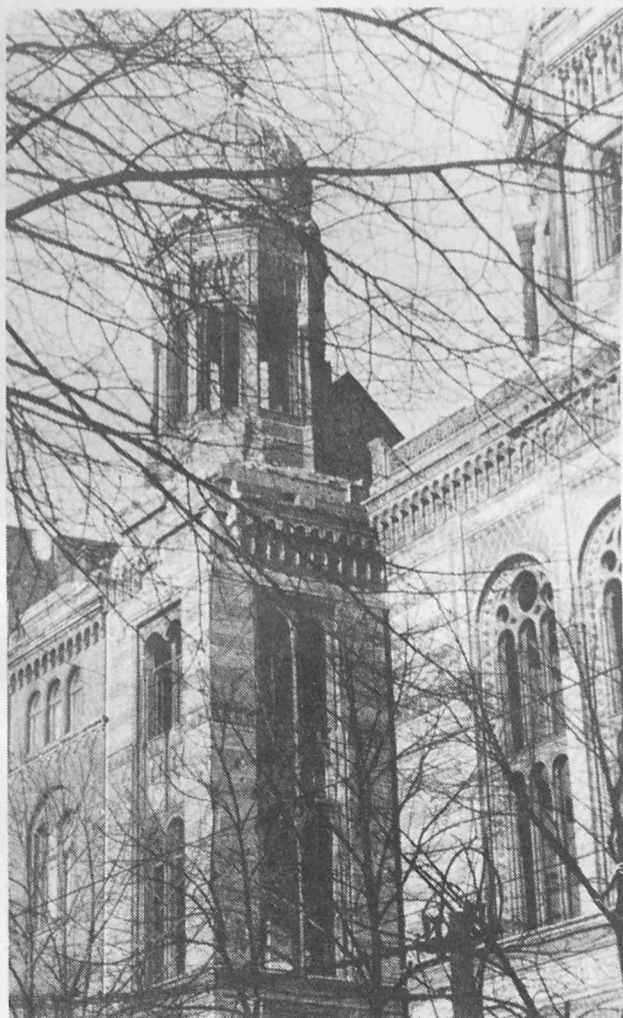

Next week ceremonies and exhibitions by individuals, churches and government officials in both East and West Germany will take place to confront the bitter memory of what has gone down in history as the so-called "Reichskristallnacht." That night nearly 200 synagogues were burned and countless shops were destroyed in a series of officially sanctioned riots, and between 20,000 and 30,000 Jewish Germans were arrested in the following two days.

The "kristall" from which the night originally took its name referred to the glass broken out of the shop windows of Jewish merchants all over the former German Reich. It was not only glass and property that was shattered by Nazi Storm Troopers that night fifty years ago, the infrastructure of an entire nation was destroyed.

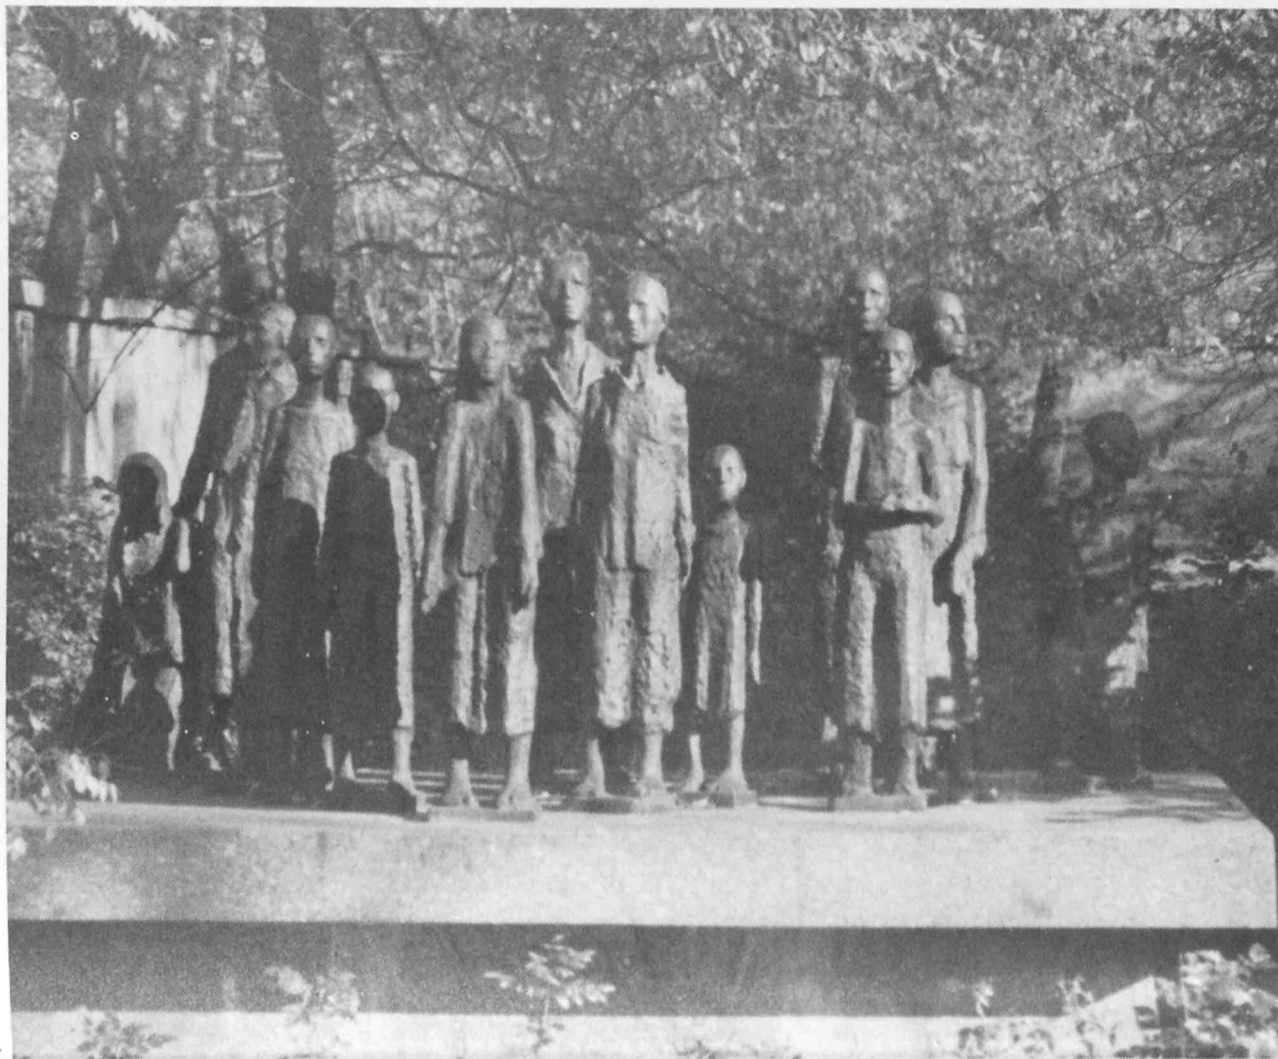

Once the fires were extinguished and the streets cleared of debris, a new light was shed upon the way that Propaganda Minister Goebbels intended to deal with the "Jewish problem."

'The Jewish problem'

Goebbels was merely implementing the plan that Adolf Hitler had laid out in August 1920 when the "Führer" wrote his feelings about Jews and other "foreigners" in the Nazi party political platform. The 25 points upon which National Socialism was based excluded all persons not of racially pure Germanic blood from holding citizenship or residing in the Greater German Reich. Point No. 4 stated: "... No Jew can be a German citizen."

Berlin's Oranienburger Strasse synagogue bears mute testimony both to the Reichskristallnacht and the ravages of the war.

The memorial at Gross-Hamburger-Strasse marks one of the assembly points for Jews destined for concentration camps.

In 1935 Hitler's early campaign promises became the Nürnberg Laws which deprived Jews of the right to own property, possess passports or transfer funds outside the Reich without permission from the Gestapo's department IV-b. These measures were designed to ensure the orderly departure of all Jews in preparation for the "new order" in a purely Aryan Germany. While Jews were the prime targets of Nazi bigotry, they were not the only group singled out for deportation.

Point No. 8 of the party platform further stated that "... All non-Germans who arrived in the fatherland after August 1914, were to be deported at the earliest opportunity." Political considerations kept the Nazis from immediate implementation of that policy when Hitler became chancellor in 1933, but five years later the Polish government provided an excuse to begin the deportation.

Although thousands of Poles resided in Germany as "guest workers," most retained their Polish citizenship. In October 1938, Polish officials decided to cancel passports held by Poles who had been outside their homeland for a specified length of time. Polish workers in Germany were faced with returning home or making other arrangements for passports. The German response was to round up these potentially stateless foreigners and ship them back to the Polish border. There, trainloads of human cargo were forced to wait for more than a month awaiting clarification of their status.

A desperate act

Among the families pulled from their homes were the Grynszpan's from Hannover. Their younger son, Herschl, a student in Paris, was meanwhile experiencing similar problems concerning his residence permit with French authorities. When the student was suddenly unable to contact his parents, he called the German Embassy to inquire about its family, but was turned away without a satisfactory answer. Shortly afterwards

Herschl was given the news that led him to believe that his parents and sister had been sent to a concentration camp. Feeling helpless and desperate Herschl decided to make a move that would focus attention on his plight and that of the Polish deportees.

Inciting to riot

On Nov. 7, 1938 Herschl shot and killed German consular official, Ernst vom Rath, and made a rambling statement to French police regarding his motives. News of the assassination reached Munich during the annual Nazi party convention and Grynszpan's Polish nationality was somehow subjugated to the fact that he was a Jew.

Goebbels used the opportunity to stir up the crowds of storm troopers who crowded the Bavarian beer halls. Shortly after midnight Nov. 10, when anti-Semitic feelings were at their peak, Goebbels dispatched a telex to Nazi organizations and police stations throughout the Reich. It stated, "Actions directed against Jews, especially destruction of synagogues are expected soon." Local authorities were not to intervene unless rioting got out of hand or threatened Aryan property.

Millions of marks worth of damage was done to Jewish property. On top of this, the Jewish communities in Germany were slapped with a billion mark fine for "inciting to riot." German insurance companies were forced to pay off, but proceeds were confiscated to aid in the four-year plan for German rearmament.

The shameless mob action spread a blanket of fear over an entire nation and set the stage for the destruction of more than six million lives. Those lives were snuffed out in an orderly yet gruesome manner. No one was able to stop the Nazi machine after the initial demonstration of brutality on the "Reichskristallnacht."

This years' observances are designed both to act as a reminder of mankind's past transgressions and to serve as a warning to future generations.

Combining the all

by Erik Faye and Rami Harcszark
CI specialist · Staff photographer

Combat Support Battalion returned this week from the Bergen and Münster training areas where it took part in a large-scale, combined arms, live-fire exercise—known as a CALFEX.

During this exercise, CSB worked with a variety of units while fulfilling its multifaceted mission.

These additional units included British and French forces from Berlin, and a squadron of Air Force A-10 Thunderbolt II jets which used their 30mm high-explosive incendiary round capability to support the numerous fire missions during the two-day exercise.

CSB Commander Lt. Col. John Marcello said, "There were a lot of firsts. It was the first time we used close air support; but much more significantly, it was the first time we have had an operation involving the British, French and Americans exercising maneuver and indirect fire with the combined resources of the same (forces)."

He said that this exercise, his fourth of this type while commanding CSB, strongly focused on allied coordination, which is something out of the ordinary for the unit during a CALFEX.

"We overcame all the barriers of language, equipment incompatibility and tactical differences. All those melted away when the people put their heads together and decided there was a mission to accomplish.

"We can mass the fires of the forces of Berlin, and can act as a combined force. We do it real well. That's what was unique (about the exercise)," he said.

Marcello added that there were basically three objectives during this training exercise.

"Number one was to exercise and practice CSB's wartime mission and do it as a combined arms team; the second was to mass accurately the combined fires (mortars and artillery) of the British, the Americans and the French; and the third, to exercise an allied maneuver force acting as an allied reserve.

"The CALFEX is kind of a crucible for the fire support officer. It's more than an ARTEP (for him). It's when he really has to do his job. He can't just wish it away with words. He has to physically do the actual coordination involved."

First Lieutenant Paul Guelle, from CSB's Battery E, 320th Field Artillery, fire support and project officer for the 4th Battalion during the exercise, said the training was "ambitious" when describing the realism and true-to-life accuracy.

The primary difference between this exercise and others was that no actual safety officers mediated at any time. Soldiers used their own common sense to prevent accidents.

Guelle said, "None of the exercise was canned. The company commanders had total control. The safety officer for each weapon was the guy with his finger on the trigger, because that's the way we do it in the war."

Marcello added, "We had ordnance ranging from 5.56 (millimeter rifle fire) through M60 machine gun fire, .50 caliber machine guns, 30mm machine guns, 105mm mortars, TOWs, Dragons, attack helicopters, main battle tanks, 81mm mortars, 'four-deuce' mortars, 120mm mortars, 155mm artillery—and it was all done safely.

"The soldiers know what the heck they're doing. That's what it's all about," Marcello said.

by Dale Baum
YA sports director

Youth Activities junior Berlin Bears shut out Heidelberg 40-0 here Saturday. The junior Bears finished their regular season with a 5-0 record, and head into the semi-finals here Nov. 13 against Sembach.

The Bears dominated Heidelberg from the start, scoring twice in the first quarter.

Quarterback Sascha Richardson started the scoring parade for Berlin with a 16-yard run. Bruce Sora ran in the conversion, and the Bears were out to an 8-0 lead.

Shawn Ferguson ran back an interception 44 yards for the second score of the quarter. Sora once again ran in the conversion, making the score 16-0.

The Bears struck again in the second quarter. This time, Sora rushed in for the TD from two yards out. Richardson passed to T.J. Roberts for the conversion, and the Bears were up 24-0 at the half.

The second half proved to be similar to the first, with Berlin continuing to run the ball offensively. The Bears defense repeatedly thwarted Heidelberg offensive drives.

Berlin scored twice in the third quarter: a 22-yard run by Tom Piotrovski, and an 80-yard run by Ferguson. After Ferguson's score, Richardson hit Roberts with a pass for the conversion.

The score was 38-0 at the end of the third quarter.

Yanks rugby team downs Athens 28-10 during Greek team's annual sports tour

by Dave Hickman
Correspondant

The Berlin Yanks Rugby Club defeated an Athens, Greece, team 28-10 with four second-half tries Sunday.

The Athens Spartans annual rugby tour, this year in Berlin, was hosted by the Yanks.

The Yanks started sluggishly, needing defense efforts from Tim McNutt and Gene Webb to keep the Spartans out of the try zone. Frank McGee was able to break loose to score for the Yanks midway through the first half. It was answered quickly by an Athens run around the Yanks' scrum.

Penalties and poor play by the Yanks kept the ball in its end of the field until halftime was called with the score tied at 6-6.

The second half started much the same when a run by McNutt and conversion by Peter Walters was followed by an Athens try. Athens missed the conversion which left the score at 12-10 in the Yanks favor.

Defensive play on the Yanks' tryline from McNutt, McGee and Joe Carter kept the Spartans from evening the score. Walters followed with a punt from the Yanks' tryline which took the ball to the Spartans' 20-yard line.

The Yanks' scrum pushed the ball over from five yards out after Dave Ross won a critical hook. That score was quickly followed by a try from Dave Martin.

Walters added the conversion and the Yanks continued to roll. They shut down the Athens offense, and Webb got the ball to Carter who ran it in from 40 yards out.

The match ended at 28-10, with the Yanks hitting four of five conversions, three from the touchlines, with Walters as the leading scorer.

Bears claw last minute victory over Fulda

by Chris Allbright
Staff writer

Hilton Huff's 85-yard kick-off return in the final two minutes of the game lifted the Berlin American High School Bears over the Fulda Falcons 32-24.

The win ties Berlin with Fulda for first place in the Germany A-Central Division. Berlin has a 4-1-1 overall record, and a 2-1 conference record. Previously unbeaten Fulda has a 5-1 overall record and a 2-1 conference record.

Berlin opened with an aerial attack against the Falcons. Quarterback Rich Edmond hit Willie Robinson with a 38-yard pass for Berlin's first score early in the first quarter. Chris Alford rushed for the conversion, making the score 8-0.

Passing under pressure.

Berlin's defense controlled the Falcons. Jon Fleckenstein brought down Falcon's QB Jay Harris for a 6-yard loss on Fulda's first possession. The next play, Eldred Ramtahal picked off a pass and brought the ball inside Fulda's 20-yard line.

Alford rushed to the 5-yard line with the help of a Huff block. Alford and Edmond each tried to get the ball into the end zone, but were stopped both times. Fulda recovered a Berlin fumble, and the Falcons had the ball again.

Fulda fought back with a score on a Rhad Miles 3-yard run. Miles also picked up the conversion to tie the score at 8-8.

Joe Hammond picked up a Miles fumble to set up the next Berlin score. Green rushed to the 10-yard line from the 25. Alford drove in from the 3-yard line two plays later for the TD. Ramtahal caught a conversion attempt pass to make the score 16-8.

Hammond picked up his second fumble recovery on the Fulda kickoff, but Berlin was unable to hold onto the ball for long. Fulda's Leon Winfrey recovered a Berlin fumble. Six plays later, Winfrey scored on a 4-yard run. The conversion attempt was stopped. The score was 16-14 at halftime.

The second half started with the Falcons fumbling on the kickoff. Green recovered for Berlin.

Fulda's defense tightened up, and Berlin was forced to give the ball back to the Falcons after the Bears failed to convert on a first down.

Fulda's Eric Thomas caught a Winfrey pass and ran 40 yards for a touchdown. Miles rushed for the conversion, giving Fulda the lead, 22-16.

Alford went out of the game for a few plays after being shaken up in the third quarter, but returned to get the ball to the 1-yard line. On the next play Green rushed in for the TD. Alford then picked up the conversion to make the score 24-22.

On the next Berlin possession, an Edmond pass landed in the hands of Fulda's Ron Malon. The Bear defense made the Falcons pay for the interception, though, by preventing them from getting into Bear territory. On a fourth-and-five situation, Berlin blitzed, and QB Harris was buried under three Bear linebackers. Fulda gave the ball back to the Bears.

After two plays with Huff as QB, Edmond returned and threw a pass into the hands of Fulda's David Lewallen, but Berlin's Fleckenstein and others kept the pressure on Fulda. Fleckenstein caught Miles in the backfield, and forced Fulda to punt on a fourth-and-sixteen situation.

With 6:15 left in the game, Berlin began a rushing game. Green ran twice for short yardage. Edmond ran for a first down on a quarterback keeper at midfield. On the next play, Alford was running up the Fulda sideline when he was knocked into the visitors' stands. He lay crumpled in the stands for three minutes before being helped back to the Berlin sideline by Assistant Coach Mike Ellis and several Berlin players.

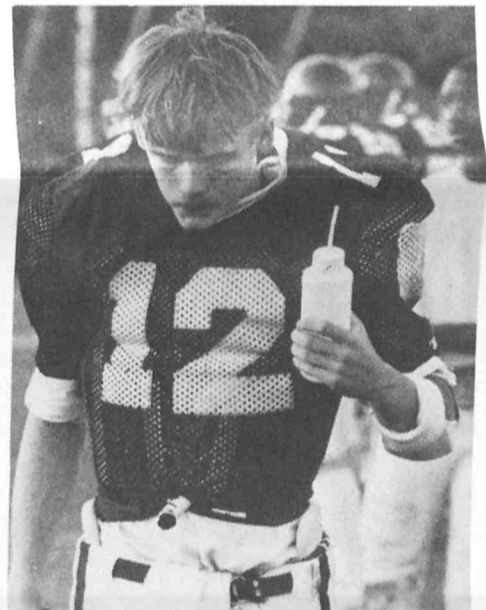

Then, Edmond threw his second interception giving the ball back to the Falcons.

Harris hit Winfrey with a 54-yard pass giving Fulda a 28-24 lead. Berlin shut down the conversion attempt.

With 1:30 left, Huff told teammates to give him the ball. He dropped back to the 15-yard line to catch the kickoff. The return team provided Huff with excellent blocking led by Raphael Clark. The 125-pound senior flew down the Berlin sideline amid cheers and pandemonium from the home crowd. When he scored players rushed on the field to congratulate him. The coaches were throwing up their arms and hugging players.

After getting his pads back on, Alford walked back on the field to make the conversion attempt. He was successful, finishing off Fulda 32-28.

"We blew it. We know better than kick the ball deep," Fulda Coach Marcus George said after the game.

"This is probably the best victory and the biggest game of my life," Berlin Head Coach George Pepoy said.

Edmond hit 10 for 19 passes for 203 yards. Rival QB Harris went 4 for 11 for 117 yards and was intercepted twice.

Alford led Berlin in rushing with 21 carries for 110 yards. Green had eight carries for 24 yards. Leading Fulda rushing was Miles with 111 yards.

Clark led Berlin's defense with four tackles and five assists, followed by Green with three tackles and six assists. Hammond had two tackles, four assists and two fumble recoveries. Eric Reed registered the sole QB sack.

Although Berlin won, they had more fumbles and interceptions during the game they've had in all others combined, according to Pepoy.

Berlin travels to Baumholder for Saturday's matchup which is the last game of the regular season. Playoffs begin Nov. 12.

Program aids exceptional family members

by Chris Allbright
Staff writer

Children with exceptional needs are cared for in a special way by the Exceptional Family Member Clinic at the U.S. Hospital, Berlin.

The clinic takes over when a child's needs can't be met in a pediatric walk-in setting. Five specialists work about 400 cases a month to try to get to the root of problems.

Bed wetting, delayed speech and physical disabilities are some of the problems the specialists try to help children cope with or solve.

Currently, the fourth-floor clinic has a speech therapist, an occupational therapist, a physical therapist, a social worker and a child psychologist. A developmental pediatrician is expected to be added to the staff in February.

"Our job would be to minimize problems so a child can function in the school environment," acting clinic director Dr. Richard Rubes said.

The specialists work closely together, Rubes said, because a problem such as bed wetting may have psychological and physical origins. Other problems may have roots in a lack of motor development or hyperactivity. The specialists work to find what is contributing to the problem so strategies can be planned to solve it. Family counseling is sometimes used to get as much support for the child as possible.

The specialists also work with Thomas A. Roberts Elementary School children periodically to assess the possible needs of pupils in the educational environment.

For instance, the specialists may be able to help a student with a behavioral problem to acquire the social skills needed for a classroom situation.

Children can be referred to the clinic by the school, or parents can call if they suspect a problem.

Chris Allbright

A child therapy group meets in the clinic.

If a child needs special treatment or facilities, information from EFMC records can be used identify resources available at another duty station. Whether in Berlin or beyond, the clinic's goal is to help the child reach the maximum potential using the strengths the child possesses.

Fantasy fashions to headline at community center

Eve Krüger

Cultural events editor

The latest from Berlin's fashion world can be seen 7—10 p.m. Nov. 12 at the All American Community Center, McNair Barracks.

"The idea is that we want to give the military community the opportunity to see what is available on the economy in the line of fashion," Organizer Ivonne Murray said.

She approached various German stores for the project and found a positive response. The presentation will cover women's fashion, men's and children's wear, and includes party dresses and suits, designer fashions, furs, sports wear and shoes.

The team, the choreographer, the hairstylist, all the models and the master of ceremony are members of the American community.

The evening's theme is "Fashion Fantasies" and will feature a combination of show elements, fashion and music.

The program will begin with seven models appearing on stage: a housewife, a teenager, a business woman, a soldier and others said Murray. A voice will ask them "Do you want to know what you can be," and they will be transformed into their wishes she added.

This is the first time a presentation like this has been done and we want the audience to become involved, Murray said. All stores participating will have display tables at the fashion site. Admission is $6. For more information call BM 9125.

The numismatic field covers a period of 3,000 years and includes antique Roman and Greek coins.

This year, the organizers will exhibit a display of the history of gold embossing in Hungary from its beginning in 1325 to modern times. In former centuries, 80 percent of the European gold came from Hungary.

Wild, wild west

An afternoon of down-home fun for 6th Bn. soldiers, Zehlendorfers in old Texas atmosphere

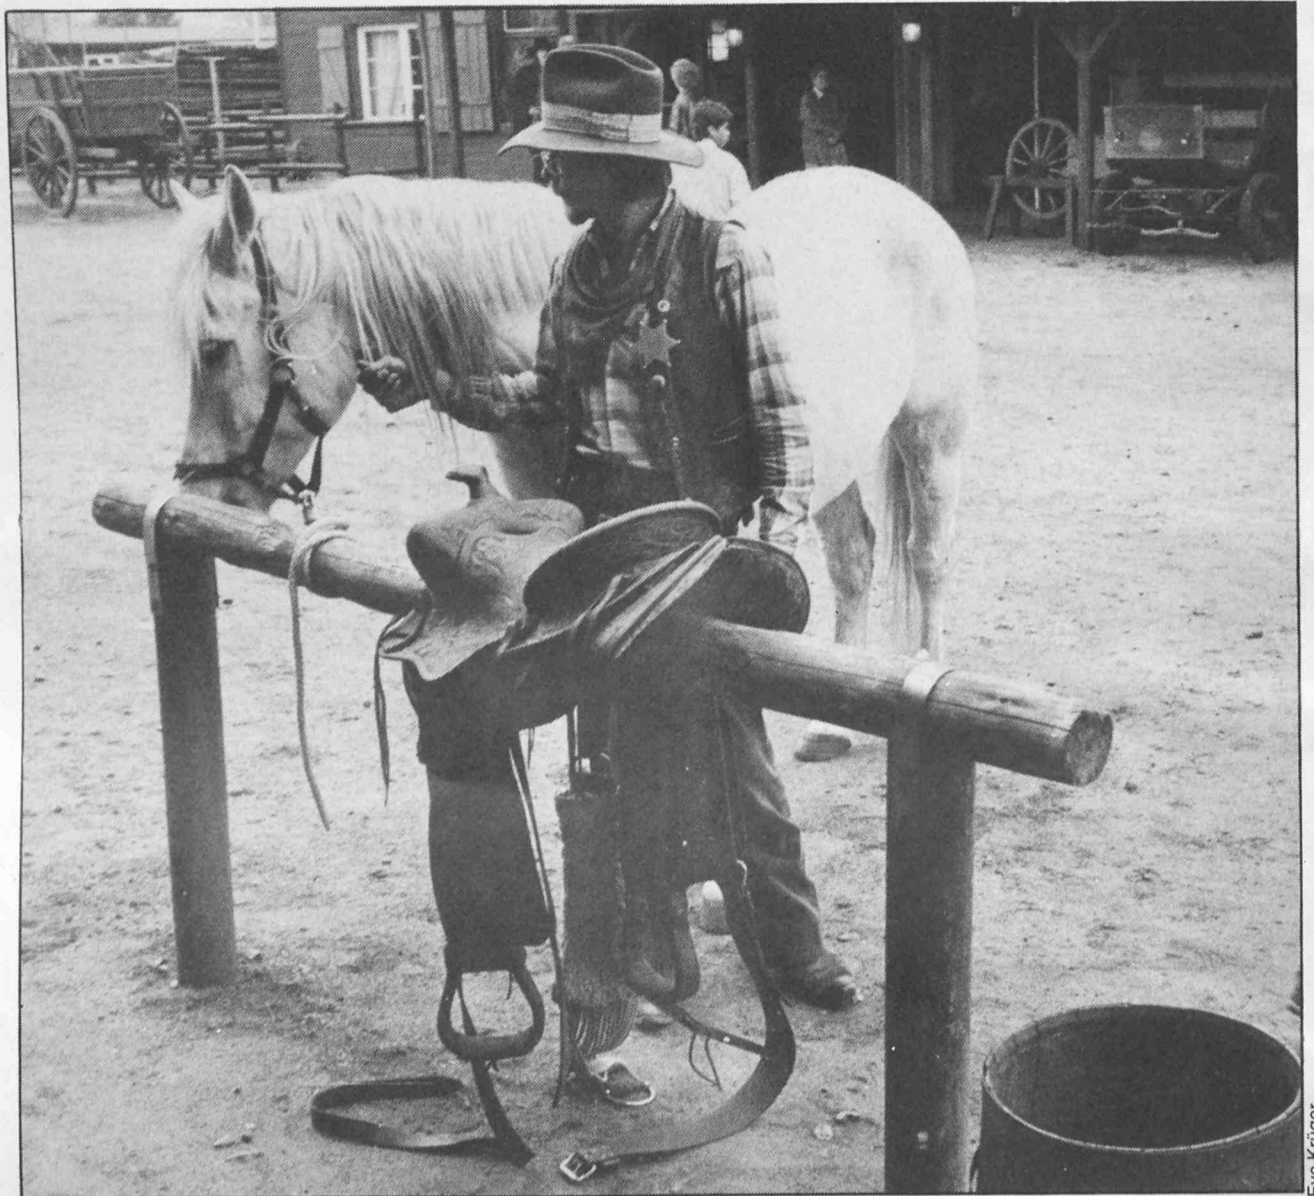

Tom Blake
Correspondent

Cowboy boots, Stetsons, jeans and bandanas were the uniform of the day Saturday when some 6th Battalion soldiers took a group from their partner district of Zehlendorf to the Old Texas Town Cowboy Club in Siemensstadt for an afternoon of old west fun.

The group left Zehlendorf at noon and traveled to Old Texas Town where they were met by Club President Sheriff "Ben Destry," whose real name is Fritz Walter.

The sheriff led the group on a tour of the reconstructed frontier town before they found their way to Mary's Saloon for a family-style picnic. They also got a chance to know one another after lunch when a healthy dose of American folklore, quick draw and lariat practice were the main events before the Dancing Bears, a German-American square dance club, took over the stage. American Sheldon Eisenhower, called dance steps for the group, and soon practically everyone was alemaning and do-si-do-ing under the watchful eyes of the buffalo head which adorns the wall behind the back bar.

The combination of down-home U.S.A. and "gemütlichkeit" was enhanced by several 6th Bn. soldiers whose linguistic skills aided communication between the Zehlendorfers and the soldiers.
